> One-third of their fighting population, one-quarter of their whole efficient male population, destroyed in one year of war—no nation has ever yet suffered such punishment; and there is to-day in Germany grief and misery and the counting of the cost of it discernible beneath the heavy hand of the military machine. I think, by this time next year, if the war continues, that number should be more than doubled. More than half the manhood of Germany will be destroyed. And before the three years' limit which Lord Kitchener has given (according to Lord Esher's statment) be attained there should not be much left that could offer serious resistance between the Vistula and the Rhine.

This is no mere speculation of some imaginative war correspondent, but the considered, deliberate, conclusion of a competent authority. There is much to encourage us in continuing to combat the terrible military depotism that has wrought and will have wrought the ruin pictured.

There is also encouragement in the steadily growing strength in fighting resourcefulness of the Entente Allies on land. Conjoin to these growing forces on land the relentless and paralysing grip of Britain's sea power, which has not only kept the German navy powerless, but has permitted the free operation of the navies of the other nations of the Quadruple Entente. Germany's commerce has been practically swept from the seas, and whatever she gets of food supplies, from outside, has to be smuggled in—a very precarious and inadequate source of supply. In finance, the power of the Entente Allies is strongly superior. Germany is fighting on fiat money, while the former handle gold or its equivalent, and the resources in this respect are infinitely more capable of standing the test of prolonged strain.

In this regard Canada will soon have an opportunity of shewing what she can do; what she is willing to do. In a few days Canada's domestic war loan of 50 millions, or 60 millions, will be issued; and that it will be fully, if not over-subscribed, is pretty certain. Trade conditions in Canada in spite of the racking strain of the war, have not been adversely affected to the extent many of the warring countries have been hit. Though fifty million dollars may seem, and is a large sum, yet it is a trifle compared with the financial resources of the country. It is only equivalent to one-eighth of the cash value of one season's crop. This year our total grain crop is estimated at a thousand million bushels. If this be considered in terms of money at even an average of a quarter of a dollar per bushel, it will represent the enormous sum of 250 million dollars; and supposing that only half of the total crop is available for conversion into cash, the result would be double the maximum figures of the proposd loan.

The talking quality of money is proverbially asserted; and here is a chance for Canada to speak through her attitude to the war loan. The rate of interest is not yet announced, but it will rather certainly be of a figure to make the national loan a "gilt-edge investment," both in the matter of earning capacity, and in the undoubted quality of the security — the reality of half a continent, of one of the most potentially productive areas, taken as a whole, in the whole world. This will not be an investment for the plutocrat only, the bonds issued under the loan will be in denominations that will permit the worker and wage-earner, as well as the capitalist to have a share. There should be a hearty response to the loan. If British capitalists have had confidence in Canada to the extent of Canadian investments to the amount of 1,500 millions, certainly Canadians themselves should not hesitate to have confidence in themselves and their country. We have responded nobly in men, and must do our share in supplying munitions—the most efficient being the silver bullet. We shall thus be rounding out our contribution to the growing resources of the Entente Allies, and thus, as in other ways emphasize the weakening resources of the enemy; and shall be adding substantially to the victory that is surely coming.

ALL SAINTS' CHOIR.

All Saints' Choir will practice tonight. Advent and Christmas music will be taken up, and a full attendance is requested. Eight o'clock sharp.

MUST HAVE PERMITS.

In the British Commons the Home Secretary has announced the Government's decision that during the continuance of the war British subjects of military age who have occasion or desire to leave the Kingdom must provide themselves with a special permit, which will not be given without good cause.

EQUAL RIGHTS.

The simplified spellers are going to issue a dictionary. Why not do away with such things? If words are to be spelled as they sound why has not one man as good a right to spell a word as it sounds to him as others have to spell it the way it sounds to them?—Toronto Star.

WOULD BE WORSE.

If the United States had a war on its hands half as big as the one which is placing so great a strain upon England, we are perfectly certain that our press would outstrip anything that the English newspapers have done, while the wrangles in Congress would make the debates in Parliament seem tame by comparison.—New York Post.

BRITAIN'S BIG LOANS.

Chancellor of the Exchequer McKenna states that the total amount of loans made or promised to other countries since he war began is £45,000,000 ($220 million). The estimated total amount of loans to be made during the current financial year is £[illegible] ($[illegible] million).

MILITANT CHRISTIANITY.

"Not as a chaplain, not as a non-combatant, but as a fighting man"—hat is the way that Major the Rev. C. Tolmie, M.L.A., publicly declared his intention to go to the front. The reverend major has applied for a commission in one of the overseas battalions and of course will get it. For months he had been publicly urging others to go; now he concludes to drop precept and try the force of example. —Hamilton Herald.

THERE'S NO NEED FOR ENFORCED MILITARY SERVICE IN CANADA

We have been asked by a subscriber to impress upon the minds of its readers that Canada is willing to support the motherland without being forced to do so, and that there is therefore no occasion for conscription. The best way to prove that conscription is not needed is to publish from day to day, as The Globe and other papers are doing, the record of voluntary enlistment. In Toronto alone on Monday 345 men offered themselves for overseas service, of whom 284 were chosen. The standard required is still very high, and the recruits, speaking generally, are both physically and mentally far above the average of those who could be secured under conscription. At a time when Germany is sending deaf mutes into the firing line the Canadian people are voluntarily giving of their best to the great cause of world freedom. Why then should anyone talk of conscription?

There are some units of the country that have not supplied as many men as the Militia Department expected, but from other districts the surplus has been so large as to make up for the lack elsewhere. More and more the great cause for which Canada is at war appeals to the patriotism and humanitarian instincts of the generous youth of the Dominion. It is undeniably true that love of adventure and lack of work were the principal reasons for the very large response to the first call for recruts over a year ago. These causes are no longer operative to the same extent. War has been stripped of its glamour, and stands revealed as a horrible and loathsome thing, to be endured but no longer to be glorified. Industrial conditions in the Dominion have so greatly improved during the past year that relatively few employed men are now offering themselves. The bulk of the recruits are leaving good occupations, putting aside promising careers and the comforts of home life, to face danger and privation because they feel that duty calls them. Why, unless dire necessity requires, should the shirker and the slacker be added to Canada's great army of heroic volunteers? The injury to the morale of the force would not be offset by the increase in its numbers.

Even were conscription to be resorted to it is extremely doubtful whether the effective strength of Canada's army at the front could be increased much more rapidly than under the voluntary system. "General Hughes states that men are offering as fast as they can be equipped and trained. That the full quarter-million required before spring will be obtained without straining the voluntary system is beyond doubt, so that any discussion of conscription at the present time must be more or less of an academic nature.

Were the supply of volunteers to fall, and the need for their services to continue and increase, were Germany to display unexpected staying power the Government and people of Canada would face the issue of compulsion as calmly as do the people of the United Kingdom to-day. The law has long provided for compulsory service should the need arise, and notwithstanding Col. Lavergne's fine-spun theories of the relation of colonies to their motherland, the defence of Canada may be far more successfully undertaken on the plains of Flanders than on the banks of the St. Lawrence. In the last resort the entire manhood of the Dominion, trained or untrained, between the ages of eighteen and sixty, may be embodied either en masse or in successive classes for purposes of defence, beginning with unmarried men and widowers (without children) between the ages of eighteen and thirty. For the draft of the ballot Canada has no present necessity. The supply of volunteers is ample, and increases with increasing needs. Let us reach the goal without having to destroy compulsion by compulsion, but rather in the assurance that the great war machine created by the enslavement of whole nations to militarism will be broken largely by the aid of the freemen of Britain and her daughter States, of men who struggle for an ideal, and amid the smoke and carnage of the bloodiest war in history fight for a thousand years of peace. —The Globe.

DECREASE OF CRIME.

During the past year the number of males convicted of crime in Great Britain and Ireland showed a decrease of 24,983. The chief causes given by the Prison Commissioners are the enlistment of many petty offenders, restricted hours for liquor selling, and a great demand for labour. Drink and poverty are the two greatest causes of crime. Lessen or remove them and crime is lessened almost in the same ratio.—Globe.

IRELAND'S LOYALTY.

According to Mr. Maurice F. Healy, there are 275,000 Irishmen serving in the British army and navy. The population of Ireland, as shown by the census of 1911, is 4,360,219, so that one out of every sixteen of the population is now under arms. The male and female population of Ireland is about evenly divided, and taking the usual estimate for men available for military service, and allowing for married men, Ireland appears to have contributed almost to the limit of her capability, without drawing too heavily upon the heads of families. This is a magnificent record, and one which disposes at once of the alleged disloyalty of the country.— Saskatoon Phoenix.

THE MECHANICAL DETECTIVE OF SUBMARINES

The human detective is liable to blunder because he depends greatly upon his judgment. If his judgments are bad or not well founded, decision will be correspondingly at fault

A machine has not judgment, though some present day machines do seem almost able to think. They act or operate only when certain facts or conditions are absolutely established. For instance: a talking machine will not talk until his needle is accurately and exactly placed in the groove of its record; nor will a telephone transmit speech until the electric circuit is properly made. To that extent a mechanical device is far superior to the human being. That quality of a machine has been put to service by the ablest scientists of England in quickly and completely crushing the German submarine. They have devised a wonderful mechanical detective based on the general principles of the telephone. It comprises, broadly speaking, a microphone enclosed in a cylindrical steel casing about twelve inches long and attached to a rod about twelve feet below the surface of the water. The rod is rotatable and is extended up through the floor of a guard house and provided with a handle. A special microphonic-telephone receiver completes the detector, the microphone by electric circuit with the receiver, and the receiver being provided with a suitable head harness so that it may be worn continually by a guard or operator.

Now, every boat in passing through the water causes or makes certain noises or sound waves. These have all been classified, the noises of a trans-Atlantic liner, for instance make a deep bass sound in the detective; a torpedo-boat destroyer makes a low whistle; and a submarine makes a high shrill whistle. Each is distinctive and there is a chance of mistaking one for the other.

Water, of course, transmits sound much better than air, so when his microphone is submerged it can hear sounds at a much greater distance. The inventors of this apparatus have included in it devices which multiply or increase the noise or sound 10,000 times. Thus, sound entirely unperceivable by the human ear becomes very loud noises. By this ampplying means, the detector catches the sound of submarines at disances any where up to a little more than 25 miles. Patrols of sentries all along the coast, at intervals of 5 miles, are continuously listening with these mechanical ears. When suspicious sounds are heard they swing the submerged microphone about until the sound is loudest. This gives the direction from which the sound travels. They then get the nearest station in the direction in which the sub. is travelling. That station then get the direction that he sub. is from it. By comparison and simple system of triangulation the exact location of the sub. is quickly settled and aeroplanes and high speed motor boats are sent to destroy it or drive it into cleverly designed traps. Soon it is expected the detective will have a range of 100 miles, instead of 25 and will be operated from vessels as well as from shore.

It has worked so admirably already that a very large portion of the German submarine navy has been destroyed and the rest is ineffective. Truly this has been a war of great inventions.

BUSY SORTING OUT USELESS INVENTIONS

PARIS, Nov. 16.—The work of the new Ministry of Inventions was described to-day by Prof. Paul Painleve, head of the department. The Minister explained that hitherto many well-equipped laboratories and scientists identified with them had played no part in preparations for national defence. It is his purpose to mobilize them.

The first and greatest difficulty with which the department has to contend, Prof. Painleve explained, is the enormous number of useless inventions. All must be tested, and the work must be done rapidly. Those picked out as having possibilities are referred to special sections, such as electricity or aviation, under the direction of two or three young and active experts, who investigate them thoroughly. Such inventions as are deemed practicable are then turned over to specialists who assist the inventors to put on the finishing touch.

At the same time the question of manufacturing the new appliances is considered. Finally, their applicability for military purposes is determined by representatives of the War or Marine Ministry. If approved by them the inventions are taken over and the work of Prof. Painleve's department is at an end.

Inventions are welcomed, whether from world-famed scientists or workmen. The variety dealt with is immense, varying from a slight improvement in the pivot of a machine gun to the most abstruse applications of modern physics.

Yield Throughout Ontario and Other Parts of Dominion Not up to Expectations

OTTAWA, Nov. 17.—Root and fodder crops in Canada consisting of potatoes, turnips, mangolds, etc., hay and clover, alfalfa, fodder corn, and sugar beets, occupied this year a total area of about 9,977,000 acres, as compared with 9,967,000 acres in 1914, and the estimated value, subject to revision is $280,279,000, as compared with $294,227,800 last year, says the census and statistics office. The decrease in area in respect to hay and clover, and the increase in total value is due to the larger yield of the same crop.

The conditions governing the productions of potatoes have this year been as bad as last year they were good. The total estimated yield is 62,504,000 bushels from 479,600 acres, an average yield per acre of only 131 bushels. Last year the corresponding figures were 85,672,800 bushels, 475,000 acres and 180 bushels per acre. Not since the average of 119 bushels in 1910 has the rate per acre been so low. It is 27 bushels below the average of 158 busheds for the five years of 1910-14. In Ontario where the record yield of over 167 bushels per acre was obtained last year, the average yield per acre is not more than 96.6 bushels, the lowest yield on record for the province.

Poor Elsewhere.

In other provinces the potato yield is also poor, excepting in Alberta and in British Columbia, where the respective yields were 211.6 and 252 bushels. For all Canada the quality is 84 per cent. of the standard, as compared with 90 per cent. last year, but in Ontario the quality is down to 66 per cent, as compared with 101 per cent. The average price per bushel to the grower works out to 57 cents for Canada, 76 cents for Ontario and 83 cents for Alberta. Potatoes are very generally reported as affected with rot and blight, especially in Ontario, and the indications are that the keeping qualities this year will be very poor.

Fall Wheat Area Smaller.

The area sown to fall wheat for next year's harvest is estimated to be 1,100,900 acres, which is about 18 per cent. less than the area of 1,394,000 sown in 1914 for 1915. The decrease is principally in Ontario, and is due to the heavy rains of August, which prevented the working of the soil in time for seeding.

The area sown to fall wheat in Ontario is estimated to be 920,600 acres, as compared with 1,048,000 acres sown in 1914, the decrease being 127,400 acres or over 21 per cent.

Plain Horse Sense.

If a merchant or a manufacturer is willing to spend good money for advertising, to ask you to try his store or his product, it stands to reason that he must have something worth offering. Otherwise you would not go back, or you would not again purchase the product, and the first sale would be the last. In that case advertising would NOT pay. It only pays when it brings continuous patronage, and to do that there must be real value given. That is the reason advertised stores or products are almost invariably good. It will pay you to patronize the advertisers.

TELLS BEST WAY TO CROSS TRACKS

(By O. H. Larson, President Oldsmobile Company, of New York.)

Every motorist should be made to feel the responsible gravity of safely and speedy driving his car across the railway tracks according to some practical method, and it is only when he does that the needless loss of money and lives will be averted.

First, he should slow up at all crossings and, if a dangerous one, come to a full stop. In neither slowing up or in stopping it is imperative to have the spark and throttle set at a point where the motor will run its slowest without stopping, as otherwise the unnecessary noise of the motor may prevent hearing an approaching train.

Having decided that all is clear, he should not attempt to cross the tracks on high speed after slowing down, but should shift into "second." This will give ability for a very rapid pick up if necessary. After a full stop he should start on "first," with the motor running fairly fast, so that it is not liable to "stall" in starting. He should continue over the tracks on "first" and not attempt to change into "second" unless he is a very good driver, as the motor might "stall" in changing speeds. However to change is some advantage, as once the car is under way it can pick up more rapidly on "second" than on "first."

Should the motor ever "stall" on the tracks, one should get out and push immediately and not try to start the motor, unless there is an electric starter, with plenty of time.

If the car must be pushed one can make fastest progress by taking hold of the spokes of the wheels, as a better leverage will be had than by pushing.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

"THE BRAVE LITTLE PRIEST."

The Rev. John Gwynn, S.J., chaplain to the Irish Guards, whose death was announced in the Times of Oct. 18, died on Oct. 12 of wounds which he received while in a dug-out with the colonel. The following account of his heroic devotion to duty during the fighting round Hill 70 is given by an Irish Guardsman:

"Father Gwynn was known among the boys as 'the brave little priest.' Early in the war he was seriously wounded, but refused to return to England. During the terrible fighting recently Father Gwynn was again at his post. I saw him just before he died. Shrapnel and bullets were being showered upon us in all directions. Hundreds of our lads dropped. Father Gwynn was undismayed. He seemed to be all over the place trying to give the last sacrament to the dying. Once I thought he was buried alive, for a shell exploded within a few yards of where he was, and the next moment I saw nothing but a great heap of earth. The plight of the wounded concealed beneath was harrowing. Out of the ground came cries of 'Father, Father, Father,' from those whowere in their death agonies. Then, as if by a miracle, Father Gwynn was seen to fight his way through the earth. He must have been severely injured, but he went on blessing the wounded and hearing their confessions. The last I saw of him was kneeling by the side of a German soldier. It was a scene to make you cry. The shells continued to explode about the wounded, but they could not stop a little English priest from doing his duty even to a dying German."

"HIT THE TRAIL BRIDE" IS AWARDED DIVORCE.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Nov. 17.—The romantic marriage of Buena Vista Elliotte and J. C. Elliotte, an artist, who created a stir during the "Billy" Sunday meetings here by "hitting the trail" together in their wedding toggery, the bride in a white gown and long veil, has ended in the divorce court.

Elliotte sued for divorce, but the decree was awarded the bride on her cross bill on the grounds that she was not sixteen years old at the time of the wedding. The divorce was granted by Judge Graham in Circuit Court.

CAPTAINS KEEP LID ON AND BALK REGAN'S PLAN

Give the Superintendent No Chance to Show Them Up by Enforcing Excise Law to Letter

BUFFALO, Nov. 17.—The police captains, without exception made history in the city by enforcing the excise law as it was never enforced before, and Police Superintendent Michael Regan, who, with his confidential detectives had planned raids in certain sections of the city, was greatly disappointed. Although Superintendent Regan made a tour of the city in his own green automobile and peeked here and there, he was unable to find an opening and finally he took refuge in his office.

Saloons in the city that were never known to have been closed before on a Sunday were tight Sunday. Curtains were pulled to the top of the front windows and a full view of the barroom was given from the street. There was no sneaking in the back doors, and in many cases the proprietors were not even in the saloons or in their apartments adjoining.

Instead many dusted off their walking sticks and strolled to football games and the like, while a few were seen in Dr. Henry W. Strough's big tabernacle at the old driving park.

Even the Main street saloonkeeper who a few months ago defied Superintendent Regan and refused to close his doors, did not take a charge yesterday. Everybody who applied at the place for drink was told that the day was the Sabbath and no drink could be served.

Law Observed.

Of course in a few places where the proprietors worked with dinners as an excuse there was a little business done but not to amount to anything. If a man with a thirst yesterday was lucky enough to get into one of these few places a bill of fare was placed in front of him and he was told that he would have to order something to eat or he could not be served with a drink.

"It was funny, I had nine beers and nine lunches in one place," said a thirsty man last night. "As the waiter brought in one lunch and a drink he would take away the other lunch and the empty glass. That is one system of beating the closing law."

However in outlying precincts seven saloonkeepers took chances and they were promptly arrested. The first raid to be made was by Captain Jeremiah J. O'Brien of the eighth precinct. The raid was at the saloon of John Czosek, 166 Stanislaus street and the proprietor and eight men were taken into custody.

Ward Raids Four.

In the Thirteenth precinct Captain George J. Ward made four raids on the following places: Andrew Babek's saloon, 226 Tonawanda street; John Baxter's saloon, 1797 Niagara street; John Gruenswieg's saloon, 1995 Niagara street, and Walter Zuchlewski's saloon, 238 Tonawanda street. Twenty men were arrested in these four places.

In the Fourth precinct, Captain John Burfiend raided the saloon of Josiah Rietter, 500 Spring street and arrested the proprietor and seven men. In the Seventh precinct Captain Charles N. Miller directed a raid on the saloon of John J. Doherty, 190 South street. Here the proprietor and six men were arrested.

It was a decided victory for the captains in their war with Superintendent Regan which the latter declared just a week ago when the police captains met and refused to any longer be "goats" for the department head. Since the captains held their secret conference and decided that they would not allow Superintendent Regan to shift blame for conditions on them, the Superintendent has constantly been in a rage, police officials say.

Police officials stated this morning that never, before in the history of Buffalo was there such a tight Sunday as far as the Sunday closing law was concerned.

This morning the police captains appeared at police headquarters and with them they had a report which read "There were no liquor violations in my precinct yesterday," and this report was the truth.

'NO TREATING' ORDER REDUCES THE LONDON BAR RECEIPTS

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Early as it may be yet to judge the effects of the "no treating" order upon the drinking habits of the metropolis, that it has resulted in diminishing consumption is clear.

The secretary of a large club with a membership which, while select, is not too exclusive told a correspondent that the result of the order had been roughly to reduce the consumption of drink by about forty per cent.

The manager of a well-known West End hotel which possesses a popular buffet and bar complained that since the order his daily receipts had fallen by an amount which fluctuated between twenty-five and forty per cent.

"I think my experience is that of the great majority of hotels," he said. "Where a man formerly brought in a friend or two and stayed some time drinking, he now comes in alone, has his drink and goes away. There has, it is true, been some little treating in cigars and cigarettes, but the additional profit from that is infinitesimal compared with the loss on the drinks."

The same story is told by the majority of public house licensees, and it seems more than likely that the Kensington licensees who have secured a reduction of their rates on the ground of decreased earnings have set an example which will be followed all over the metropolitan area.

Naturally one turns to the statistics in the police courts, and it is significant that in practically all districts a perceptible reduction in the cases of drunkenness has occurred. Curiously enough this seems more noticeable in the western and central districts than the eastern. At Old street, for instance, there has been no reduction in the cases and the Magistrate has publicly expressed his disappointment. At Tower Bridge there have been about thirty less cases than at the same period last year. These figures are rather in excess of other courts and can hardly be taken as fair evidence of London as a whole. But at certain western courts, where the total number of cases is rather greater than at Tower Bridge, the cases have fallen very considerably.

But the last few weeks are hardly a fair criterion, for pensions are actually paid quarterly, and the general experience is that the September quarter day results in an increase of drunkenness during October, and seasonal industrial migrations, such as that of the hoppers, also swell the lists in those districts to which the workers return. So that, taken as a whole, the effects of "no treating" order may be considered very satisfactory from the point of view of the promoters.

War Hits Great London Clubs Severe Blow; Many May Close

LONDON, Nov. 15.—One by one the big West End clubs are closing their doors till the dawn of happier times, for "clubland" is feeling the pinch of the war acutely. A few of the old and well founded service clubs are still doing very well, the war having brought about something like a boom in that variety, which are now having the "time of their lives," but most clubs are badly affected to a greater or less degree.

In the 150 or so leading London clubs there is a nominal membership of more than 60,000. There are giants among them which include the Army and Navy Club with 2,800 members; Constitutional, 6,500; Junior Naval and Military, 2,800; Junior Constitutional, 5,000; Junior United Services, 3,000; Motor, 3,000; National Liberal, 5,200; Naval and Military, 2,000; Public Schools, 2,400; Royal Automobile, 7,800, and United Services, 2,000.

Of course there are important ladies' clubs also, which include the Ladies' Army and Navy, with 2,800 members; Ladies' Imperial, 2,300; New Century, 3,800; New Empress, 1,600, and others equally important. To be considered also are the resorts of specialists—yachting clubs, literary clubs and similar places, with hundreds of clubs not in the first flight.

However trying the period through which clubs have passed since the beginning of the war, a worse one is in prospect if the present strife lasts. From inquiries in authoritative quarters the consensus is that the great political clubs, like the Carlton, the Reform, Junior Carlton and Conservative, together with Arthur's the Athenaeum, Marlborough, St. James' and other similar, with heavy entrance fees, varying from $130 to $250, will maintain their membership at about normal, as there will be a general disinclination to sacrifice such fees. Again, such clubs as the Army and Navy, Junior Naval and Military, United Services, etc., are not only booming, but adding to their membership, and actually seeking additional accommodation owing to the influx of officers from the front. Most of such clubs, it is expected, will weather the war period, but the smaller service clubs are feeling the pinch, and it is generally believed that after the war high rents—one club actually pays $30,000 a year—and other abnormal expenses, will bring many of them down.

The majority of clubs, speaking generally, are at present very poorly patronized. On one day this week, at six of these great institutions, splendidly furnished with a membership of nominally 17,000, the attendances between nine a.m. and half past twelve p.m., were 23, 31, 19, 43, 6 and 29 respectively, or a total of 151. Toward luncheon hour these numbers were not doubled, and after o'clock there was a mere "sprinkling" addition.

In most clubs food is being sold at almost cost price. Certainly the profit is almost negligible. Resignations have been pouring in. There are no "waiting" lists now, whereas formerly they used to include hundreds of names.

Some clubs, like The Services, in Stratford place, which took over German property and had a good financial start, have, by lowering subscriptions and tactful circularizing, received applications for membership recently from the North Sea, the Persian Gulf and other areas of the great campaign, but these are exceptional.

One vast institution has had to cut out all special quotations for "ladies'" luncheons, etc. Little wine is being drunk. Cigars of the club variety have given place to the cigarette bought outside. In fact, most of the avenues of club profits have been shut.

With the national text of "economy" everywhere clubs have been largely banned as luxuries and are much in the same position as the West End shops that sell high priced gold, silver, antiquities and art. The people are electing to do without them.

One cannot imagine anything more desolate and unattractive than a poorly patronized, luxurious West End Club. In one, once the haunt of diplomatists, five or six may be seen wandering aimlessly about, and it is some weeks since the two splendid billiard tables in a large world famous club have been used.

With the end of the year subscriptions again will be required and will not be paid in many instances. A period of severe financial stress is looming ahead. Many club committees are having gloomy forebodings. The death of their famous institutions is the only prospect.

EAT BIG MEAL IF HEAD ACHES SAYS SCIENTIST

Professor Declares Empty Stomach Often Brings Pain to the Brain.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—If you wake up with a headache this morning don't tell Norah that you don't want any breakfast. A rasher of ham and eggs or a thick, succulent steak is the panacea you need, for the chances are you are hungary.

This on the authority of Dr. Anton J. Carlson, associate professor of physiology at the University of Chicago.

Dr. Carlson has experimented on himself, on his students, and on animals. Several months ago he starved himself for five days. He has eaten all sorts of things and drank all sorts of things. At a meeting of the Biological Club, before an audience consisting chiefly of physicians, he told the results.

"I find that headache and restlessness," he said "are usually accompaniments of hunger. I took a record of the blood pressure in the arms of several men and found that the pressure was stronger proportionately as the hunger contractions were stronger. And headache, of course, is the result of too high blood pressure."

Dr. Carlson then proceeded to demolish a variety of favorite notions concerning human innards. He started with the popular conception of an array of tempting viands that "make your mouth water."

"They do no such thing," he said "My experiments have proved that the fact that a man smells and sees food while he is choosing it, as he does in the cafeterias which are so popular just now has no effect whatever on the hunger contradictions and only a negligible effect on the flow of the gastric juice. You get precisely as much stimulation from a bill of fare as you do from seeing the food itself.

"Another series of experiments showed that an old man or animal can go for a much longer period without hunger than a young one.

"Another of my experiments showed that if a glass of beer or of any alcoholic beverage be placed in a man's stomach directly—not through the mouth—he will enjoy the same sensation as that of appetite—a pleasurable recollection of the taste of good food.

SAYS HUSBAND'S HAT WAS SELDOM ON RACK.

ELGIN, Ill., Nov. 17.—Mrs. Minnie Campbell secured a divorce from Dr. James Campbell, a prominent physician of this city.

In her bill Mrs. Campbell charged that her husband's coldness would have made Mount Shasta's snowy crown seem like an inferno, and that he made his home but a wayside inn, where he acted like a traveller who rushes in, eats merely to satisfy his hunger, grabs his hat without a thought, and departs.

No Waste to Crisco

One of the most important things about Crisco is that it can be used over and over again to fry different kinds of foods, without carrying the taste or odor of one over to the other.

CRISCO
For Frying For Shortening For Cake Making

You can fry onions, then fish, and then doughnuts in the same Crisco—by merely straining it through cheesecloth after each frying.

This prevents all waste, and makes it unnecessary to keep several kinds of cooking fat in your kitchen for different kinds of frying.

The convenience, as well as the economy, of this is obvious.

GERMANY REVELS IN NEWS OF CONSTANT VICTORIES

BERNE, via London, Nov. 15.—During the last month Germany has been going almost frenzied with delight over the perpetual announcements of victories. These transports reached their climax with the news of the last Zeppelin raid over London and the killing of forty-one men, women and children, for there is more joy in Berlin over one English person killed than over 10,000 Russion prisoners. To these sources of delight must be added the publication of the British casualties in the Dardanelles.

Now, the Germans ceased publishing their casualty lists nearly a year ago, nor are they given indiscriminately to any one choosing to ask for them. Similarly a great deal takes place in the German Reichstag which is also not published. It may be that many in Germany know what has occurred, but the papers are not permitted to publish reports for every unfriendly outsider to quote and dilate upon.

Any one who has read the German newspapers during the war knows that a very large proportion of the space in the leading pages and foreign columns is occupied by quotations and extracts—how much garbled need not be said here—from the British press, especially the yellow and radical press. Nothing has given the German and Austrian public more satisfaction of late than the way in which the curs of the yellow press have strained at the censorial leash.

Another consequence of the great amount of writing in certain sections of the English press, the indiscretion of which at first appeared absolutely incredible to British residents abroad, until it was unfortunately proved to be a fact, is that it has emboldened the Germans to invent more blazing indiscretions, colour to which was naturally lent by what was known to have already appeared. The British public which has remained at home busy with war work of some kind or another cannot realize, nor has it time or opportunity to realize, what a curse this indiscreet press writing has been to the British Empire. Their prestige abroad, especially in neutral countries, has been lowered thereby to such an extent that years will be required to raise it to its former height.

The other day I was speaking to one in authority here about a certain Swiss newspaper publishing repeated attacks on England which were incompatible with neutrality, and his reply was that I had better complain to the British censor and induce him not to allow so much indiscriminate writing in the English press, this being merely copied in the Swiss press. The enemies of England would not have so much cause for rejoicing if all the English newspapers realized their duty.

Germany's rejoicing, indeed, has continued with only slight interruption for two months and more, the interruption having been, of course, during the attacks on Loos and in the Champagne. During the Russian retreat, when tremendous victories were announced daily, the people were in a perpetual state of "Mafeking," church bells were set ringing, children constantly given holidays in order to take part in public rejoicing, and everybody meeting in the safes to drink some general's health, sing patriotic songs or slap one another on the back.

The mass of the German public—at any rate, the public of the large towns, as I am assured by a neutral who has just returned from his third visit to Germany since the war—are more confident of victory than ever.

"Theatres and cinematograph palaces are crowded," he said, "and shops also, the people, especially the women, allowing themselves the luxury of making purchases of which in normal times they would scarcely have dreamed. Why, they argue, trouble about a few extra marks' expenditure? After the war every one will make tremendous profits, German trade will have no difficulties to fight against, Germany will be able to introduce her goods into every part of the world on much better and easier terms than ever before, and there will be all the thumping war indemnities which she is going to get, so that in a short time every one will be immensely rich and able to build his own castle or country house. The English and French will be hewers of wood and drawers of water. All this may seem extravagant, but it is what the mass of people believe.

"A select few, indeed, the leading commercial men," merchants and manufacturers, especially such as are not engaged in making war material, take a far more sober view of the state of affairs. These people and others who desire to know something more of what is going on than is allowed to transpire in the German press, frequent a certain cafe in Unter den Linden, where English, French and Italian newspapers, at least a week old, may be read, and the views of these persons are much less jubilant than those of the majority. If Germany is economically blockaded, what is she to do? they argue.

"Another class of persons not intoxicated by victory are the soldiers who return from the front, either wounded or on short leave. Those coming from the Russian front admit that the campaign has been very deadly and that it has not been possible to destroy a single Russian army. The men look weary and worn out and even sometimes discouraged. A good many have already been home on leave. It having been found that the birth rate was already decreasing alarmingly in the German Empire, the German Government, with Levitical simplicity, decided that the best means of remedying this was to let the men go home for a short time. Instead of resting somewhere behind the front, the men now go home to rest, ten days being the time allowed, including the days occupied by the journeys.

"While in England newspapers are discussing whether every Englishman should be called upon to do his duty or not, Germany, by proclamations, which have already been pasted up on all the hoardings, has ordered all rejected soldiers and all those wounded, invalided or exempted for one cause or another to present themselves again for another examination, and she has called up, without any exemptions whatsoever, all men between twenty and forty-five, who, at the beginning of the war, were declared unfit or partly unfit for military service or who had never done any such service. Many of those more than forty years of age were at the beginning of the war considered unfit for military employment in any capacity, but they have now been declared fit for garrison service or transport service, although not for the front. Nearly three million men of these various classes have been examined and re-examined, and sixty per cent. of them have been declared fit."

Too Uncertain.

"What is the trouble between Van Cleve and his wife? I thought she was the light of his life."

"So she was; but she went out too much."—Columbia Jester.

BRONCHITIS

COMES FROM A NEGLECTED COLD.

Bronchitis starts with a short, painful, dry cough, accompanied with rapid wheezing, and a feeling of oppression or tightness through the chest. At first the expectoration is a light color but as the trouble progresses the phlegm arising from the bronchial tubes becomes of a yellowish or greenish color, and is very often of a stringy nature.

Bronchitis is usually at its worst in the morning on account of the phlegm becoming lodged in the bronchial tubes during the night, and it very often takes some time coughing and gagging before you can get the throat clear of the phlegm.

When this happens you may be sure that if the bronchitis is not attended to immediately it will sooner or later develop into pneumonia, or some other more serious lung trouble.

Mrs. Roy Canner, Greenwood, Ont., writes: "I must tell you what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. Whenever I got a cold I would be troubled with bronchitis, and sometimes I would almost choke to death. After taking two bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I was cured."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is 25c and 50c. per bottle. See that you get the genuine.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Citizens of Ghent, Belgium, Living Under German Tyranny

Story Told by a Belgian Who Left on October 12th Reveals The Form of Slavery To Which Country Has Been Reduced.

GRATEFUL TO THE U. S. A.

QUAINT SOUVENIRS

Gratefulness of Belgians Shown in Decoration of American Flour Bag.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 17.—Coming direct from the town of Ghent, which has been occupied by the Germans since October 12, 1914, Mr. Paul Verpoest, who arrived in this city on November 5, has ideas of his own as to the so-called "paternalism" of the government supervision that is being exercised by the invaders of the city.

At the outbreak of the war Mrs. Verpoest, who is an American girl, was visiting friends here and as it became evident that Belgium was to be overrun by the enemy it was decided that it would be best for Mr. Verpoest also to return here. But to decide was one thing and to accomplish was another. For 14 long weary months Mr. Verpoest has been besieging the officers of the German authorities for permission to return to America. At first this permission was curtly refused and it was only after securing the assistance of the American consul, who vouched for the fact that Mr. Verpoest had spent some years in America and that his wife was now here, that the much desired passport was granted and he was able to make his way through Holland and to New York where he landed a little over a week ago.

The accounts that have recently been published in some New York papers commenting on conditions in Belgium have aroused Mr. Verpoest's indignation.

"Paternalism," he said, speaking to a reporter, "there is nothing paternal about it. The people of Ghent are living in a state of slavery. There is nothing, no matter how small, in which they are not dictated to by the Germans who are in charge of the city. Just one illustration. The Belgians are even compelled to live by German time, which differs from Eastern time by 55 minutes, and should a clock be found in any house marking the Eastern time formerly in use the householder is punished by a large fine and sometimes by imprisonment.

Crops Sent to Germany.

"While the crops have been unusually abundant this season there is nothing for the Belgians, for the Germans are shipping everything back to Germany. In the meantime the Belgians are living on a coarse bread which is almost uneatable and of only 250 grammes are allowed adults per day and this only in return for tickets distributed by the police each week. No white bread has been baked in Belgium since September, 1914, and it was impossible to buy flour until just before I left, when it was announced that families would be allowed to purchase four pounds a month."

The strictest surveillance is kept over the inhabitants of Ghent. Mr. Verpoest says, it being necessary for every man and woman over 18 years of age to carry an identification card bearing the German seal and to exhibit it at the demand of any German soldier at any time or place that he may see fit to demand it. No one is allowed to enter or leave the city after 7 o'clock in the evening, and no one must be on the streets between the hours of 11 o'clock in the evening and 6 o'clock in the morning. All men between the age of 17 and 55 years are subject to military authority and are compelled to sign a document every two weeks showing that they have not left the town without permission. In order to leave the city by train or carriage it is necessary to secure a passport for which a charge is made varying according to the distance and time covered.

While the Germans have so far observed international rules that they have not attempted to draft the Belgians into the regular army, they have formed of them a civic guard the members of which are drilled under German officers and are made to take an oath never to take arms against the Germans in the event of the latter's retreat. The penalty for the breaking of this oath is death. Arms of every sort have been confiscated, and every two weeks a review of horses is held under the supervision of the German authorities and all horses meeting with approval are taken, those rejected being branded "Fourth Army." In the majority of cases payment for these horses is made in bonds "payable after the war." All silver and gold money in the country has been confiscated and aluminum coins and paper notes, worthless outside of the city, issued by the Germans, issued in their places. Mr. Verpoest has brought back several of these pieces of money with him as souvenirs.

Parlors Turned Into Stables

In many ways, says Mr. Verpoest, the Germans show a spirit of hate and something resembling a petty spitefulness against the people who by their brave resistance made futile the march towards Paris. He tells of castles near Ghent where, out of sheer wantonness, horses have been stabled in the parlors with the rich rugs still lying on the floors, where the contents of libraries have been taken from the shelves and thrown into a near-by moat, and where chapels have been ransacked and put to desecrating uses. All of these things he knows to be actual facts and he knows, also, that at the battle of Wordeghem, five miles out of Ghent, the German commander put Belgian women, children and crippled men before his army in order that it might be protected from the Belgian troops who would not fire upon their own people.

Mr. Verpoest has brought with him some very interesting souvenirs. Among them are a ring and a medal from the German Zeppelin which was destroyed by fire at Mont St. Amand on June 7 after having been attacked by English aviators. Engraved on the ring is the semblance of a Zeppelin with the date and place of destruction. The medal bears on one side the Belgian lion and the date 1914 with the words "Liege," "Waelhem," "Nieuport," and, on the reverse, the head of Caesar and his famous words "Of all the Gauls the bravest are the Belgians." The wearing of either of these tokens is forbidden by the Germans and has been punished with heavy fines, imprisonment and in some cases with death.

Celebration of the Belgian national day, July 21, is also forbidden as is the wearing of the national colors and the sale of photographs of the King and Queen of Belgium, the President of France or the King of England.

But, if the Belgians could not celebrate their own national holiday they found one to take its place in some measure. Mr. Verpoest speaks feelingly of the great gratitude which his people bear toward the American people. On Washington's birthday, he says, each child in Ghent went to school decked in his or her very best clothes, such as are kept for Sundays and fete days, and were told by the teachers of the beginning of American history and the story of Washington the first president. American flags were distributed and each child who could write composed a tiny letter to the President of the United States thanking him for the food and clothing, that had kept the terrors of starvation and cold in abeyance.

Tokens of Gratitude.

In the older persons this same spirit of gratitude is present and it finds expression in ways that would be amusing were they not also pathetic. Mr. Verpoest has in his possession a most unique flour bag one of those which carried the gift of American flour to Belgium last winter. The bag bears the name of the Lewiston Milling Company, Lewiston, Idaho, but it is safe to say that its own millers would not know it in its present guise. The entire background of the bag has been painted a soft terra cotta color and about the edge is a border of the American colors. At the top is a scroll effect blending the Belgian lion with the American Stars and Stripes and above are the words, "Out of Thankfulness to the U.S.A." The center of the bag is occupied by a picture of a castle and church and below is the inscription, "Ghent, 1914-1915." The same pretty sentiment of gratitude is expressed in the lettering on a tiny pair of wooden shoes, one of which bears the word "Ghent" and the other "America."

These souvenirs tell another tale, too, that of the enforced idleness of many skilled workmen. Factories are closed because the Germans have shipped most of the raw material to Germany; theatres and schools of music and art are closed for lack of patronage, and everywhere there are the unemployed. When the City of Ghent in an attempt to remedy these conditions undertook the building of new docks there came, with the regular laborers accustomed to such work, sculptors, artists, musicians, architects, and teachers anxious to embrace the opportunity of earning $0.40 a week for four hours work daily in order that they might have the means of buying necessary food. Practically the only other work that has been during the past 12 months is that in the factories taken over by the Germans where the workers have over them, not a foreman, but a uniformed soldier armed with sword and pistol. This work is compulsory and refusal to do it is met with fines, imprisonment or transportation to Germany.

One of the facts of the occupation of Ghent which Mr. Verpoest regards as significant is that the majority of Germans who are now holding posts of authority in Ghent are men who were naturalized Belgian citizens before the war began, and who disappeared just before its occupation, returning in the uniform of the German army and with the insignia of officers. To all who have been in Belgium since its occupation, he says, it is evident that the country was over-run with German spies whose only reason for being in the country was that of gathering information and preparing for the invasion.

ALL PARCELS SENT TO SOLDIERS SHOULD CONTAIN ZAM-BUK

A man from the front made this remark the other day, and extracts from many letters we have received from the firing line and from Canadian camps bear this out.

Sapper G. T. Webster, 2nd Field Co., Canadian Engineers, writes: "We find Zam-Buk of great benefit here in camp for sores, cuts, bruises, sprains, etc. I would not be without it."

Corp. J. C. Fremlin, 10th Field Ambulance, writes: "I have found Zam-Buk a great remedy for footsoreness and also for rheumatism. A box I received the other day was shared amongst us and used up in a few minutes."

Lance-Corp. Delaney, 2nd Royal Irish Regt., who has been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal, writes:—Zam-Buk out here is like a loaf of bread to a starving man. We had a forced march of 37 miles, and not a man who used Zam-Buk on his feet fell out."

Sergt. F. Bremner, 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, writes from Barriefield: "Zam-Buk has proved most valuable for cuts, sores, blisters, etc. It has been a true friend, and we never fail to include it in our kit."

Private Johnson writes: "Mrs. —— offered to send me a rug. I have written to tell her to send out Zam-Buk instead. It will be of far more use."

For sore feet, chafed places, scalp sores, barbed wire scratches, cuts, abscesses, cold sores, chapped hands, etc., Zam-Buk is a veritable marvel. It stops the pain and heals so rapidly. Here it costs but 50c. per box. Out at the front, to your friends in the trenches and engaged on communication, it is priceless. Send a few boxes in your next parcel. Remember also that for similar injuries sustained at home it is just as good.

PROPOSAL TO PURCHASE FAIR GROUNDS BEFORE THE COUNCIL

Action Was Deferred Until More Information Can Be Secured—Special Committee Appointed to Look Into the Matter—Prospects For a Winter Fair

The proposal to purchase the exhibition grounds was before the Council again last evening. Action was deferred until further information can be obtained concerning the matter. Mr. J. H. Garbutt, president of the Exhibition Board, together with a number of the directors, appeared before the Council with the request that a by-law be prepared and submitted to the ratepayers at the January elections. Mr. Garbutt informed the Council that the option on the property would expire at the end of 1916, and the Board would have to go some considerable distance out of the city to get a piece of property at the same price.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., of the Board of Directors, said that a substantial sum had been expended on improvements to the present grounds, including a grandstand, costing $3,600. These would revert to the owner upon the expiration of the option. Mr. Turner was of the opinion that if permanent buildings were erected, Peterborough could have a fair lasting a week. The present property comprises thirty acres and the amount represented by the option is $30,000.

Chairman was Absent.

His Worship Mayor Buller explained that Ald. Stratton, Chairman of the Special Committee, appointed to deal with the matter, was unavoidably absent, and until more information was forthcoming, the Council would not be in a position to deal with the matter. Mayor Buller said he was informed by Mr. Morrow that if the city purchased the grounds it would be subject to an agreement binding the city to use the property for no other purpose than as a park as well as for Exhibition purposes.

Ald. Dobbin, together with others of the Council, were inclined to the opinion that in years to come, the city might deem it expedient to subdivide the property into building lots and secure grounds for exhibition purposes in some less congested portion of the city.

A Winter Fair.

Mr. Garbutt said the Exhibition Board was ready to proceed with the erection of buildings as soon as the grounds were purchased. In conversation with the Provincial authorities, he had learned that it was the intention of the department to establish a winter fair somewhere in Eastern Ontario, between Toronto and Ottawa. Mr. Garbutt pointed out that Peterborough's prospects of securing the Fair would be materially improved if they had the necessary buildings.

Ald. Green and others of the Council were in favour of deferring action until more information could be secured. He was of the opinion that the people should be given a chance to say whether or not they wanted the present fair grounds.

A special committee comprising Aldermen Green, Duffins, Stratton, Dobbin and Edgar was appointed to further investigate the matter and report back to the Council at an early date

District Attorney Continues The Police Investigation

BUFFALO, Nov. 18.—District Attorney Wesley C. Dudley quietly entered Rica Meyer's rooming house at 65 Oak street with two experienced safe men, opened the inside drawers of the Meyers woman's safe and from it took a large bundle of papers, which, it is said will be taken before the November grand jury. The papers are said to contain some valuable information regarding police rule in Buffalo's red light district.

District Attorney Dudley, it is known, went to the Oak street house only after he had been assured that some valuable papers had been left in the safe by the Meyers woman after she fled the city more than a month ago. Mr. Dudley secured the services of two men employed by a local safe company, and went to the house believing that no one saw them.

There was no one in the house at the time, it is said, and Mr. Dudley and his safe men entered through a rear door and found the safe in a front room on the second floor, which was formerly occupied by the Meyers woman. The front door of the safe is said to have been open and it was not necessary to use force.

Comes Upon Papers.

Mr. Dudley's two assistants had little trouble in working the combination on the inside door of the safe and after the little knob had been turned around a few hundred times and several pocket full of keys had been used, the door containing the "papers" opened. Mr. Dudley took a large book from the safe which is said to contain figures regarding former inmates of the place. It is also understood that Mr. Dudley found other papers which the police would like to have secured first.

The Meyers woman has been in that section of the city for many years and it is common gossip in police circles that she had been quite friendly with the police, especially a couple of detectives. One member of the department who has recently been put back in uniform is known to have been very friendly with her.

When the demand was made on Superintendent Michael Regan several weeks ago that he close up such places, the Meyers woman was consulted, it is said, by certain subordinates in the police department and told that she had better get out of town.

At first it is said the Meyers woman refused to be ordered out of town by men who she had "been so good to." Finally when it looked as though the October grand jury under Foreman Alonzo G. Hinkley might find out what conditions really were a few months ago in the red light district, the Meyers woman consented to leave town and she left in a hurry.

Begged to Leave.

It was only after a member of the department is said to have gone to her apartments and almost got on his knees and begged of her to leave and keep quiet did she go.

"My God can't you see what it means to me?" said the man. "Get out for a while until this thing blows over and everything will be all right. You hadn't ought to kick. You've had pretty good sailing for a long time." The Meyers woman left and only turned the key in the door. Of course several inmates of the place left with her.

Mr. Dudley was told that papers in the safe in the house contained information that money had been paid by the Meyers woman for police protection and that in the papers there were names of policemen who were paid and who received favors of almost every nature while they were in the house.

Dudley Admits it.

When Mr. Dudley was asked this morning about what he had found in the house he was greatly surprised.

"Well, where did you get that?" asked Mr. Dudley.

"It is so that you went to the house and jimmied the safe, isn't it," asked the reporter.

"Yes, but, believe me, I didn't know any one knew of it," he replied.

"Is it so that you got papers which you are going to use?" he was asked.

Mr. Dudley seemed reluctant to answer, but did say that he took a large book from the place. He stated that he did not find just exactly what he went there after, but he wished he could. It is believed that Mr. Dudley will present evidence he has regarding the case before the grand jury immediately.

Attempted To Extinguish Fire

Clothing Stock Suffered as a Result—Delay in Summoning Fire Department

Yesterday afternoon at four o'clock the Fire Department was called out to attend a chimney fire at 234 Rubidge street. The house is occupied by Mr. George East, while Mrs. Dunford is the owner. To this Fire Chief Howard assigned Acting Chief Jamieson and the truck company. While they were on their way another alarm came in for a real fire at the clothing store of A. Swartz, 432 George street. The fire was caused either by an overheated chimney or defective wiring. It was located on the second floor. Before the Fire Department was summoned a man from across the street ran upstairs and began to throw pails of water on the floor in the hope of extinguishing a fire. Despite his apparent good intentions his efforts failed to produce the desired result as the fire was between the flooring and the ceiling of the building. The most of the water went right through to the lower floor and ruined a portion of the clothing stock.

Extinguished With Chemical.

When the firemen arrived a hole was cut in the floor and the fire extinguished with a small three gallon chemical tank. The Fire Chief is of the opinion that had an alarm been turned in immediately the fire was discovered, the loss would have been considerably minimized. He would urge all citizens to turn in an alarm whenever they suspect a fire rather than attempt to extinguish it on their own account. Sometimes it is quicker to telephone in an alarm than go to a box. Under all circumstances the alarm should be turned in as quickly as possible no matter how small the fire may appear to be.

He Must Do It.

The Bishop of —— is very absent-minded. One day he was on a railway journey, and when the inspector came to check tickets his Lordship couldn't find his. "Never mind, sir," said the inspector, who knew the bishop well. "You will, perhaps, have found it by the time you get to end of your journey." But the bishop went on fumbling in pocket after pocket. "I must find that ticket," he muttered anxiously. "I want to know where I'm going."

A SQUARE DEAL DEMANDED FOR THE WORKINGMAN

Editor Evening Examiner

Dear Sir,—It is to be hoped that the rumour that Mr. Hartley intends to run for Mayor will prove to be true. Then, probably, the working class ratepayers will get a fairer deal than they have received in the past. They got a pretty raw deal this summer over the paving contracts, out-of-town contractors allowed to come in and also to bring in outside foreign labour with them. They were allowed to pay a rate of wages far below even the rate paid by the City Council for that class of work, and, although the city council have a clause calling for a nine-hour day for all city contracts, it was not inserted in the paving contracts; and the result was that the labouring man got in the neck, both ways—a long day and a short pay. There is a transient traders act to protect the store-keeper and the merchant, but there is no transient workman's Act; not on your life. The remedy is in the hands of the people, and it is to be hoped they will use it next January by voting for Mr. J. J. Hartley.

Hoping you will find space in your valuable paper, I remain,

Yours sincerely,
WORKMAN

MAGGIE TEYTE DIVORCED FOR HER INDEPENDENCE.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—A decree of divorce has been granted to Eugene Plumon, a young French lawyer, from Margaret Tate, known on the operatic stage as Maggie Teyte.

M. Plumon told the court that at first his marriage was happy, but that the independent character of his wife asserted itself more and more every day until she went to America in November of last year, against her husband's will, after writing him that she intended to commence life anew.

Miss Teyte did not contest the suit.

Company Offer to Supply Power at $16 Per H. P. Delivered in Peterborough

Power Scheme Laid Before the City Council—Special Committee Appointed to Deal With the Matter and Report Back—"We Are Not Getting All We Expected" Said Ald. Green.

No less than three special committees were appointed at last night's meeting of the City Council. The duty of one of these committees is to consider the pros and cons of a letter that was received from the Dickson Company of Peterborough, relating to a proposal to supply power to the city at a cost of sixteen dollars per horse-power, deliverd in Peterborough. The company claim to be in a position to supply three thousand horse-power. Alderman Edgar was in favour of turning the communication over to th Fire, Water and Light Committee, or the Utilities Commission. Alderman Green and Duffus did not approve of this suggestion. "We are not getting all we expected to get under the present system," observed Alderman Green. This opinion was shared by Alderman Duffus, who said that the question was important enough to be dealt with by a special committee.

The Letter.

The letter follows:

To the Mayor and Council:

We beg to request the opportunity of submitting a proposition to furnish power for the city from the Dickson Company's power at Lakefield.

The company owns the water power there estimated at 8,000 horse-power capacity when fully developed, and we are informed that the city is now paying the Hydro Electric Commission $18 per annum for about 2,800 horse-power.

If you are in a position to enter into a permanent contract with our company at a price not to exceed $16 per horse-power delivered in Peterborough, or $13 per horse-power at Lakefield, we would ask our company to install a power plant there in conjunction with the dam which must be built in the near future by the Dominion Government, agreeing to sell the property to the city at any time on a valuation to be mutually agreed upon as satisfactory. It is suggested that it is the intention of the Hydro Commission to develop a power below Healey's Falls and supply Peterborough from there, which would require about forty miles of transmission line with Peterborough at the extreme north end, which would necessarily increase the cost to the city very materially, besides precluding the original idea we all had when the vote was taken, that is, that in thirty years the city would absolutely own its power plant. If such an arrangement for a permanent supply is made we would simply be a part of the larger scheme without actual ownership of it all.

If the Hydro Commission would build the transmission line along the route of the canal for the use of the municipalities through which it passes, the city could arrange to pay charges for transmission, and thereby own and absolutely control its generating plant, which I submit would be decidedly preferable in the city's interest to be linked up with, and controlled by, a larger system entirely different from that which was at first contemplated, situated as we are in the very centre of the power zone. Any municipality could develop power along the route in the same way if required.

If the city, government, navigation and power interests could be induced to co-operate at this time before any development is commenced, a policy might be adopted which would be very beneficial to all concerned, and of great advantage to thos district, especially between here and Lakefield.

If the Council would appoint a committee to investigate the situation the writer would be pleased to meet them and discuss the question more fully.

Yours sincerely,
J. C. SHOOK.

Committee Appointed.

Mayor Buller met the wishes of the Council by naming a special committee, consisting of Aldermen Edgar, Duffus, Green and Langford. The communication will likely be referred to the Hydro Commission for an opinion.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL PICTURE IS COMING TO GRAND SOON

The management of "The Grand" announces another most important engagement following the "Birth of a Nation," and one sure to prove as attractive as any ever played in the "Grand" theatre. The booking of "Cabiria," the first of the big two dollar pictures, in fact the first of but two photo plays for which an admission price of two dollars has been cheerfully paid, but emphasizes the effort being made by the local theatre management to play only such features as have attracted universal attention.

"Cabiria" is the work of Gabreal D'Annunzio, Italy's most famous author and poet, the man who undoubtedly influenced Italy to take up her arms in favour of the Allies. It is the only work of so noted an author and is generally conceded to be the most wonderful scenario ever written.

The picture, to more fully convey its wonders, should be styled "production," in as much as it is claimed the cost exceeded $250,000, was made by the Itala company of Turin. It is in twelve reels, runs two hours and thirty minutes, contains 4,000 scenes and is acted by a cast of 10,000 screen actors.

It was first presented at the Grand Opera House in Rome, then had its English premier in London, where the picture is still running, was brought to America and given a special performance before President Wilson and cabinet and opened for prolonged runs in every big city in the world.

It was the first picture ever shown in New York with prices ranging from 25 cents to $2.00 and ran for nine months at the Knickerbocker theatre. The prices for the local engagement will be 15c to 50c.

SURPRISE PARTY WAS A SUCCESS

On Saturday evening, Nov. 13 a very enjoyable time was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Trade, "Little Lake Farm," Smith, when about thirty of the young people of the neighborhood gathered to give the twins, Willis and Gleda, a surprise party in honour of their twentieth birthday.

Many pretty and dainty gifts testified to the esteem in which they are held by their friends, especially a large three-storey birthday cake, the gift of one of the young ladies.

The evening was spent in games and music and after lunch was served the party was brought to a close by all joining hands and singing "Auld Lang Syne."

TENDERS FOR SNOW PLOUGHING WERE AWARDED LAST NIGHT

Names of Successful Tenderers—City Will Look After District Number Four, Also the Centre Ward—Comparative Prices

Tenders for snow ploughing were opened at a special meeting of the Board of Works that was held last evening, previous to the Council meeting. Tenders for districts Nos 2, 4, 5 and 8 were slightly higher, while those for Districts 3, 6 and 7 were somewhat lower.

On motion of Aldermen Duffus and Evans the contracts were awarded to the lowest tenderers.

The Tenders.

Following is a comparison of the tenders for both this year and last year:

	Contract price for 1914.	Contract price for 1915.
District No. 2.	$159	$165
District No. 3	120	120
District No. 5	117	135
District. No. 6.....	186	100
District No. 7.....	125	114
District No. 8.....	110	125
	$927	$819

The successful tenderers were as follows:

	Name	Price
District No. 2	E. Reid	$165
District No. 3	E. J. Ferguson	$120
District No. 5	N. Rusaw	$135
District No. 6	G. Sexsmith	$100
District No. 7	J. Lynn	$114
District No. 8	B. Revoy	$125
		$819

No. 4 District

No. 4 district comprising the Centre Ward is looked after by the city. As there is a spare horse in the Board of Works department, the Committee, at the suggestion of Ald. Green, decided to recommend that the city be responsible for the work in No. 4 district. The complete list of tenders is as follows: No. 2 district, W. J. Stinson $160, and E. Reid $165. No. 3 district, E. J. Ferguson $120, No. 4 district, M. Flaherty, $140, No. 5 district, N. Rusaw $135, No. 6 district W. H. Hubell $140, R. Nicholls $130 and G. Sexsmith $100; No. 7 district J. Lynn $114, and R. W. Mitchell, $125; No. 8. district, G. Foster $150 and B. Revoy $125.

One phase of the mayoralty elections which should be fully considered this year is the need of selecting the best men the city possesses. On the streets you hear this sentiment expressed and some have even stated that this is a public duty which at the present time demands the spirit of sacrifice. The Council needs men of broad vision balanced with caution and common sense. Less talk and more preparatory thought would also accelerate the Council's methods and render more inviting an aldermanic position. While the present Council has performed its duty probably to the best of its ability, yet it would not be fair to pronounce the opinion which the average citizen holds toward it. And this is not peculiar to the Council of this year, but you hear it stated that the causes for this public sentiment have been growing more acute. It certainly is not a voice of a community with the aspirations and development of Peterborough.

Hence, when it is recognized that the country is passing through a most critical period surely the citizens realize the importance of entrusting the public management to men who are big enough for the task. Comedy aldermen are well enough in peace times when they can be afforded, but with taxes becoming a serious problem, every ratepayer should see to it that there are no nominations of figureheads, "good fellows" and others of that general type. The call is for men of executive administrative and constructive abilities. Review the past year or the past years, and point to the advanced legislation or the constructive work the Councils have effected. It is a barren retrospect. And added to that is the fact that departments where savings would have been at least considered there was no action but procrastination.

The incompetent alderman is aware of his incompetence in spite of his "front," and he can be depended upon to treat his duties with a levit commensurate with that which the public manifested when they elected him.

This is one year that should see the labour men, business men, in fact the entire body of ratepayers, determined to secure efficient representatives in the Council. The war is teaching one lesson for those who will accept it the lesson of efficiency. And in this connection you need the man with some constructive capacity.

The January elections are steadily approaching, and it remains for the ratepayers to endeavour to persuade the most promising representatives to accept nominations.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The early appointment of Russian and Italian War Councils to co-operate with the English and French groups which met in Paris, is expected here to-day. It is recognized that there probably cannot be quite as complete a co-ordination of action with Russians and Italians as between the English and French, who can get together over night for a personal exchange of views. Close communication will be maintained by cable and telegraph, however, and by this method it is believed the divergence in operations can be reduced to a minimum.

ATHENS, Nov. 18.—The Allies in the Gallipoli have resumed the offensive, and have captured about seven hundred yards of Turkish trenches. This is officially confirmed in despatches to London. General Munro is now in command of the Dardanelles forces.

Will Insist Greeks Treat All Allied Troops Alike

LONDON, Thursday, Nov. 18.—A Chronicle editorial on the visit of the British Minister to Paris says:

"We cannot but believe that it marks a new and valuable stage along the path of Anglo-French co-operation. It is not necessary to suppose that any new issue has arisen necessitating a special conference. The same time the moment is one of pressing problems and not the least in regard to the attitude of Greece.

"Continued Bulgarian advances towards Monastir threaten to throw portions of the Serbian army across the Greek frontier, and at least one of the Greek ministers has publicly declared that in that event they will be interned, though it is said that any action taken against the Serbian troops need not imply action against the Anglo-French troops. The attempt to distinguish is purile in view of their common campaign. In the ground to place the allied troops who have gone to Salonika were sent there originally by the invitation of Venizelos. His invitation binds his King and country, and it is not for either of them to turn around now and to act as if it never has been given. If Greece were an ordinary neutral country, the allies would have no footing for complaint, but she is not. In the first place she is bound to Serbia by the Serbo-Greek treaty. Serbia's other allies, prejudiced though they are by Greece's breach of her treaty, have not felt it right or practicable to coerce her into taking positive action to fulfil it. In the third place, we ourselves, together with France and Russia, have a treaty with Greece whereby she has pledged herself to maintain constitutional government. We gave value for the pledge, we ceded the Ionian Islands. It is ridiculous to say then that we have no footing for complaint if King Constantine now abrogates constitutional government as indeed he has already done, and has established Crown dictatorship for the direct profit of our enemies. How the British government regards the matter is sufficiently shown by our action in respect to the Greek steamers in British ports. Obviously we cannot stand by till Greece has stocked herself with overseas requisites and then see her join the central powers."

THE POLL TAX MAY BE RAISED

At last night's meeting of the City Council a resolution originating in Kingston, and urging that the Provincial Legislature be enjoined to increase the poll tax from one to five dollars per head, was adopted.

A New Bridge.

A communication was received from the County Clerk, inviting the Council to participate in a joint meeting of the County Council of Peterborough and Victoria Counties, relative to a proposal to construct a new bridge across Pidgeon Creek, the city to bear a share of the cost. The present structure has been closed, with the result that a large portion of the traffic in and around the Bobcaygeon district goes to Lindsay instead of coming to Peterborough. It is altogether likely that the city will be represented at the meeting.

By-laws.

By-law No. 1915, to amend by-law No. 1901, authorizing an increase in the rate of interest to be allowed on debentures to be issued by the Utilities Commission, was adopted. The rate will be increased from five to five and a half per cent. The condition of the money market is responsible for the change.

The Council also passed a by-law respecting the establishment, maintenance and regulation of the collection of garbage throughout the city in accordance with the 1910 contract.

We do not know what ripples of healing are set in motion when we simply smile on one another. Christianity wants nothing so much in the world as sunny people—Henry Drummond.

Patriotic Meetings Held at Lotus and Fleetwood

Mr. R. R. Hall, M.P., and Rev. Canon Davidson delivered addresses at a patriotic meeting held at Lotus, ten miles west of Bethany, last evening. The gathering was a large one, and much enthusiasm was manifested. Mr. Hall and Canon Davidson spoke on behalf of the Patriotic and Red Cross funds, while Mr. J. J. Preston, M.P., urged his constituents in the district to support these worthy funds, generously. He said $450 had been raised that day in Bethany and he hoped the full $5,000, the amount aimed at, would be realized.

AT FLEETWOOD

At a well-attended meeting last night, in the Methodist Chruch Fleetwood, Messrs. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., F. D. Kerr, K.C., and Joseph Wearing, M.A., spoke on behalf of the Patriotic and Red Cross Funds. The chair was taken by Mr. Mulligan. Mr. Gillespie spoke briefly on the response which has already been made and the need for the fullest measure of contribution from every man, woman and child.

Mr. Wearing, in his address, emphasized the necessity of sacrifice. He claimed that the Allies are not yet victorious, because the people of the allied nations had not yet made the full measure of sacrifice. "Victory will come to our arms, and the day of peace will dawn" he said, "when and only when, our cup of sacrifice is full." He urged every man to face his duty squarely and reminded them that the day will come when they will stand before the bar of eternal justice to give account of their deeds during these days, when the call of liberty and truth and righteousness comes across the seas. "I would not," he said, "on that day be the man who had put money in the bank that should have gone to succor those who have been wounded in the field of battle."

Mr. Kerr reviewed the war as it has effected Canada and indicated the part we, as a daughter of the Empire, have taken. He dwelt on the fact that when our boys go to the front they leave us a sacred trust to care for them when they are wounded, and look after the wives and children who have been left at home. "Shall we keep the sacred trust?" he asked, "or shall we, in their hour of sacrifice, desert them?" He was glad, he said, that so far he, himself, had tried to do his duty by those who had gone. He regarded his earnings these days as dedicated to the cause of the Empire. "We must give," he said, "till it hurt."

The audience was most responsive and many subscriptions were tendered at the end of the meeting, which closed with the National Anthem.

PTE. G. R. BUTCHER IS SERIOUSLY WOUNDED

While No Official Word has been Received by His Parents, as to Where and How He Was Wounded, a Letter from Lieut. Harry Rogers Tells of It.

NOT YET IN CASUALTY LIST

Mrs. John Butcher, 301 Burnham street, has received word indirectly that her son, Pte. George R. Butcher, of the first C.M.R., who is on active service at the front, has been seriously wounded. A rumour has been current in the city all week that Pte. Butcher was wounded, the word having been contained in letters to friends here from Canadian soldiers in England. This morning Mrs. Butcher received a letter of sympathy from Lieut. Harry Rogers of the 8th C.M.R. now in England, expressing his regret that Pte. Butcher had been badly wounded. This was the first authentic news that Mrs. Butcher has received regarding her son. No official word has been sent her. Lieut. Rogers' letter was written on November 3rd. The last letter from Pte. Butcher was written on October 22nd and he was all right at that time. From the tenor of Lieut. Rogers' letter, he assumes that Mrs. Butcher has already heard of her son being wounded.

THE SINGLE TAX

Every man in Peterborough is interested in the question of the single tax and the relation of the Church of Christ to that theory. The Men's Association of Murray street church are bringing Mr H. S. Ross, K.C., of Montreal, to their church for Tuesday evening next to speak on the subject. There will be no charge made and the offering is in the interests of the Red Cross Society and will be taken by uniformed Red Cross nurses.

Three musical numbers will be presented during the evening. All who are interested in the question of work and taxes and desire to hear the discussion by a prominent Montreal lawyer, will be welcomed.

ALICE TRIED HIM.

"The faith of some people," said the Bishop, "reminds me of little Alice. Little Alice came running in from the garden in great distress. "God doesn't love me any more, mother!" she cried. "Why, Alice, dear," said her mother, "you must not say that. God loves all of us." "He," sobbed Alice, "He, He doesn't love me. I know He doesn't. I tried Him with a daisy."

COMMITTED TO TRIAL ON SERIOUS CHARGE

Jos. Gould of Asphodel Faces Alleged Crime Against 5 Year Old Girl

Joseph Gould of Asphodel was committed to trial this afternoon by County Police Magistrate Langley on a charge of indecent assault, alleged to have been committed on Saturday, October 30th, against a little five-year-old girl. The offence is a comparatively minor one, under the above charge, but at the same time is disguising and unnamable. Mr. Hatton apperade for the Crown, and Mr. J. A. Humphries of Campbellford represented the prisoner. The court opened at 10 o'clock and sat without intermission until 2.30, when the Magistrate committed the prisoner for trial at the next session. While the children of the school adjacent to the Court House were playing, before the afternoon bell, the little girl commenced her story after the court had overcome her shyness and won her confidence. She innocently prattled a sordid narrative which formed the basis of the charge against Gould who resides on the Norwood road, on the outskirts of Hastings. According to her statement the prisoner committed no actual offence, as the general public understands that term, but the alleged crime is none the less of a serious character. The prisoner, she said, gave her five coppers as a bribe not to tell anybody.

Demonstration of Men's Suitings In Oak Hall Store Window To-Nigh

An up-to-the-minute method of displaying material for men's suitings will be featured to-night in the Oak Hall store window between 7.30 and 8.30 o'clock. This store is holding a special sale of suits at $16.50, $18 and $20 values, and in order to enable the public to see the made-up effect of suits Mr. M. J. Maher secured a life-size demonstrator which will be used in to-night's display. The idea employed is decidedly effective, and at the same time very simple. The "demonstrator" makes the examination of suitings as interesting matter, and will commend itself to the public as an aid to selecting a new suit. By the Oak Hall device a man gets the effect of the finished garment and should find the demonstrator very helpful.

Most people think they are virtuous merely because they are tame and inoffensive. Tameness is not a virtue it is merely the absence of vice.—John Stuart Blackie.

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 15th.

Dear Sir,—Thank you for your letter of the 12th instant, advising that you have shipped two parcels of cigarettes and tobacco to Miss Plummer, field comforts' commissioner, to be distributed among the Peterborough boys at the front. On its arrival this shipment will have prompt attention, and be forwarded to Miss Plummer on the earliest possible steamer.

Yours very truly,
Hector McInnes, K.C.

Corp. Jas. O'Brien, son of Mr Michael O'Brien, has been transferred from the 57th Battalion, which has been in training at Niagara camp to the 93rd Peterborough Battalion. He is in the city to-day. Corp. O'Brien has two brothers in the Canadian forces, Will being with the 25th Battery, and Dick, in England, with the 33rd Battery draft.

OTTAWA, Nov. 17—It is officially announced through the press censor's office that the troopship Scandinavian, which sailed from Canada on November 6th, has arrived safely in England. She had on board the following troops: The 60th (Montreal) battalion, 40 officers, 1,024 men; balance of the 1st Fortress Company (Engineers), 29 men; 2nd Fortress Company, three officers, 130 men; civilian practitioners for Royal Army Medical Corps, six; details, four officers and 19 men.

The 93rd Battalion will leave for Lakefield at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Pte. J. Bath, Jackson, J. M. Luther, and Simmons have been detailed to act as assistants to Sergeant Cook Wilde at Lakefield to-morrow.

Pte. Sol. Allen, Bradley and P. Lavery of the 93rd are detailed to act as pioneers under Sergt. Pioneer Bauner on to-morrow's route march.

Mr. Fred Primeau of the news room staff of the Examiner, who has enlisted with the 33rd Battery, and who leaves to-morrow morning for Kingston, was this afternoon presented with a wrist watch and an address from his fellow employees. He is the fourth Examiner man to enlist within the past few weeks. The address was as follows:

Mr. Fred Primeau.

Good boy, Fred. Though we hail you as a boy, we your fellow employees of the "Examiner," want to tell you in sooth, that you have acted the man—lone the manly thing in joining the ranks of Canada's fighting men, where we are sure you will do your duty bravely, and faithfully, too, if we are to judge by the way you have fulfilled your trust as an employee and fellow workman.

We congratulate you on the step you have taken, and as your sense of duty has brought you to time, we want to do our little bit by bringing time to you and ask your acceptance, as a token of our appreciation and a reminder of old times, of this wrist watch. It is a trifling gift, but we envy it, for it will go into stirring scenes, with a plucky lad who we are confident will do credit to the colours, to himself and the "Examiner," whose employees heartily join in wishing him good luck and a safe return.

Signed on behalf of the staff.

Peterborough, November 18th, 1915.

By-Law Will Be Submitted to the Ratepayers in January Next.

The City Council will authorize the preparation of a by-law covering the following.

That a loan be given Mr. J. C. Ellis of a sum sufficient to pay for the erection of a building for a mattress and bed spring factory, 30 x 50 feet, two stories and basement, to be constructed of brick, the loan not to exceed $3,500, provided Mr. Ellis gives security on the property and on machinery worth at least $3,000.00 and agrees to employ an average of ten employees for eleven months in each year for six years, the loan to bear six per cent interest and to be repaid at the rate of $50.00 a month, the loan to be advanced on progress estimates of 80 per cent as the work on the building proceeds, and the balance 30 days after the work is completed, and that the city allow Mr Ellis $300.00 at the end of the term, on the last payments, in lieu of providing a site for his factory, and that a by-law be prepared for this purpose to be submitted to the electors at the time of the municipal election.

THE MIRACLE MAN OF AMERICA FOOTBALL REPEATS FOR YALE

(By Arthur Robinson.)

They call Tom Shevlin the Miracle Man of Football. And despite the insidious influence of such an appellation, he is. Yale's astounding victory over Princeton Saturday confirmed the suspicion which became rife in 1910.

That year Yale was defeated by West Point, 9 to 0, played a scoreless tie with Vanderbilt and then lost to Brown, 21 to 0. And then they sent for Tom Shevlin. And Shevlin came and Shevlinized the Yale football squad into a regular Yale football team.

That team defeated Princeton, 5 to 3, and then held the powerful Harvard team to a scoreless tie.

This is what Walter Camp wrote of Shevlin in the Football Guide:

"During the week that followed (the Brown defeat) no team in the history of the game ever absorbed so much football knowledge.

"It is doubtful if any aggregation of players, even from Yale, ever before took up such odds or stood against them and succeeded as this team did in revising them."

Makes Tiger Defeat Possible.

You know what he made possible this year—the defeat of the Princeton team which Percy Haughton ten days ago described as the best team Harvard had played since he assumed charge of the Crimson football destinies.

And yesterday I saw Tom Shevlin, and spoke to him, just before he caught the twelve o'clock train for New Haven. I was with him for over half an hour at the hotel where he was stopping; and after that half hour I do not wonder that Yale defeated Princeton.

Tom Shevlin is not of any particular type of man. He is a complete species. Bill Shakespeare would say that he is a regular guy raised to the 'nth power. And Bill, as usual, would be right.

Shevlin is six feet tall, weighs about 190 pounds, and wears a mustache and a cane. With the exception of the cane and mustache he has no bad habits, unless it be the pink shirt he wore.

Buck Stewart was with Shevlin when I met him. Stewart was a member of the championship Yale team Shevlin captained. That is, he was a member of that team in name only. He was Shevlin's substitute, but as Stewart pointed out yesterday Shevlin never needed a substitute.

Tells How It Was Done.

I asked Tom—I called him that, and couldn't help it, and felt entirely unfamiliar when I did—how he did it, meaning the achievement of the 13 to 7 Tiger over'throw.

"WE did it," was his simple answer. Whereupon Stewart smiled and suggested that it was a long time since Shevlin had left school and that "he" was the appropriate pronoun.

Consider Shevlin's achievement, and the conditions which prevailed before last Saturday's game.

The Yale team had experienced the worst early season record in its gridironal history.

In the second game of the Autumnal campaign the team lost to Virginia, 10 to 0. In the next game it squeezed out a 7 to 6 victory over Lehigh. The following week Springfield was defeated, 19 to 0.

And then followed three defeats in a row to colleges which were once scheduled for practise—something unprecedented in Yale football.

Three Defeats in Row.

The Blue eleven lost to Washington and Jefferson by the score of 16 to 7; was defeated by Colgate, 5 to 0, for the second time in the football relations of the two colleges, and a week ago Saturday lost to Brown by the margin of a drop kick.

And then this team, Shevlinized and inspired by the Shevlin personality, turned around and beat the best team Harvard had played since Percy Haughton was made head coach at Harvard!

And when I asked him how HE did it he laconically answered: "WE did it."

Otis Guernsey played a big part in that wonderful game. So did "Pie" Way and the rest of the players, too. But what had they accomplished before Shevlin came out of the West?

The answer to this, if you insist on an answer, is, nothing.

So, with due respect for the wonderful drop-kicking of the Yale fullback, Guernsey, and the alertness of Way, and the inspiring leadership of Alec Wilson, the captain, and the playing of the rest of the team, the lions' share of the honours, as they say, must go to Shevlin.

Yale men, including Buck Stewart, realise that.

This Saturday Yale plays Harvard, and instead of a roseate cinch the Crimson is expecting an old-time Yale battle. For which the Shevlin personality is entirely responsible.

EXPERIENCED FIGHTERS ALWAYS HAVE BIG EDGE

Utilize Vast Knowledge to Overcome Youth and Strength.

We have seen many a promising youngster in the boxing game go up against an old timer and get the worst of it. The boy often feels that he is superior to the veteran in strength and endurance and he doesn't see why he can't trim in short order, writes Walter Trumbull in the New York World, but he can't. The other fellow knows too much for him.

Where the youngster spends his vitality with the lavishness of youth the older man conserves his with the cunning of age. The youngster finds that he can never get set to hit or that he is tied up in a clinch as tightly as if he were handcuffed. His chin is always over the other man's head or his nose is being rubbed with the heel of a glove and he is continually wrestling and struggling with an opponent who simply hangs on him like a dead weight. When the round is over the veteran is usually where his seconds can push a chair under him while the boy has to walk across the ring to his corner.

Just as the youngster has concluded that he is engaged in a hugging match his foeman suddenly cuts loose with an attack whose unexpectedness and efficiency makes the boy's cleverness seems amateurish. It may be that the majority of the crowd is with the newcomer, but the veteran cares nothing for that. He is there to win. He knows that he must makes his punches count and he wastes but few. Whether his opening comes in the first round or last he is ready for it and derives the full benefit from it.

HOCKEY

Lindsay Post: Although Jack Frost has not yet made himself felt to such an extent as to permit of an indulgence in winter sports, especially hockey, the lovers of this popular winter pastime are already discussing prospects for the coming winter.

The Post in conversation with one of the officers of last year's speedy O.H.A. team, stated that while several of last year's players had left town, it might still be possible to secure substitutes from among some of the many junior hockey players in town.

There is some talk of Lindsay being represented in the Intermediate series, but many lovers of the game prefer to see the juniors developed. Peterborough, it is said, will loom strongly in the Intermediate series this year, as reports have it that a number of new men drifted into the Electric City during the summer. Peterborough, however, is in bad odour with the O.H.A., and may have its troubles in getting in a team.

Port Hope's junior players have nearly all enlisted, as has also Cobourg's puck chasers. Port Hope will not be represented in the O.H.A., but Cobourg will probably put in a team, known as St. Michael's.

Sermon-Making.

Aged clergyman to young curate: "Always remember in preaching a sermon that the great secret of success is simplicity. The beginner, after choosing his text, should divide his sermon into three parts. In the first part he tells the congregation what he is going to tell them. In the second part he tells them. And in the third part he tells them what he has told them."

O'ROURKE REAL VET OF DIAMOND

Present day fans look upon Honus Wagner and Larry Lajoie as the most ancient of ancients in baseball. While these boys have been cavorting o'er the diamond green for many moons they are school kids when compared to some of the players of the past.

For instance, look at the baseball career, of a certain James O'Rourke, who played the outfield and was at one time the star catcher of the New York Giants. O'Rourke's official record began in the year 1876—that is, his major league record. For seventeen seasons after that the Orator, as O'Rourke was called, was a star in the big show and for sixteen years the Hon. James was a central figure in the Connecticut State league.

Played on Team With Son.

He played in several positions, and one season his son played on the team the Orator managed. So for thirty-three seasons James O'Rourke reported for duty every spring in the pink of condition.

Then we have our Uncle Adrian Anson, who for twenty-six seasons blossomed out with the same old dew that he had the pennant already cinched. The big chief made good his predictions on many occasions. Then came Jack Glasscock, king of all shortstops, and old Eagle Eye Beckley, two players who were no springers when they started in the game and when they passed out of it they were old and a very much battered pair of veterans. Both saw twenty-five years of very active and hard campaigning.

Kid Gleason is Vet Class.

William Kid Gleason, well known to all fans of this period, put in twenty-five seasons of very active and aggressive ball playing. George Van Haltren, Jess Burkett and Billy Hamilton have all seen ten seasons on the diamond more than the big Frenchman or John Honus Wagner.

Some hurlers have stayed in the game so long that their arms crackled and tingled like a bag full of broken glass every time they attempted to cut loose with a fast one. Why, the grand old vets of the present day, such men as Matty, Ed Plank, Cy Falkenburg, and Nap Rucker, are mere urchins when compared to Billy Hart, Cy Young, Frank Forman, Theo Breitenstein, and several others.

These old boys heaved curves for over twenty seasons, and mostly in the major leagues. Every now and then a name will appear in the box scores of some bush league that has a familiar ring to it, and upon tackling it up it will be found to be some grand old player whose name was a headliner in big league box scores for almost a score of seasons.

Anson in Major Longest.

The famous Capt. Anson has the record for working more seasons in the big show than any ball player extant—that is, as an active player. From the year 1876 until 1897 Adrian C. Anson was very much in evidence and was one of the big attractions of the National league for full twenty-one seasons.

Anson began his professional career with the Forest City club of Rockford, Ill., in 1871, and in 1875 joined the Athletics of Philadelphia. In 1876 he joined the Chicago Nationals, and, as mentioned above, was their leader for twenty-one seasons, which stands as a record for all time.

Hart Pitcher For 24 Years.

William Hart, who was until a short time ago a big league umpire, holds the record as the hurler who lasted longer in that position than any other pitcher in professional baseball. For twenty-eight seasons, Billy Hart was constantly in the limelight as a hurler of curves and benders, and over half that period was spent in the big league. The remainder of his career as a pitcher was put in fooling the batsmen of the big minor league teams.

German Woman Has Given Eleven Sons

BERLIN, Nov. 17.—The days of whipped cream are gone, its use has been forbidden. In some cases German housewives have been fined for whipping cream.

You may buy cream and you may drink it, but you must not eat it in whipped form. This may not mean much to the average American, but it was the universal luxury.

In Berlin girls eat whipped cream for breakfast, devour it for lunches, again for afternoon coffee and plum cake. More whipped cream comes after theatre, and they gulp it down when whiling away the midnight hour in the cafe. But now the soldiers in the field defending hearth and home are to have butter for their bread.

The Government decrees: Any woman wearing skirts unnecessarily wide is wasting material and doing an unpatriotic act!

What American women would do under these circumstances you know. They would not permit even a Hindenburg to dictate to them what skirts they would wear. But German women are different. They think more of national necessity than of styles.

Eleventh Son.

A young man of Wanne, a miner, who has just joined the army, is the latest recruit of eleven brothers all wearing the field gray uniform of the Kaiser's soldiers. Beside them he has four brother-in-laws in the army. The mother of these eleven sons is still alive. She is proud of being able to give so much to her country.

This iron age has its iron will, its iron nerves and its iron hoof. Added to it the iron age now has its iron money. The German Government is making five pfenning pieces of iron.

It is saving the nickel and copper for guns and shells. The new coin will be similar to the one heretofore minted as to design and size.

In spite of all this life is going on as usual in this big city. Still whenever you meet anybody in street or home the first question he will ask you is the momentous one: "When do you think there will be peace again?"

Dress Forgotten, "Dandies" of Paris Are At the Front

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Mr. Roger Boucet de Monvel, a French writer of social distinction who is in the United States for the first time, limped with the aid of a cane into his den, at No. 327 Lexington avenue, and talked of the change in Paris and the disappearance of the French dandy. He is here to put the finishing touches to a dramatic effort for the Paris Fashion Fete, which opens in the Ritz-Carlton November 20. The fete is the official exhibition here of the leading French couturiers who are members of the Syndicat de Defense de la Grand Couture Francaise. The proceeds of the fete are to be devoted to an orphanage at Billaincourt, in France. Mr. de Monvel is doing his writing for this charity.

"Just about one year ago," said Mr. de Monvel, who himself is noticeably well dressed, "I was a French private fighting at Ypres. Now, you see, I'm here. I like your country, and must say that I was much impressed with the energy of your journalists. On board the Rochambeau there was Mme. Ramon Fernandez, who is here for the Fashion Fete also. The newspaper men came up the ladder, went for Mme. Fernandez, a battery of photographers aiming their cameras at her and—crack; she was photographed many times. They then asked questions—what was her hat made of? 'How shall I say peau de chamois?' she asked me, and I told them.

"Talk about the trenches, to get down to soldiers of France. They are places where you can't wash your hands or your teeth. You hear a lot of noise and many are killed.

"Dandies" Dead or Fighting.

"Sometimes we were in the trenches for day after day for a fortnight. But now it is better. You say that you wish me to tell you something of the disappearance of the dandies, or the men well dressed who used to be seen about Paris. They are no more; many have been killed and others are fighting or using their ability for France.

"Well, I have a brother. He has been very fortunate. He is with the aviation corps. He is Bernard de Monvel. Already he has been decorated with the Legion of Honour for gallantry. There is Jean de Castellane, a brother of Count Boni, who is at the the front. Another brother, Count Stanislas de Castellane, is a private in the army. Count Boni himself has proved an efficient interpreter oh the general staff. I think he still is at the front."

"And about Andre de Fouquieres?" I asked.

"Mr. de Fouquieres! I don't know him very well. But I suppose that he is wearing soldier clothes somewhere' eh? There have been many of the fine fellows killed. There was Pejuy, a writer. He died. Count Octave de Barral, prominent in politics and who also was an author, although he was short sighted, left his wife and child and went to the front. He was wounded. Then there was Leon de Montequieu, a writer also. He was killed just before I left France.

"Paris still is a gay city, but it has changed. The wounded—that is, those who have not been badly wounded, but are reforme—come to see their families, and the great, great pleasure for them is to dine out, say at the Cafe de Paris, Maxim's, the Cafe de la Paix or other famous places. They meet their friends. They go for a walk in a city where there is not a man in evening dress and where silk hats have been discarded. I went to the Cafe de Paris after I was well enough to go out of the hospital. I know what it is, the pleasure of seeing the friendly faces.

Brother Forgot Attire.

"One would sip a demi-tasse and ask about the friends one had not seen. The Count de Lasteyrie, a direct descendant of Lafayette — he married an American girl, a Miss Warren, I believe—is at the battle front and I have heard from him.

"My brother in the days before the war paid some attention to his attire. Now he has forgotten all about that. He is risking his life every day. I have not heard from him recently. Legonzac, a cubist painter, I have heard has not been wounded. He has been in some bad places, though, Pierre Lalti, I suppose, is in the navy, as is Claude Farryre, a French naval officer who gained a reputation as a writer.

"When you are good for nothing, as we say in France, you are reforme—that is, you are sent home because you are not fit for the hard work on the fighting lines or elsewhere. Gilbert de Voisins another Parisian of note, has been a soldier in the French lines. He was reforme, but he enlisted again.

"You can understand a bit what it is like in Paris when I tell you that for the first time since the war I put on my dress clothes when I reached America. The women are still handsomely gowned, but their manner of dressing is somewhat subdued.

"It is a wonderful thing to see two reforme men meet each other. They probably have not met since the beginning of the war. They throw their arms around each other, and, as we are accustomed to do in France, they kiss each other on the two cheeks. And then they may hum 'Teepayrarry,' pronounced something like that in Paris. It is the tune there. The British are ill at hearing it. They gave it up long ago, and the French then would sing it. So the English sing with a most extraordinary accent 'Les Godilliots sont lourds dans le sac.' It means that the army shoes are heavy in the bag.

No Latin Quarter Gayety.

"The Latin Quarter, of which the American always thinks when Paris is mentioned, is empty. You see, it was the place for youth, and the youth of Paris is fighting in uniform. The artist has passed there and the gayety has gone for the time being.

"But the scenes in the Cafe de Paris and the cafes on the boulevards are very interesting. There are the English officers mingling with the French, and you hear snatches of the stories they tell.

"Dear me, as I think, terrible things have happened. There was Delosques, a caricaturist. He went into the aviation corps with my brother, and the poor fellow, instead of coming back, was burned alive in his aeroplane. Next day the German aviator dropped a message telling of the brave death of Delosques.

"You can easily understand that it is not the thing that is much thought of in Paris by men a the present time—that they should be elegant or that they should be dandies. The picture of Paris is changed; the music has changed; the Frenchman is fighting for liberty. So he has not much time to think of clothes. He just goes on fighting or doing the very best he can for his country."

"And Poiret is he at the front?" I asked.

"No," answered Mr. de Monvel, "he's cutting clothes for soldiers somewhere in France. He's doing his share for France."

BURSTING SHELLS EVER DREW NEARER GERMAN CANNON

USED CAMERA TO FIX POSITION

Then Directed Allied Artillery Until Howitzer Was Smothered.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN CHAMPAGNE.—The aviator who discovered the big 380 millimeter gun which bombarded Dunkirk told me how he did it. He is a French captain, but beyond that the censor commands silence.

"I was flying in Flanders," he said, "when Dunkirk underwent her first bombardment. It seemed that the big shells must come from warships at sea, but as you know, they were fired from a point in Belgium some two miles back of the German lines, or about twenty miles.

"It takes a thief to catch a thief, so as German aviators gave the range to the big gun, French aviators watched them and gave the range to the Allied artillery. We photographed the position from several thousand feet up and from this photo marked on our large-scale artillery maps the exact point of the shells' departure."

The captain opened an album such as you probably have at home. Turning a few pages he stopped at one he said was the Dunkirk cannon. Small but distinct, the cannon could be seen in a circle of whitish gray—the cement base. Leading up to it was a double thread—the tramway over which the mammoth shells were hauled. Nearby was a highway, elsewhere darkish fields, beets, probably.

"All that remained," continued the boyish captain, "was to 'spike' the enemy's howitzer. This was done systematically. The Germans say we waste ammunition, but the silencing of this piece refutes that. We photographed the position after each shot. Look at these photos."

Turning the pictures slowly, one could see the spots representing holes dug by the guns searching for Dunkirk's bombarder, getting closer and closer to the target. It was like the Pit and the Pendulum all over again. The German gunners must have seen death drawing closer and closer, but there was nothing for them to do. The shells were closing in rapidly and their howitzer was too big to be unbolted from the cement and hauled about.

"When we had given approximately the proper range by the aid of our photos," the officer said, "we overflew the gun and gave directions by wireless and got the gun." The last photograph showed a veritable pit about the German piece, two men have been hit repeatedly. The captain did not say so, but his work was done under hot fire from anti-aircraft guns below; and while fighting air duels with German aeroplanes sent up against him.

I believe that we cannot live better than in seeking to become better, nor more agreeably than by having a clear conscience.—Socrates.

MANY FINE HORSES GO TO WAR ZONE

Horses and mules are going out of the United States at the rate of about 55,000 a month, according to the latest published reports of the Department of Commerce. Exports in August were 43,500 horses and 13,000 mules, valued at $11,000,000. In the first eight months of the year there were exported 300,587 horses, worth $66,933,765, and 86,748 mules, worth $16,756,528, making a total of nearly 400,000 horses and mules, valued at more than $83,000,000. This is at the rate of 600,000 a year, costing approximately $125,000,000.

More than $1,000,000 a month is being paid out for war horses at Des Moines, Iowa, according to the Breeders' Gazette. Buyers for the French, British, Belgian and Italian Governments are operating in a new market there, and horses are coming in for inspection at the rate of six hundred a day. The prices paid by the British range from $165 to $180, while the French pay from $150 to $175. It is estimated that more than 100,000 horses have been taken out of the States for shipment to the war zone, yet the supply continues at the rate of nearly two thousand a week. Farmers who sell to the shippers supplying the contractors are receiving $75 to $150 for their horses.

Godfrey Preece received another letter last week from J. H. Marshall, a young Englishman who trained saddle horses and polo ponies for Mr. Preece until the war broke out, and who is now at the No. 2 Remount Depot of the British Expeditionary Force in France. He says:

"I have never seen such beautiful horses as we have had from time to time, and it is always a regrettable job sending them up to the Front after getting them well mannered and fit. I have lately been schooling a bunch of the greenest of the green, from Australia, some of which turned out top hole, and most of which I would say were by English thoroughbred horses. Too good for the job, by far, the majority were and some could win hunter and hack classes at

GIANTS ARE NOT FOR SALE

Harry Hempstead Laughs at Reported Offer of $2,500,000 for Control

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Harry N. Hempstead of Indianapolis, president of the New York (National league) club, again stated that the franchise was not for sale. Mr. Hempstead and Secretary Foster were at the Giants' office in the Fifth Avenue building when asked about certain reports that have been circulated about the possible sale of the ball club. Mr. Hempstead laughed when told that several well-informed men had made the statement that the price for 75 per cent. of the club's stock was $2,500,000. The Giants' principal owner seemed greatly surprised when he was informed that Garry Hermann, acting for H. F. Sinclair of the Newark (Federal league) club, had made a secret offer for a controlling interest in the New York club to N. Ashley Lloyd, a prominent stockholder, who was a partner of the late John T. Brush.

Hermann's offer to Lloyd, which was made in Cincinnati two weeks ago, involved a sale of the stock once owned by Brush. Lloyd was asked to assert his influence with the Brush heirs to dispose of their holdings at a very large figure. Hermann had a confab with Sinclair and Weeghman of the Chicago Feds in Cincinnati, after which the report was wired to all parts of the country that not only the Giants but also the Cubs would change ownership.

If Sinclair the Wards, Weeghman and Phil Ball, the backer of the St. Louis Feds, can buy their way into the National league, Hermann and his friends believe that the baseball war will come to an end. The New York club has enjoyed prosperity for nearly twelve years. The present owners are not willing to sell unless they receive an enormous sum for their holdings.

WHAT EYE STRAIN DOES.

Often Causes Tuberculosis According to Idea of Physician.

That eye strain may often cause tuberculosis and hasten the development of the disease is the belief of Dr. Frank D. W. Bates, a Canadian physician. His experience has convinced him that strain upon the eyes consumes nerve force, lowers vitality and reduces the system to a condition favorable for the reception of germs of tuberculosis as well as of other diseases.

His attention was first called to eye strain in the development of diseases of the general system by a case of diabetes that was cured by an operation upon the eyes. A physician had been treating the case in the regular way for four years without result, not expecting a cure. The patient got into the hands of a Chicago oculist, who performed an operation. The oculist gave no medicine.

Dr. Bates heard of the case one year afterward and wrote inquiries about it both to the physician and the oculist. The physician replied that he had examined and not a trace of diabetes remained. There had been a complete cure, which he attributed to his patient's relief from eye strain by the operation.

DECLINE TO SAVE THE BABIE'S LIFE

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—A four days' old baby boy lies in the German-American Hospital. The baby is said to be a defective. Physicians and nurses admit it is dying. A simple operation that a nurse could perform would save the baby's life.

Yet neither nurse nor doctor lifts a hand to help the baby live. The staff of the hospital has decreed that it shall die.

The baby will die because the attending surgeon, Dr. H. J. Haiselden, thinks it is best. By operating the physician says he could save its life, but since the parents have left the matter to him, he has had the courage to decide that it shall not add its weight to the already large number of defectives in the world.

"And I'm answerable to my own conscience," Dr. Haiselden said.

"The little boy's physical flaws consist of a number of rather unusual ailments which undoubtedly make him an invalid during the first year and probably a defective later. If he were allowed to live," says Dr. Haiselden.

"And so I'm doing what the parents have given me option on doing," he adds, "and what it would take a pretty stiff argument to keep me from doing."

News of the plans of the physicians with regard to the baby caused considerable of a flurry among the members of the Anti-Cruelty League and of the Illinois Humane Society, both of which organizations are strong in Chicago. Informal gatherings were held and the positions the respective leagues should take were discussed. Threats of court action were hinted at, but the reporters were surprised to receive early in the evening a mild statement by George A. Scott, secretary of the Illinois Humane Society, who has said to be speaking for both of the humane organizations. His statement put the two associations in line with Dr. Haiselden.

Miss Jane Adams, head of Hull House, said:

"What right has this doctor to take a human life? No human being has a right to take the life of another whether defective or not. Especially a little baby. Every being is born into this world with the inherent right to have a chance to live. I do not know this physician, but it would make no difference if he were the greatest in the world, and all the other great physicians agreed with him, the letting that baby die when its life could be saved is a crime against the race, instead of the benefaction which he claims."

HOW THE WAR IS AFFECTING THE FABRIC MARKET

Materials of all kinds Scarce—Some Lines Quite Unavailable—Manufacturers at Wits' End to Make Deliveries

FUTURE PROSPECTS

"Do you see that piece of silk?" asked a manufacturer of Ready-to-Wear. "I was offered one thousand dollars cash to release the order from his contract. The price of that material has advanced seven cents in less than a month, and with that making it up, the lot of goods represented by that piece is worth to us $2,500 more than we paid for it on October 10th. That will give you an idea how the market is going in materials. You can't buy anything to-day except on immediate quotations. There is really no market price on any of the selling lines.

"Garment makers are working under conditions to-day that have never been known in Canada before. By the time the materials are made up estimates on the costs are all knocked askew. That will help you to understand why we can't contract for deliveries ahead.

"Navy materials are practically unprocurable. The price of dye has gone up beyond the clouds and then the dyers can't get enough to turn out their orders. I saw a keg of dye material the other day that a year or so ago cost about $60; to-day it sells at $1,550, when it can be had.

"The cotton market is all shot to pieces. Lines of materials, especially in the finer grades, and particularly in prints, can't be had. Woollens are even worse. In some lines some shades being unprocurable. I heard of a manufacturer the other day who refused a lot of goods that were off-colour and who was glad to buy them back later at a higher price.

"Deliveries earlier than December 15th and in some cases December 15th, are not now promised by the manufacturers of the best lines of waists, which means that the goods will barely be available for the Christmas selling. The dealer who has his stock in this month will have cause for congratulating himself upon his prudence and business sagacity. The immediate future does not promise any relief and it is expected that spring deliveries will be delayed by the same causes—lack of materials and the impossibility of making up stocks ahead. The manufacturer who undertakes deliveries at any very distant date with the present trend in the market in materials is taking up on himself great responsibility. The general opinion seems to be that with regard to prices matters will be worse rather than better in all lines of fabrics."

Half Million War Captives In Siberia

A HAVEN FOR REFUGEES

Many of the 25,000,000 in European Russia Heading for the Eastern Steppes.

VLADIVOSTOK, Nov. 18.—More than a half a million German and Austrian prisoners of war and interned civilians are being cared for in Siberia. Russia has scattered its prisoners the length of the trans-Siberian line, from the eastern border of European Russia to Lake Baikal. None of the prisoners has been sent into the region of Vladivostok as this is a fortress, and all adjacent territory is restricted very carefully.

It is estimated that Russia called at least half a million of its regular army out of Siberia at the outbreak of the war, including its great railway guard. The barracks evacuated by these troops were available for German prisoners and interned civilians. Consequently Russia relieved the crowded conditions in European Russia by sending the overflow into its Asiatic domain.

Americans Inspect the Camps.

The work of inspecting the Siberia war prison camps has devolved upon Americans, designated by the State Department at Washington, who are to report on the welfare of the Germans and Austrians. Many of the Siberian camps are so far removed from Petrograd that their inspection has been accomplished more easily by American representatives going into Russia through the Vladivostok gateway. Consul General Caldwell, at Vladivostok has been intrusted with the disbursement of funds for the relief of war prisoners, interned persons, and refugees. As a result the burden upon the American Consulate has been very heavy.

William Wardwell special representative of the State Department, is at present on a tour of prison camps, and within the last six months R. M. Yurr, Charles Ogilvie, and Dr. Charles Lewis, all of the Peyang University, Tien-Tsin, China have made trips through Siberia at the request of the State Department, looking after the welfare of prisoners.

A few refugees claiming American citizenship have drifted all the way from Poland and Galicia to Vladivostok, but travel is so much interrupted by munition-trains and the trans-Siberian service is so limited that it is extremely difficult for refugees to get through. All travellers coming from Russia on the weekly express train tell of the hundreds of thousands of refugees who are moving toward Siberia or are already located in camps which the Russian Government has established. Tourists from Russia report large numbers of Poles living in temporary quarters in Siberian towns preparatory to being sent by the Government to farms.

25,000,000 Refugees in Russia.

Dr. Paul H. Zinkham of the American Red Cross and other travellers from Southern Russia say the Russian newspapers estimate that 25,000,000 persons in all have left their homes in Galicia, Poland, and Russia proper. Many of these persons lived great distances from the fighting lines. Kiev, which is probably 150 miles from the front has been almost completely evacuated. The horrors of war have been so vividly presented to districts near the front by fleeing refugees that panic has seized the public in many cities, and transportation facilities are quite inadequate to accommodate the crowds anxious to get further away from the front.

Wounded Russian officers and soldiers who have returned to their homes here to recuperate tell of the many difficulties they encountered in getting out of the war zone. Excited refugees, anxious to get into places of greater security, were attacking trains and breaking all the windows in their efforts to get aboard.

The excitement was increased by the high cost of foodstuffs and the falling price of paper rubles. In several towns in Southern Russia money changers availed themselves of the discrepancy between the value of silver and paper money. For a time during September paper money brought only half its value in silver at Warsaw and in other big centres. Money changers collected silver and shipped it to the centres where one ruble in silver would buy two paper rubles. The result was a complete silver famine in some sections, which interferred with trade making it impossible for people to get any change.

For several days in Kiev the street car conductors could not change bills and were forced to put passengers off who did not have small silver. Similar discomforts in other cities enraged the public so thoroughly that a movement against money changers was feared. In Kiev several wealthy citizens relieved the silver famine by using their own funds to ship silver to other centres.

Ruble Exchange Very High.

The exchange rate on rubles here is very high in ordinary times an American dollar will buy two rubles. Now it will buy three in ordinary exchange transactions. The cheapness of Russian money is held by many merchants to make it imperative for them to increase their prices. On the other hand the public insists that merchants are taking advantage of the war situation to make unwarranted increases.

GOVERNOR PENNYPACKER AMBIDEXTROUS

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—The ability to write with his left hand is one of the accomplishments former Governor Pennypacker has added to his list. Some time ago he rolled over in bed and broke his right arm. As head of the state public service commission he had to sign many papers so he began learning to write all over again. After many weeks of perseverance he can now sign his name legibly with his left hand. His friends say his left-hand writing is better than his right.

RUSSIA MOBILIZES MILLIONS FOR WORK

All Able-Bodied Men Called on to Prepare Armies for Future Campaigns.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 30.—Russia before long will have a vast number of men available for service—they will not, I understand, actually bear arms. Russia has wider views than merely the provision of soldiers, and this calling up of millions is in no wise necessitated by the conditions of the fighting.

Of the millions who will now be summoned, while all will be under strict military law, the majority are intended for perfecting services on which the success of the fighting forces at the front depends. Within a brief period of time all Russia will be turned into a military camp. Factories, ironworks, and engineering shops have already been appropriated for the manufacture of everything needed for the success of the armies in the field, and also in all probability the railways will be served by men under military discipline.

In other words Russia is about to do what Germany wisely did at the outset of the war. All able-bodied men of the nation must serve some with rifle and bayonet, gun, or machine, pick and spade, but most with equally necessary tools of peace.

CARE IN SELECTING HERD

THERE isn't a dairyman raising pure-breds but will acknowledge the value of a well bred — well bodied sire. We have proven it by results that the breeder who consistently from season to season gives every care to the selection of his herd leader, will find he can send more milk to the factory as much as 2,000, 3,000 or even 5,000 lbs. per cow; more cream to the city, and more cash into his own pocket. His surplus stock will bring a bigger cheque. But the supreme satisfaction is in the pride every true breeder must feel in producing a higher type of herd — in setting for himself a new standard in yearly milk production, in fat content, and in a more perfect utility animal in every way.

But why not apply the same principal of breeding and selection to our other farm stock? We lag behind in these. The law works identically the same and the improvement in many cases is even more striking in cash returns. Take poultry for instance. The average Ontario hen doesn't lay 100 eggs in a year. On the other hand, Prof. Graham points out that 200 should be the standard. This standard is not attained by a single flock in Ontario. How near does yours come to it?

In poultry, experts state the light or heavy egg-producing tendency rests with the male. The matter of rapidly improving a flock thus resolves itself into selecting vigorous male birds of a good strain for the breeding pen.

If each hen in a flock of 30 laid but three eggs more per year, the margin would pay for a choice cockerel.

Now is a good time to put a new bird of proved breeding with your flock. Get him acquainted before the laying season. Don't delay doing this this fall. No matter what breed you keep, you can readily secure males at this season and with great er choice from the flocks. In Farm and Dairy during the coming weeks, you'll find the names of many reliable poultry breeders. Secure a good cockerel of new blood and improve your flock just as you improve your dairy herds. Now is the time to start.

King of Roumania and His Supporters Are Said to Be Pro-German

Roumania's Part in the War Hangs on the Decision of a Cabinet Council in Progress Now at Bucharest—Meeting Called By the King.

ROME, Nov. 19.—Rumania's part in the war hangs on the decision of a cabinet council in progress now at Bucharest, to-day's despatches from the Rumanian capital indicate.

The meeting is an extraordinary one, unexpectedly convoked by King Ferdinand. Rumanian politicians, diplomats and soldiers are said to be agreed that neutrality is no longer possible for their country. Whether it will be decided to join the Germanic or Entente Allies is still uncertain, however. The King and his supporters are said to be pro-German. The people generally favour, not so much the Entente Allies, but Russia. The Russians, fearing the King will have his way, are concentrating troops on their border adjoining Rumania. The Austrians, lest the decision be on the side of the Allies, are massing soldiers on their frontier.

A decision is expected momentarily.

Germany Has Ample Funds To Continue the War Until Spring

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—All sailings of liners between Italian ports and the United States have been cancelled by the Italian Government.

BERLIN, Nov. 19.—It is officially announced that Germany has ample funds to continue the war till spring without further war loans.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—It is believed here that the Allies' successes on the Gallipoli follows Lord Kitchener's arrival there. It is officially reported that the British casualties are less than fifty. The capture was the result of mine operations.

BERLIN, Nov. 19.—Constantinople despatches say Italian troops have reached Salonica, on five transports. Rome reports matters of extreme importance regarding the Balkans settled in the Cabinet meeting last night.

ROME, Nov. 19.—The Austrian submarine sunk by the Allied torpedo destroyer in the Mediterranean, yesterday, it is rumoured, is the submarine which sank the Ancona.

ATHENS, Nov. 19.—King Constantine this afternoon received Denys Cochin, the French special representative here in private audience.

PARIS, Nov. 19.—The Senate Army Committee passed a resolution urging unrestricted use of asphyxiating gas by the French troops.

TWO SUBMARINES CAPTURED.

ROME, Nov. 19.— French warships have captured two Austrian submarines off the African coast.

LONDON, Nov. 16.— The taking of Babuna Pass cost the Bulgarians five thousand men.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Bulgarians have captured Monastier.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The Allies may send an ultimatum to Greece demanding the demobilization of the army at once.

"THREE BLIND MICE" SING TRIO OF SOLDIERS WHO LOST SIGHT IN BATTLE

"Some of the troops left Australia with the idea that they were going on a picnic. The wounded have enlightened them, but they are now crazy to get a crack at the wily Turk—who from all accounts is wonderfully wily, but a clean fighter. In fact, the only cases of atrocities I have heard of occurred where German officers were in command. I'll believe anything almost of the Germans now.

"By God, but it makes one proud to see the wounded; Game? 'Game' is inadequate to convey a correct impression of their conduct.

"In one hospital ward are three men blinded for life. One afternoon two got on the third's bed and the trio sang 'Three Blind Mice,' then yelled, 'Are we downhearted? No!'"

ROME SAYS ITALIANS WILL GO TO AID OF THE BALKANS

ROME, via Paris, Nov. 19. —Italy, according to a statement obtained from a reliable source, will in the end join the Entente Allies at Salonica. The supposed indiscretions concerning an Italian expedition to Albania, it is said, are purpose y being allowed to circulate in order to divert attention from Italy's real object.

Preparations are in progress to send troops to Salonica, and it is said now that the Italian General Staff is waiting only for an opportune moment to detach the necessary force. The troops, it is understood, will become available now that the Italians have obtained control of the plateau dominating Gorizia and as the result of the advance through the Garso region and changed conditions due to the winter campaign.

ROUMANIA CALLS FOR THE MATERIALS OF WAR

MILAN, via Paris, Nov. 19.—A despatch from Bucharest to the Corriere della Sera says the official journal there has published a decree authorizing the Minister of War to requisition immediately all things and materials necessary to the national defence, the articles enumerated comprising metals, wearing apparel, medicines, cloth, machines for military supply factories, craft of all kind for river traffic, railway material and combustibles. Tradesmen are required to declare what they possess of these things and also of other prime necessities.

This is taken, says the newspaper, as an indication that Roumania sees the impossibility o maintaining her neutrality much longer.

Lieut. Chester Hughes.— Nephew of the Minister of Militia, and son of Dr. J. L. Hughes of Toronto, who was killed at the front. He was a member of the Engineers.

Swedish Torpedo Boat Saves British From Germans

COPENHAGEN, via London, Nov. 15.—The British steamship Thelma's clearance from Trelleborg, where she had been lying since the war began, was marked by an exciting naval adventure, in which the vessel escaped capture by a German destroyer through assistance rendered to her by the Swedish torpedo boat Pollux.

On Tuesday, when south of Landskrona, sixteen miles northeast of Copenhagen, the Thelma was pursued by the German destroyer W-132 into Swedish territorial waters. While the Germans were in the act of going on board the steamship the Pollux forced them to return to their craft, and, running between the two vessels, informed the Germans that every means would be employed to prevent the Thelma from being taken.

After an interval of silence, in which both war ships cleared for action, the German destroyer steamed away.

Gordon Craig

Copyright, 1912, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

"You take heem along monsieur?" It was Broussard's voice. "Zat vat you mean?"

"Certainly. Why not? There's plenty of work for another hand on board. Trust me to break him in. Come! Hustle the lad along, boys. I'll be with you in a minute."

They drove me forward roughly enough. We emerged into an open space, from which I saw the chimneys of the old house far away to our left. The path led onward into another weed patch beyond, down a steep ravine, and then before us stretched the lonely waters of the bayou. Hidden under the drooping foliage of the bank was a small boat, a negro in the stern.

I was thrust in unceremoniously, the three others following, each man shipping an oar into the row locks. Herman alone remained on shore, scattering the embers of a small fire and staring back toward the house. A few moments we waited in silence; then the slender figure of the one who seemed the leading spirit emerged from out the cane. Herman joined us, the latter taking the tiller, the former pushing off and springing alertly into the bow.

Lying between the thwarts, face turned upward, all I could see distinctly was the black oarsman, although occasionally, when he leaned forward, I caught glimpses of the fellow I believed to be the captain of the strange crew. Our boat skirted the shore, keeping close within the concealing shadows, as evidenced by overhanging trees. Twenty minutes elapsed ere we were scraping along the side of a vessel of some size.

I was hustled roughly to my feet and bundled aboard. My head still reeled dizzily, and the two men gripping my arms hurried me over the rail so swiftly my first impressions were extremely vague. I knew the sides of the vessel were painted a dull gray, as nearly an invisible color as could be conceived. I recall the sharp sheer of her bow, the clearness of her lines and the low sweep of her rail. Less than 1,000 tons burden, I thought, and then as my eyes swept aloft, and along the decks I knew her for either a private yacht, or tropic fruit steamer.

"First stateroom, second cabin," said a new voice sharply. "Lively now."

"Shall we unloose the ropes, sir?"

"Yes. Fasten the door and leave a guard. Stow away the boat, Broussard. Everything ready, captain."

I went down a broad stairway, shining brass rails on either side, which led to a spacious after cabin. A table extended its full length, already set for a meal, and a round faced negro in white serving jacket grinned at me as the men pressed me between them into a narrow passage leading forward. A moment later I was unceremoniously thrust into a small apartment on my right, the ropes about my wrists loosened and the door shut and locked behind me. For perhaps five minutes I lay where I had been so unceremoniously dropped, weakened by loss of blood and dazed by the rapidity of events. I found it hard to adjust my faculties to this new situation, but I thought it misty yet be my privilege to foil these villains and rescue Mrs. Henley. It was my belief she was also on board this vessel. I had no reason to assume this except the wording of Broussard's report, which I had overheard. But she was a prisoner, and this vessel would be the most likely place for her to be confined. I sat up, my flesh burning, and stared about. The light shining through the single closed port was dim, convincing me the sun had already set. As I got to my feet I could feel a faint throb of the engine and realized we were moving slowly through the water. The glass of the porthole was thick, but clear. I knelt on the berth and looked out, dimly perceiving the shore line slipping past, with an ever broadening stretch of water intervening. Then I sat down helplessly on the stool and waited for something to occur. Escape was impossible.

The man who appeared to be the chief had said he would turn the girl free in New Orleans, where she could do them no harm. New Orleans, then, was doubtless the port for which we sailed. It was clear they meant no personal harm to her, and they would never have brought me on board alive if they had deemed it necessary to otherwise dispose of me. These considerations were, in the main, reassuring, and as I turned them over in my mind I drifted into better humor. Besides, my head ceased to ache.

It was fully an hour after the coming of darkness before I was disturbed. Then the door opened, and the entering gleam of a light swinging in the passage revealed the grinning negro steward bearing a well filled tray. This he deposited in the berth, while applying a match to the lamp overhead. I saw no shadow of any guard outside, but the fellow made no effort to close the door, and I did not move, confident he was not alone.

"Say, George, what boat is this?" I asked.

"Mah name is Louis, sah."

"All right, Louis, then; what's the name of this vessel?"

"So I judge. What is she, fruiter or private yacht?"

"I reckon I don't just know," and he grinned.

"Perhaps then you will inform me where we are bound. I suppose you know that?"

"No, sah; de captain he nebber done tol' me, sah, nothin' 'bout his personal plans. All he done said was for me to hustle some grub in yere."

The shadow of a man blocked the doorway. He was one of those who had been in the small boat, and I noticed a revolver at his waist.

"That's enough, boy. Come, now, out with you!" he commanded gruffly. "Never you mind the door. I'll attend to that."

He pulled the door to after the retreating form of the negro, and I heard the sharp click of the latch and then his voice, muffled by intervening wood, ordering the steward aft. There was no appearance of any lock on the door. Probably there was none, as otherwise it would not have been necessary to post a guard. However, this was clearly no time to experiment, and I was hungry enough to forget all else in the appetizing fragrance of the meal waiting. I fell to eagerly, convinced there was a good cook on board and enjoying every morsel. This did not look as though I was destined to suffer, and merely being confined in these narrow quarters for a few hours was no great hardship. Probably the girl was receiving very similar treatment, and as soon as the Sea Gull made whatever port was aimed at we would both be put ashore and left to proceed as we thought best. These people were lawless enough without doubt—the murders already committed were evidence of that—but all they desired, so far as we were personally concerned, was to get us safely out of the way, where we could no longer interfere with their plans. What those plans might be I could merely conjecture, with little enough to guide my guessing. They might be filibusters connected with some revolution along the Central American coast, smugglers or marauders of even less respectability, using the Henley place for a rendezvous. These fellows were doubtless the ghosts which haunted the place and had given it so uncanny a reputation throughout the neighborhood. They would naturally resent any interference, any change in ownership or control. Possibly if they were thieves, as I more than half suspected, they had lost buried near by and were anxious to get us out of the way long enough to remove it unobserved. This appealed to me as by far the most probable explanation. The door opened again, and the guard stood revealed before me in the glare of light.

"The old man wants you," he explained brusquely, waving his hand aft as though specifying the direction. "Come on, now."

I preceded him along the narrow passage. The cabin was unoccupied, the table swung up against the beams of the upper deck, the heavy chairs moved back, leaving a wide open space. The furnishings were rich, in excellent taste. It was a yachtlike interior. There was but one door, evidence that a single cabin occupied the entire space astern, and I stopped before it, my companion applying his knuckles to the wood, but without removing his watchful eyes from me. A muffled voice asked who was there, and at the response replied:

"Open the door and show him in, Peters, and remain where you are within call."

I entered and found myself upon a plain, uncarpeted deck, the white walls and ceiling undecorated. On one side was a double tier of berths, lockers were between the ports, and heavy curtains draped the two windows aft. Opposite the berths was an arm rack, containing a variety of weapons, and the only floor covering was a small rug beneath a desk near the center of the apartment. This latter was littered with papers, among them a map or two, on which courses had been pricked. Beyond these all the room contained was a small bookcase, crowded with volumes, and a few chairs, only one upholstered. The only person present occupied this, and was seated at the desk, watching me, a cigarette smoking between his fingers. It was the olive hued man of the cellar, the one I had proven an enemy, and my teeth clenched whilst I sat there, to smile. In spite of his skin and dark eyes, I could not guess at his nationality, but felt an instinctive dislike to him, more deeply rooted than before, now that I comprehended how completely I was in his power.

"Take a seat, Craig," he said, speaking with a faint accent barely perceptible. "The second chair will be found the more comfortable. Now we can talk easily. May I offer you a cigarette?"

I accepted it more to exhibit my own coolness than from any desire to smoke, but without other response.

"I trust you have been fairly comfortable since coming on board the Sea Gull."

"As much so as a prisoner could naturally expect to be." I replied indifferently. "This vessel, then, is the Sea Gull?"

"At present—yes. The name is immaterial, so long as it sounds well and conforms to the manifest. However, just now the register reads Sea Gull, Henley, master; 250 tons, schooner rigged yacht."

"You are under steam?"

"Exactly—auxiliary steam power."

"In what trade?"

"Operated for pleasure exclusively," a slight tone of mockery in the soft voice. "A rather expensive luxury, of course, but available all the year around in this latitude."

"I failed to catch the captain's name—yours, I presume?"

He laughed, pausing to light another cigarette.

This statement of his identity, spoken calmly and smilingly, was a surprise.

"You see, Craig," he continued quietly, apparently comprehending my state of mind, "your little game is up. Not a bad plan originally—something of a criminal genius that fellow Neale—but he failed to count on the fact that I was very much alive and fully capable of attending to my own affairs. By the way, what part did the girl play in this little conspiracy? Merely a friend of yours who came along for company?"

"Certainly not!" I replied indignantly. "Have you seen her?"

"Not yet. I preferred coming to an understanding with you first."

"A condition you may not find as easy as you anticipate," I retorted, angered at his cool insolence. "If you are Philip Henley, then the lady you are holding prisoner is your wife."

He laughed, leaning back again in his chair.

"Well, hardly. Permit me to state, my dear sir, that I possess no such encumbrance."

"It happens," I contended coldly, "that I have seen the marriage certificate."

"Oh, you have! As much a forgery as some of these other precious documents. You will certainly grant that I ought to know whether I am married or not."

"I made no assertion relative to that."

"What did you assert?"

"That Philip Henley was married and that his wife or widow, as the case may be, is the lady who accompanied me to Carrollton."

CHAPTER XI.

I Change Front.

HE leaned forward, both arms on the desk, his black eyes narrowed into mere slits.

"Oh, I see," finally. "Driven out of one position, like a good general, you have another in reserve. Am I also to understand that you are prepared to submit proof of the death of Philip Henley? By the saints, I am becoming interested."

"Naturally if you claim to be the man. I have not said he was dead, for I do not know. I came down here believing him alive. His wife is almost convinced otherwise. All I am actually certain about now is that you are not the man."

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Mrs Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations of the throat and bronchial tubes.

HAD SALT RHEUM ON HANDS.
Could Not Do Her Work.

Eczema or salt rheum is one of the most common of all skin diseases. It may centre itself on any part of the body, but there are certain places where it most usually begins, such as the bends of the elbows, the backs of the knees, the groove behind the ears, the scalp, on the palms of the hands, between the fingers, or on the soles of the feet.

It is, as a rule, not dangerous, but is very irritating and annoying to the sufferer on account of the terrible itching and burning sensation it causes.

It is impossible to eradicate this trouble from the system by external applications, as it is caused by the blood being in an impure state. What you need is a good blood cleansing medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. A medicine that will drive out all the foulness from the blood and make it pure and rich.

Mrs. Adelard Theriault, Theriault, N.B., writes: "Some time ago I was troubled with salt rheum on my hands, and it was so bad I could not do any work. I tried several medicines, but they all failed to help me. One day a friend told me to try Burdock Blood Bitters, so I got a bottle, and before I had taken it my hands were better. I am not afraid to recommend B.B.B. to anyone."

B.B.B. has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

10,000 Cambridge Men in the Field.

When the new academical year commenced at Cambridge University, when the retiring Vice-Chancellor, Dr. M. R. James, (Provost of King's College), delivered a valedictory address summarising the effects of the war upon the fortunes and prospects of the university. He said that the University had shrunk to less than one-third of its former numbers, and this tremendous shrinkage had gravely affected its finance, that it would enter on the next year with an actual deficit of some £2,000.

No fewer than 10,000 Cambridge men were fighting or preparing to fight for the defence of their country, some several hundred had been wounded, and over 900 had won distinctions in the field. Between 2,000 or 3,000 of them would, in the ordinary course, still be living and reading amongst them. Many would not return.

Four hundred and seventy had fallen, of whom 120 should have been undergraduates. The numbers only here given were not large, but it would not be right to perpetuate names of those who would have made speak of the youth of Britain to come.

ABOUT GEESE

YOUNG geese are ready for market when the tips of their wings reach the tail, which is when they are about 10 weeks of age.

It is claimed that it is much easier to pick a gosling in warm than in cold weather, as the feathers do not "set so tight", and in picking them the flesh is not so apt to be torn.

When scalding poultry for market, it is best to first dry-pick the legs, so that they will not necessarily be placed in the water and change color. Neither the heads nor the feet should touch the water. The water ought to be as near boiling point as possible, without boiling.

The way to "plump" a dressed fowl is to dip it for 10 seconds in water nearly or quite boiling hot, and then immediately in cold water. Hang in a cool place until the animal heat is entirely out. Plumping gives the fowl a much more attractive appearance.

When the fattening season arrives, according to an experienced goose raiser, keep the fowls shut away from bathing water, and feed barleymeal, cornmeal, and beef scraps and some chopped celery. Keep them in a subdued light for three or four weeks, when they can be let out for a couple of days to enjoy the use of a pond. Then return to clean quarters, and feed on barleymeal, and milk, and chopped celery for two or three days, letting them go 24 hours before killing.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S.

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Naas, Lunenburg, N. S. "Five years ago three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is as soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

MULCHING STRAWBERRIES

Winter-killing is usually caused by the plants dying out too much during the winter months, or by alternate freezing and thawing.

The best mulch material to use is straw; this is placed on the plants four to six inches deep after the ground has been frozen.

In the spring after the ground is thawed, the straw is worked around the plants. This serves several purposes, such as keeping the patch free from weeds, conserving the moisture, and forming a clean mat for the berries to ripen on.

After the fruit has ripened, the straw should be removed.

GERMANY'S WAR IS PURELY OFFENSIVE

Only Excuse is Colonial Expansion—Other Nations in Self-defense—Germany "Encircled" Now

The wall of the Germans, high and low, that the wicked nations of the world have "encircled" Germany, strangling her commerce, preventing her peoples from emigrating or finding a place in the sun, and stifling her legitimate longing for colonies is analyzed and answered by a Gallic publicist, M. E. Pottier, member of the French Institute and professor of the Louvre in Paris. This distinguished writer says, in part:

Let us be frank and not dissimulate what it is that the Germans consider to be their most just grievance, namely, the colonies. "Germany cannot breathe, because she has no colonies, or not enough of them." Hence the affairs of Algeciras, of Agadir, of the Congo—warnings that the world would not understand. And then—the bomb burst!

If the "encircling" came from the colonial question, it came from long ago, for England and France, in securing since the eighteenth century vast domains in Asia and in Africa, could not dream of leaving a place for a power which waited till 1885 to acquire upon the African Coast territory to exploit, and, in pushing their territorial advantages in the course of the nineteenth century, England and France have rightfully increased a fortune acquired at the price of much time, gold and blood.

A Jail Bird Argument

That a newcomer should suddenly call out, "Halt! I want my place at the banquet!" is perhaps a right founded upon force, but no sensible man will claim to see here any result of an "encircling." Those nations which, shoulder to shoulder, bar the route against intruders are within their rights of legitimate defense. We know the reasoning resorted to in civil matters by him who has not toward him who has: "I have suffered the injustice of fate in being born poor. I have the same right to live as others; therefore, in helping myself, I repair an inquity, I re-establish order and justice." In civil life those who reason this way are marched off to prison between two "gendarmes." When shall we see a "gendarmerie" of the nations?

At bottom, the meaning of the "encircling" comes down to this: "I have not what I want. I need it. If you do not give it to me, I will take it." This present war has no other cause. All the diplomatic preliminaries of 1913 prove it. A pressure on the part of Germany, more or less violent, to bring about her colonial ambitions has been resisted for six years. The German press makes no secret of the fact that, as to France, it is her rich colonies of North Africa which are at stake.

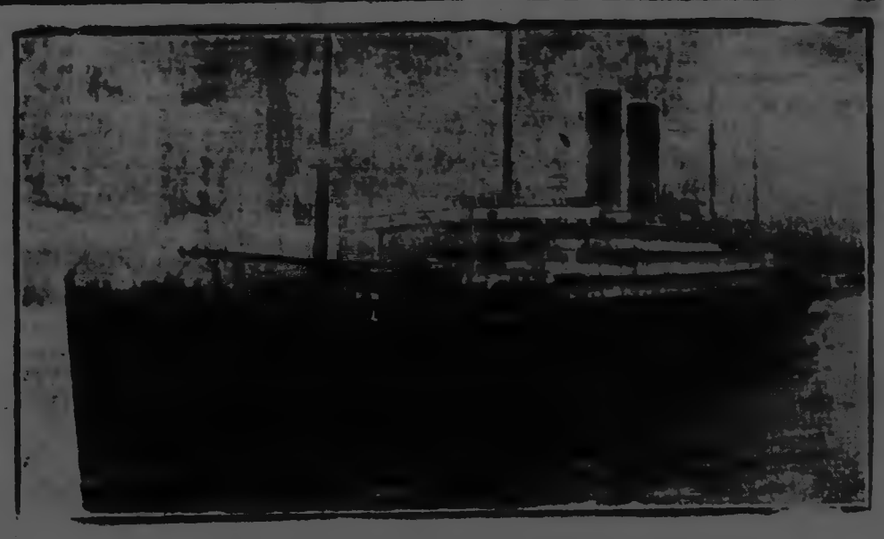
Encircled ?. Since When ?

Upon one point only the Germans are right. There has been "encircling." But it dates from the month of August, 1914! When Europe awoke one morning to find war at her gates, she knew in an instant the extent of her past blunders and of her blindness.

England, secured in such a jeering fashion of having prepared and secretly plotted all, has yet to persuade some of her people that there really is a war, that the country is actually in danger, and that the danger must be provided against. Everyone knows that were it not for the grave crime of the violation of Belgium England would not have budged. The movement has become so general that actually of twenty-eight years, Italy has not hesitated to break her chains in order to come to our side. The "encircling" exists, then. Whatever happens it will continue, and Germany will be responsible for having forged the chains with her own hands.

Encircling of Hate

One cannot forget that the Germans, in continuing peaceably their industrial and commercial conquests, with their qualities of intelligence and tenacious activity, would have been, ere fifty years had passed, masters of the commercial world. That future was forever ruined at the moment when he who called himself "Emperor of Peace" wished to be known as "Emperor of War." Whatever may be the issue of this struggle, Germany never again will find the unique position which once she held in the world. Conquered, she knows the fate that awaits her; she knows what losses in men and treasure will paralyze her for a century. Victorious, she knows also what sentiments will be aroused against her in the peoples whom she will have subjected to her brutal law. This will be the "encircling" of hate!



WHITE STAR LINER 'ADRIATIC' REPORTED SUNK

HEROES OF THE PEN AS BRITISH FIGHTERS

Several Famous Poets Also Masters of the Sword—Byron Became Greek Military Hero

The most notable poet who ever served in the ranks of the British army is Samuel Taylor Coleridge, who wrote, among other "trifles," "The Ancient Mariner." The story of his life in the army has never been fully told, but the outlines point to a romance of the first order. He had reached the mature age of nineteen at the time, and was at Jesus College, Cambridge, where he had fallen into debt as well as into love. He found both states very unsatisfactory. His creditors pressed him; his lady love would have nothing to say to him. So he went up to London and enlisted in the ranks of the 15th Dragoons. He proved the rawest recruit ever seen. He enlisted under an assumed name. At last his true condition was discovered through one of the officers finding a passage from some obscure Latin poet, scribbled on the back of a stable door. What trooper had done this? That was the question. Evidently the famous regiment was entertaining an angel unawares, or, at any rate, a Latin scholar of marvellous quality. Coleridge's little escapade was up. He was discovered, and, after a good deal of difficulty, he was bought out, and returned to his University.

Robert Burns served as a volunteer, and had a military funeral. In the spring of 1795 a volunteer corps was raised in Dumfries to defend the country while the regular army was abroad at war with France. Burns, who was then living at Dumfries, offered himself, and was accepted. He was quite awkward. But if he could not use a musket well he could write a war song which has never been equalled, and "Scots, Wha Hae," has fired the hearts of Scotsmen all over the world.

Greeks Idolize Byron

Byron's enlistment as a soldier in the ranks of the Greek army is an undying memory for that brave and patriotic race. Every recurring anniversary of the poet's death finds the Greeks in London making pious pilgrimage to the poet's statue in Park Lane to lay a tribute of devotion there. Probably the Greeks would rather fight against themselves than go to war with the countrymen of Byron. He is one of their national glories, for the poet who wrote "The Isles of Greece," also laid down his life for the cause of Greek freedom, so long ruined by the usurping Turks. He had just been made commander-in-chief of an important expedition when he took a fever, and died at Missolonghi, where there now stands a monument to his memory.

Lander Led a Regiment

Walter Savage Landor, of whom Swinburne said that "he won for himself such a double crown of glory in verse and in prose as has been won by no other Englishman but Milton," was once a soldier. In 1808 Landor left England for Spain as a volunteer, to serve in the national army against Napoleon, at the head of a regiment supported at his sole expense. If he did not do a great deal of fighting, he gathered material for his great poem, "Count Julian," a magnificent work, less well known than it deserves to be.

Stone walls do not a prison make was written by a poet who was also a soldier—Colonel Richard Lovelace. He was an ideal soldier, especially to the fair sex. He was a great Royalist and spent his fortune for the cause of Charles I. Later he served in the French army and was wounded at Dunkirk.

Rear-Admiral Capps, Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance in the United States Navy, is the only Jew to hold flag rank in any of the world's navies.

The family motto of Captain Lance Hawker, the aviator V.C., is the very appropriate one of "The hawk seeks booty, we seek glory."

HAPLESS BOY SCOUT

Why He Rebelled Against Heroic War Service

A patriotic Boy Scout was loaned by the War Office to an amateur ambulance corps organized by Mayfair ladies with an itch for the limelight. Listen to what happened to him: "There was a lot of dressed up society women all trying to give orders to one another. One of them said to me: 'I hope you have come here prepared to obey orders.' Wasn't that enough to put a chap's back up for the start? I was quite prepared to do my duty, and I didn't answer her back. They sent me upstairs to the nursery, where a lot of girls and flappers were learning to become nurses. For the first day they did nothing but put bandages and splints and tourniquets on me, and I tell you, if our chaps made such a muddle of it as they did, we'd duck them in a horse trough.

"The next day they made me undress and get into bed, and they spent the whole time changing sheets under me, feeding me on the bully gruel they made, and messing about with me. The next day it came to the limit. Those idiots of girls were being taught how to hold a sponge and how to tell when hot water is hot! The lady who was instructing them washed me pretty nearly all over, and then left me for them to practise on. Seven of them washed my face, one after the other, but when the eighth came along, a flapper of seventeen with a grin on her face like a bully Cheshire cat, all ready to dab the soap suds into my eyes, I said 'No I'm dashed if I will!'

"I jumped out of bed, put on my uniform, went off and wrote to Kitchener about it. I got no reply; so I resigned from my company. I want you to know that I'm quite ready to do anything a soldier ought to do, but I absolutely will not let eight grinning Cheshire cats wash my face one after another. That's final!"

TENT CATERPILLARS

By F. L. Washburn.

TENT caterpillars come from an egg laid by a brownish moth, of medium size. The eggs are laid in July, being deposited in bands around the smaller twigs of apple, wild cherry, and other trees. They hatch the following spring, and the caterpillars begin feeding upon the young leaves.

When full-grown, the caterpillars are about two inches long, somewhat hairy, and one form has a longitudinal white stripe in the centre of the back. At this time they leave the tree and wander off singly, to seek sheltered places where they spin their cocoons. Three weeks later, the moths emerge and lay their eggs.

Remedies

If a grower is spraying his fruit trees faithfully with arsenate of lead in any shape, this of itself will prevent injury from tent caterpillars, since the internal poison is fatal to them; or, the tents may be crushed with the gloved hand, when they can be reached; or, they can be burned by a torch on the end of a pole; or they can be twisted out of their place by means of a wire brush made for the purpose, attached to the end of a long pole. These remedies are of course only when the caterpillars are in their tents early in the morning or in wet weather. Even on trees which are not orchard sprayed a thin spraying of arsenate of lead will kill caterpillars as observed, would probably stop their depredations.

In the case of the forest tent caterpillar the larvae can be destroyed when they collect in bunches on the trunks of trees. Prune off and destroy the rings bobbing the eggs.

Anthracnose forms grayish sunken spots with purplish borders on the canes, and similar spots on the leaves. It sometimes ruins entire plantations.

ALLIES' ENDLESS WEALTH

Britain and France Can Stand War's Strain Longest

Statisticians and financiers, who have calculated the enormous losses of all belligerent nations in the war frequently put themselves the question: How long can even the richest powers hold out? and, How far is Europe from sheer bankruptcy? A glance over the outstanding features of the war expenditure is enough to make anyone wonder how it was possible to guess such fabulous sums. Premier Asquith, in one of his speeches, remarked that the war against Napoleon cost the English nation about $5,000,000 per week. The present war required $105,000,000. In reckoning the expenses of the war, no consideration is made of the destruction of cities and villages, the laying waste of fields and above all the elimination of capital in the districts where battles have taken place. On the the other hand, the wealth of Europe and the accumulation of capital in the last forty years of peace are such that many statisticians conclude that Europe will be able to stand the war's depredations for years.

England can prosecute the war for six and a half years at the same cost as in the first year, before she will expend the same portion of her financial resources that America did in the four years of Civil War. This means that John Bull is still very far from bankruptcy. Almost the same applies to France, the next richest country in the world. France's wealth is proportionately somewhat smaller than England's. Following are statistics of the national wealth of the belligerent powers:

To each Englishman $1,777; to each Frenchman $1,625; to each German $923; to each Italian $588; to each Austrian $500; to each Russian $250.

This table is highly significant, not only in times of peace, but also during war. England's national wealth is as large as Germany's and Austria's combined. If the two Central Empires will be able to continue this war an other few years, England and France the two richest countries in the world certainly can, and if "silver bullets" are really the deciding factor of the war, as is universally believed, the Entente Allies must be victorious. Proportionately, Italy is a wealthier nation than Austria; and as to Russia, we must consider that the peasants who contribute the great majority of soldiers, can exist by strict economy, on very little. For Russia the cost of waging war is considerably lower than that of any other of the belligerent nations. England and France, who may be called the bankers of the world, can in any event maintain financially all the Russian armies. Their resources, when we take into account the natural opulence of their colonies, can be truly said to be inexhaustible.

LAND FOR THE NATION

Monopolists Have No Chance in Desperate Germany

A traveller from Germany gave to the Sydney (Australia) Standard some idea of the way the German people have set themselves to locally provide necessary food. The protection of the British fleet stopped over sea supplies to such an extent as to threaten a famine. But there was plenty of land in Germany, if it was only put to use. So everybody got busy growing foodstuffs. The restrictions of land monopoly were broken down. Land is cultivated right up to the rails of the railway lines. In fact it is said, that railway officials are even cultivating the land between the rails. It is a striking example of what can be done when the paralyzing arm of the land monopolist is arrested. The United Kingdom largely imports foodstuffs because private owners of land prevent its use in a natural way. It is the same in other countries.

THE ROBIN

THE robin in many parts of the country, one of the most cherished of our birds, is found throughout the States east of the Great Plains, and is represented farther west and south by slightly different sub-species. It breeds far north through Canada, and is found even in Alaska. Although the great bulk of the species leaves the Northern States in winter, a few individuals remain in sheltered swamps, where wild berries furnish abundant food.

Examinations of 1,930 stomachs show that 42 per cent. of its food is animal matter, principally insects, while the remainder is made up largely of small fruits and berries. Over 16 per cent. consists of beetles, about one-third of which are useful ground beetles, taken mostly in spring and fall when other insects are scarce. Grasshoppers make up about five per cent. of the whole food, but in August they comprise 17 per cent. Caterpillars form about nine per cent., while the rest of the animal food, about 11 per cent., is made up of various insects, with a few spiders, snails, and angleworms. All the grasshoppers, caterpillars, and bugs, with a large portion of the beetles, are injurious, and it is safe to say that noxious insects comprise more than one-third of the robin's food.

Vegetable food forms 58 per cent. of the stomach contents, over 42 per cent. being wild fruits and only a little more than eight per cent. being possibly cultivated varieties. Cultivated fruit amounting to about 25 per cent. was found in the stomachs in June and July, but only a trifle in August. Wild fruit, on the contrary, is eaten every month and constitutes a staple food during half the year. No less than 65 species of fruit were identified in the stomachs; of these the most important were four species of dogwood, three of wild cherries, three of wild grapes, four of greenbriar, two of holly, two of elder; and cranberries, huckleberries, blueberries, barberries, service berries, blackberries, and persimmons; together with four species of sumac and various other seeds not strictly fruit.

The depredations of the robin seem to be confined to the smaller and earlier fruits, few, if any, complaints being made that it eats apples, peaches, pears, grapes, or even late cherries. By the time these are ripe the forests and hedges are teeming with wild fruits which the bird evidently finds more to its taste. The cherry, unfortunately for man, ripens so early that it is almost the only fruit accessible at a time when the bird's appetite has been sharpened by a long-continued diet of insects, earthworms, and dried berries, and it is no wonder that at first the rich juicy morsels are greedily eaten.

While the robin takes some cultivated fruits, it must be remembered that, being a natural enemy of the insect world, it has been working during the whole season to make that crop a possibility, and when the fruit ripens the robin already has a standing account with the farmer for services rendered, with the credits up to this time entirely on his side.

Since the robin takes 10 times as much wild as cultivated fruit, it seems unwise to destroy the birds to save so little. Nor is this necessary, for with care both birds and fruit may be preserved. Where much fruit is grown it is no great loss to give up one tree to the birds, and in some cases the crop can be protected by scarecrows. Where wild fruit is not abundant, a few fruit bearing shrubs and vines judiciously planted will serve for ornament and provide food for the birds. The Russian mulberry is a vigorous grower and a profuse bearer, ripening at the same time as the cherry. So far as observation has gone, most birds seem to prefer its fruit to any other. It is believed that a number of mulberry trees planted around the garden or orchard would fully protect the more valuable fruits.

ELIZA'S WAY.

Former mistress, I would like to give you a good recommendation. Eliza, but my conscience compels me to state that you never got the meals ready at the proper time. I wonder how I can put it in a nice sort of sewway?"

Eliza: "You might say that I got the meals the same as I got me pay."

Of all overworked women probably the housewife is the hardest worked. She has so much to attend to, with very little help. Her work can be lightened if she knows the value of system and she should try and take a short rest in the daytime. A physician who became famous almost around the world, Doctor Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., the specialist in woman's diseases, for many years practiced medicine in a farming district. He there observed the lack of system in the planning of the work.

If it is a headache, a backache, a sensation of irritability or twitching and uncontrollable nervousness, something must be wrong with the head or back, a woman naturally says, but all the time the real trouble very often centers in the organs. In nine cases out of ten the seat of the difficulty is here, and a woman should take rational treatment for its cure. The disorder should be treated steadily and systematically with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

For diseases from which women suffer "Favorite Prescription" is a powerful restorative. During the last fifty years it has banished from the lives of tens of thousands of women the pain, worry, misery and distress caused by these diseases.

If you are a sufferer, get Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription in liquid or tablet form today. Then address Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and get confidential medical advice entirely free.

GERMAN LETTERS TELL OF CHAMPAGNE HORRORS

PARIS, Nov. 17.—Letters written by German soldiers in the course of the battle of Champagne, found on prisoners and dead, throw some light on the spirits of the troops.

"The battle front has disappeared in a cloud of smoke," wrote one. "Nothig can be seen, for the French artillery fires almost as rapidly as the infantry. One armoured shelter was crushed in, and not one of the sixteen occupants escaped. Men are falling like flies, and the trenches are nothing but debris."

"Shells are simply raining upon us," another wrote. "If the end were only near! This is the cry every one should raise 'Peace! Peace!'"

"Cruel hours!" a Captain noted in his diary. "It is as if the earth were crumbling up. Our losses are very heavy. One company of 250 men had sixty killed last night, and a battery close by lost sixteen dead. A shelter five yards deep, protected by two rows of logs and two and a half yards of earth, was caved in as if it were only a match. That's a specimen of the force of the French shells."

"... any of our men are useless," wrote the Captain of the Twenty-fourth Infantry in a report intended his superior officer. "We must have reinforcements at once. Our men are dying of fatigue, privation, and loss of sleep."

"Nothing to eat; heavy losses," noted another. The French haven't ceased firing since the morning of the 21st; it has gone on sixty hours. How long will it last? Every spot of our position is so bombarded that it is next to impossible for human beings to hold out any longer."

"Six of our men were killed by shells yesterday morning," wrote a Captain. "Our trench has been nearly levelled. The Eleventh Battalion has suffered heavily."

How the reinforcements were rushed up is revealed by another officer. "We were crowded into automobiles," he wrote, "and rushed madly from Vouziers to Tahure. After two hours' rest in the rain and six hours' march to our position under constant shell fire, we reached the trench, losing fifty-six out of 280 men of the Second Company by the way. We were 118 hours without food in a trench not two feet deep. Hell couldn't be worse. Six hundred more men just arrived; they will only replace the killed and wounded of the past five days."

Surprise and the demoralization of the German first line troops by sustained artillery fire have both been given as explaining the considerable number of prisoners taken. Orders of German commanders that fell into the hands of the French indicate that the attack was not a surprise, and there has been a natural reluctance to believe that German organization and discipline were at fault. Information obtained from eyewitnesses of the operations is to the effect that the German counterattacks were neither spirited nor well planned.

If the attack was no surprise, the force of it was a revelation; it appears to have thrown a certain confusion into the German ranks, resulting in precipitate and almost disorderly engagement of reserves. The men seemed both exhausted and demoralized—incapable of properly undertaking a general counter-attack. Overconfidence in the solidity in the first line trenches seemed to be general among the officers, for many of them were found in bed at Trou-Bricot a half hour after the attack began. They were ignorant of the capture of the first line of trenches because the telephone wires had been cut.

In the counterattacks divisions were broken up and scattered, regiments even were divided, battalions sent to right and left in absolute contradiction of the German spirit of organization. There were engaged between the Maison de Champagne and Hill 199 thirty-two battalions belonging to twenty-one different regiments.

What acted most on the nerves of the German troops, according to information brought out by questioning prisoners, was the continuity of the French artillery fire, the weakness of their own reply, the extent of their losses, lack of food for several days and thirst. They surrendered in sections in many instances and in whole companies in some. All acknowledged that they were tired of the struggle.

A fact that is regarded as significant is that the reinforcements the Germans sent up during the battle were mostly of the contingent of 1915 with some volunteers of the contingent of 1916, previously held in reserve at their bases. The conclusion drawn by some military critics is that Germany is nearing the day when she will no longer be able to maintain her present force on all her lines.

A SIMPLE WAY TO REMOVE DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

The Difference.

At a dinner party recently they were speaking of father's fondness for hanging around the cigar store half the night, when one of the company said he was reminded of a conundrum along that line.

A bunch of beautiful girls were rallying around an ice-cream table one afternoon, when one of the party suddenly became possessed of a happy thought.

"Oh, girls!" she exclaimed. "I just heard the most perfectly lovely conundrum! What is the difference between an old maid and a married woman?"

"Give us the answer," said another of the fairies, while the rest pondered. "We couldn't guess it in a week of Wednesdays."

"An old maid," was the smiling response of the first, "looks for a husband every day, and a married woman looks for one every night."

Doctor Said Sciatica--- Rheumatism--Lumbago

But He Could Not Help Me, and Endorsed the Use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Wm. Parker, 108 Cayuga street, Brantford, Ont., tells in the following letter of his remarkable experience with Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills: "My doctor treated me for some time for Sciatica, Rheumatism, Lumbago, but to no purpose, for I had to lay off work. The visiting officer of Sick Benefit called to se me and advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, stating that he had been cured of the same trouble by their use. I asked the druggist about them and he recommended them highly. Not being satisfied with this, I went back to my doctor, and when he said they were good I began their use. The promptness with which they enl'vened the action of the kidneys and bowels was wonderful, and it was not long before I was rid of all my trouble.

"I was so bad that I could only walk by hanging on to a chair or the wall. My wife had to lace my shoes. Only those who have had this ailment can realize the way I suffered. I am writing this letter to let people who have my trouble know of these pills. You are at liberty to use this letter, and if anyone interested will call or write to me I will give every detail."

Write to Mr. Parker, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify this statement. He will do this out of the gratitude he feels for his cure and because he realizes how difficult it is to obtain the cure of these dreadfully painful ailments.

There are so many treatments recommended for rheumatism that you naturally doubt them all. Here is an opportunity for you to verify the cure and put this great medicine to the test. It will only cost you a quarter to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They get at the very foundation of rheumatism, and by removing the poisons from the system take away the cause of pains and aches.

BRITAIN'S PLANS TO WIN THE LAST BATTLE

French Writer Commends Admirable Speed and Thoroughness of Kitchener's Men—Camp in France Shown

Surely there must be something in the military uniform or in camp air which transforms the men that come within its influence, for while the average Englishman is a slow worker the speed with which he throws up earthworks, digs trenches or performs any other kind of military work quite aside from fighting, is a constant source of surprise to correspondents visiting the English camps in France and Belgium. A French correspondent said the other day: "The district of which the English soldiers take possession, within a very few days becomes like a piece of old England, with solid houses, barracks, engineering and repair shops, model stables and even movie theatres. The Englishman, however, never boasts of his work, but rather tries to keep everybody in ignorance of the marvels he has made, and it is surely considerably easier to enter Heaven than to get into an English camp."

After describing how he finally succeeded in getting permission to enter a certain English camp "somewhere in France," which, by the way, was guarded by a well known member of Parliament serving as a private, the correspondent paints a vivid picture of the life and orderly activity he found there. "One might have believed oneself suddenly transported into the fair of Nishni Novgorod," he writes. "Scores of wagons drawn by spick and span mules were hurrying in all directions through the well planned streets and men carrying heavy burdens on their heads were seen everywhere. Some distance from the gate the crowds grew less dense and the air was filled with a smell of tobacco, soap and tooth powder. It was the hour of the morning toilet. Soldiers stripped to the waist and carrying towels under their arms hurried towards a building from the interior of which came the sound of splashing showers and of naked feet running on wet planks. An officer told me that these shower baths cost $40,000."

Ginger For Gin Canteen

"Some distance away were the canteens, from which all liquor is banished. Gin and whiskey had never entered the camp, but the soldiers had found a harmless substitute in a beverage made with ginger and cinnamon which burned their throats sufficiently to maintain the illusion that they were drinking the real stuff. Those who disliked this concoction could get tea or coffee, which the Tommies have learned to like when properly made as in France.

"The officers' mess resembled the dining saloon on a trans-Atlantic steamer, the same neatness, same kind of furniture comfort, though of course less elegance. Each officer had his own square tent, well, nay even elaborately furnished, and the walls were covered with photographs, mostly of fair women relatives at home. Nearly every officer had his dog, generally a fox terrier, which followed him everywhere during the day and protected him against the ubiquitous rats at night. Many of these dogs had French names and understood French and barked furiously if you pronounced the words Boche, Kaiser, Kronprinz or Wilhelm in their presence. I had no doubt they considered these personages some kind of especially malicious and objectionable rats.

"The tents of the soldiers were about a hundred yards away. Each sheltered 18 men and if you entered one of them you were immediately struck by the general air of cleanliness and order. Beyond the tents was a football field for the men and several tennis courts for the officers, who, however, often took part in the football matches. The English soldier is quite well drilled considering the short time he has been given to learn the rudiments of military training and he is almost invariably a good shot. I saw him at target practice several times and I pity the German who gets within range.

The Unique Kitchener

"My visit to the camp which lasted over five hours ended with an inspection of the kitchen, the post offices, the workshops, the stables, the munition magazines and the enormous artillery park. The contemptible little army of General French in France has become a formidable army long ago. It is wonderful indeed what Lord Kitchener has done and probably no other man in the world could have performed a similar task within such a short time. When I left the camp the words of a great English statesman occurred to me: 'The English never win but one battle, but it is generally the last!'"

ALPINE FIGHTING

All sorts of out-of-the-way and often unexpected difficulties are met by the Italian troops in the fight against the Austrians. Several fights, for instance, have taken place at heights between 7,000 and 10,000 feet above sea level. At these great heights the ordinary gun sights are useless. The higher the altitude the rare the air becomes and farther a gun will shoot. Most of the gun sights are made for and tested at practically sea level, so the Italian gunners in the Alps would have found that their guns were not shooting accurately if special gun sights had not been used. A shell at 5,000 feet up, for instance, which at the ordinary level would travel 3,500 yards would go 2,560 yards, while at 7,500 feet altitude it would be going 3,600 yards, or 100 yards further than it ought to go. All the Italian mountain guns, therefore, have to have specially corrected sights. The British have, of course, used similar mountain guns in India and other places, but there has never been a campaign waged at such a height as the one between the Italians and Austrians.

GOVERNING HUNLAND

The Emperor of Germany, as Emperor, promulgates the laws and supervises their execution, but has no veto. All official acts must be countersigned by the Chancellor, who takes the responsibility for all such acts, not to the Legislature, but to the Emperor himself. Theoretically the two bodies of the German Parliament—Bundesrat and Reichstag—are equal in the power of initiating legislation, but in reality all important legislation is initiated by the Bundesrat; in the Reichstag the rule of the House regulates initiation. The members of the Reichstag are all "uninstructed." They are elected by universal manhood suffrage—all males over twenty-five years of age may vote except paupers, naval and military men, bankrupts, and those personally ineligible. The members of the Bundesrat are chosen by the Government of the various States; they represent the Governments as such, and vote as State units; they are appointed for each session; the Bundesrat meets once a year. There are fifty-eight members of the Bundesrat and their position in the Imperial Parliament is like that of Ambassadors from foreign States.

As King of Prussia, controlling the seventeen Prussian votes in the Bundesrat, William II. has great power in the Imperial Parliament; as Emperor he is in absolute control of the military and diplomatic departments of the empire, except that the consent of the Bundesrat is required for making "offensive" war, and the Chancellor must countersign all his decrees; the Emperor appoints all Ambassadors, public Ministers, etc. Different systems of voting prevail in the management of the State affairs of the various parts of the empire; each State, except the "Reichsland" of Alsace-Lorraine and the Grand Duchies of Mecklenburg-Schwerin and Mecklenburg-Strelitz, has its separate representative assembly to take charge of its internal affairs.

A German Bomb

This illustration is of one of the largest kind of bombs which the Huns drop from their aircraft. It is about ten inches in diameter at the base, is bound with rope soaked in highly inflammable oil and filled with high explosives and a pitch-like mixture which takes fire as soon as the explosion occurs.

IF BRITAIN STOOD OUT

How Vastly Different the War Would Have Been

Suppose Britain had not entered this war, what would the position be to-day? What would have happened? What would be to come?

1. The German and Austrian armies would from the outset have shown a more marked superiority over the French and Russian armies than they have done.

2. Germany would have taken command of the Ocean. Her navy was stronger than those of France and Russia combined.

3. The resources of most of the world, including the United States and even the British Empire, would have been available to German money, instead of to France and Russia. War supplies and food from everywhere would have gone to Germany, and been barred from France and Russia.

4. The foreign commerce of France and Russia would have been destroyed with the resultant weakness of their defensive powers.

5. Japan would not have declared war against Austria.

6. Italy would not have declared war against Germany.

7. Turkey would have been earlier in on the German side, and attacking the Russian flank in great force.

8. Russia and France would not have had Britain's financial aid, and their credit would have been dubious everywhere, even with their own people.

9. Germany's crowd would be able financially, commercially and industrially to carry war on to any length—to exhaust, if not directly to conquer—and to exact in the end whatever terms and indemnities they chose. Germany would annex Belgium, part of the northern coast of France, some or all of the French overseas possessions, the French and Russian navies, part of Western Russia, and part of Poland. Austria would annex Serbia and the rest of Poland. France and Russia would be crushed by huge indmenities.

10. With enormously increased territories, with a greater navy, with war chests replenished by indemnities, with the rest of the world terrorised, the Teuton allies would come to a reckoning with single-handed Britain.

Isn't it so? This war is a horrible business. But the entry of Britain into it was the salvation of civilization and liberty—including the salvation of the British Empire.—Ottawa Journal.

ATTRACTIVE DISHES

HOW much food do we waste in a week because we do not know how to make up attractive dishes from small quantities that have been left over from a previous meal. For example, a half a can of tomatoes may be on the pantry shelf, but that is too small an amount to use in that way. What shall we do with it? Miss Oberlin of the Colorado Agricultural College makes a few suggestions along the line of making profitable use of tomato left-overs. She says: Half a can of tomatoes may be quickly made into tomato sauce which will glorify a meat loaf, breaded veal chops, plain omelet, or a dish of baked beans or plain boiled macaroni.

Tomato Sauce

One and one-quarter cups tomato juice and pulp, two tablespoons butter, one teaspoon salt, two tablespoons flour mixed to a smooth, thin paste with cold water, a few grains cayenne pepper. Add the flour and water mixture to the tomato juice and boil from five to 10 minutes, stirring all the time. Remove from the fire, add butter, salt, and pepper, and if desired, one tablespoon Worcestershire sauce.

Mexican Sauce

One onion, one red pepper, one-quarter teaspoon celery salt, two cups tomato juice and pulp, one green pepper, two tablespoons butter, one tablespoon Worcestershire sauce. Chop the onion, cook for five minutes in butter, add peppers finely chopped, then add the tomatoes and seasoning. Simmer for 15 minutes, then add thin slices of cold boiled or roasted beef, and heat in it for a few minutes.

ONE OF THE BUNCH.

"Would you be kind enough to return my photograph?" she wrote. "I gave it to you in a moment of girlish folly, and I have since had occasion to regret that I was so thoughtless in such matters."

Of course she pictured that photograph framed and hung up in his room, and was inclined to think that he would part with it with deep regret. Just why she wanted it returned is immaterial. Of course he had offended her in some way, and she wished to test his love, but it is unnecessary to inquire how.

The answer to her note came the following morning.

"I regret," it read, "that I am unable at this late date to pick out your photograph. However, I send you my entire collection, numbering a little over 500, and would request that you return all except your own by passenger train at my expense.—Tid-Bits.

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its colour and lustre or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful and thousands of women and men who value that even colour, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully drakening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

CLAIM REGAN WON'T RETURN TO OFFICE FROM VACATION

Police Superintendent Michael Regan, who has been checkmated at every point by the police captains since he declared war on them, it is said, has decided to let up on them for a while and see if he can catch them unawares. Sunday's attempt to discredit the police captains with excise violations was the last move.

It was rumored about police headquarters that Superintendent Regan was going to take his annual vacation, but it is said on second thought he decided to wait until after the annual ball of the Buffalo Police Mutual Aid and Benefit association on Thanksgiving Eve. Superintendent Regan has never been known to wait so long for his vacation as he has this year.

Superintendent Regan generally takes 25 days' vacation, and should he wait until after the ball, as he states he will, it will be close to January 1 when his vacation will be at an end, and wise police officials claim he will never return to the headquarters building as superintendent of police.

It is understood that Superintendent Regan wants to get out of the office before the first of the year, but his dignity and pride check him because he is being made enforce the laws. It is said he would get out in a very short time if he was not "under fire."

For the last couple of weeks Superintendent Regan has been cleaning out sections of his office, and from all indications it looks as though he will take his $2,230 a year and take a seat in the background for a rest of his natural life. The superintendent has been getting stuff together which has accumulated in his office for years.

However, he has not made an effort to wrap up the several volumes of clipping books he has. It might be said that no clippings have been entered in the latest volume since the demand for good government was made on the superintendent.

Superintendent Regan declares he has many offers of positions throughout the country, but can't say whether he will take any of them.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

JIMMY'S OPPORTUNITY.

A Very Important Conversation That Settled Matters.

By HARRIET LUMMIS SMITH.
[Copyright, by Associated Literary Press.]

Jimmy Fitzgerald was downcast. Everybody was against him, he told himself, and in that sweeping generalization he included even Carroll. For if it had not been for Carroll's connivance, her tame submission to the manoeuvers of interfering relatives, the words which had trembled on his lips for three dragging months would have been spoken long ago.

From the standpoint of a disinterested spectator Jimmy was ready to admire the cleverness which so far had circumvented him. "Good team work," he denominated it. The ingenious air with which Grandmother Reynolds would appear to claim Carroll's assistance in regard to a dropped stitch in her knitting just when Jimmy was bringing matters to a climax and Carroll was turning a most becoming pink was only equaled by the chuckle like innocence with which Carroll's small brother would rush bawling into the library with a bloody handkerchief held to his nose, interrupting an eloquent outburst beginning "Since the first hour I saw you"—

In Jimmy's estimation this was all the harder to bear because he was so perfectly eligible. Character and prospects alike were beyond question. The most serious accusation that could be brought against the match was that both of them were young. Carroll's sister, Marie, was of the opinion that an engagement would be absurd, and Jimmy thought he knew why. If George Freeman, Marie's latest admirer, had been as eager to propose as Jimmy was, the latter young man felt positive that no obstacles would be put in his way.

With a duplicity foreign to his usually frank nature, Jimmy lost no opportunity of expressing to Freeman the admiration with which Marie inspired him. If the elder sister were once engaged or, better still, married, Jimmy believed there would be hope for him.

Meanwhile the family opposition showed itself in a system of espionage which kept Jimmy's great avowal unspoken. If he suggested a walk, either Mrs. Reynolds declared that Carroll's cold would not permit her to venture out or Marie invited herself to accompany them; if the theater, a chaperon was necessary. Whole souled co-operation on Carroll's part would have relieved the situation, but the girl knew so well what Jimmy wanted that her modesty shrank from giving him anything but the most negative assistance. Accordingly Jimmy decided that she, too, was against him and gave himself up to thoughts of unutterable gloom.

He called one afternoon wearing an expression of grim determination which, if he had known it, put the conspirators on their guard. He was ushered into the family living room, and Mrs. Reynolds entertained him till Carroll came down. Jimmy made a few inane comments on the weather, his eyes devouring the pretty girlish figure seated demurely in the opposite corner.

"It's too fine a day for the house," said Jimmy. "Suppose we take a little walk."

"Really, Carroll, dear," said Mrs. Reynolds before Carroll could reply, "it won't do for you to leave the house. Mrs. Baker is likely to want you any moment. We have a dressmaker here, Mr. Fitzgerald," she continued, turning to Jimmy with her most charming smile.

"Can't we sit on the piazza?" suggested Jimmy. Carroll agreed to the suggestion. But, as it proved, her small brother, Bob, was in possession of the hammock, and he remained for two hours, enlivening the occasion by describing the exploits of the ball team.

An ear splitting whistle in the rear of the house relieved them at length of Bob's company. Without delay Jimmy plunged into the subject uppermost in his mind.

"Carroll, there's something I want to say to you"—

"Carroll, Mrs. Baker is ready for you," said Marie's voice behind the parlor shutters. That she had been waiting there, biding her time, Jimmy could not doubt. Then the gate clicked, and Mr. Reynolds came up the walk. He settled himself in the chair Carroll had vacated, and he and Jimmy talked politics till dinner time.

The young man refused an invitation to remain to dinner. He went away with a lowering brow and a heavy heart. But at half past 9 that evening the telephone bell rang, interrupting a game of bridge going on in the den. Carroll, who was nearest to the instrument, pushed back her chair and went to answer the summons.

"Hello—hello! Oh, yes, this is Carroll." She turned a pretty, flushed face toward the three at the card table. "Please don't talk for a minute. I can't hear."

The next minute she heard very distinctly, for the room had become absolutely still, and the voice at the other end of the wire was clear and penetrating.

"This is Jimmy, Carroll. There's something I've been trying to say to you for three months. And I'm going to say it now."

"Why, I don't see"—

"Well, it doesn't matter whether you see or not. Just listen. Ever since I met you on Phil Reynolds' yacht a year ago I've loved you—from the very first hour."

"Oh, hush!"

"I'm not going to hush. I think about you every minute while I'm awake and dream about you when I'm asleep. I'm not any good any more, and I shan't be till I find out whether you care for me or not. And if you don't I'm going to the Philippines or somewhere."

"Don't talk so loud."

"I don't care who hears me. I've kept it to myself just as long as I can. Carroll, darling, can't you care for me a little?"

"Sh! Come tomorrow."

"I'll come tomorrow fast enough if you tell me what I want to hear. Haven't I been coming day after day for months without getting a chance to tell you that I love the very ground you walk on? And now I've got it I'm going to wait till you say yes or no. If you can't love me I might as well"—

Abruptly the voice ceased. Carroll waited expectantly. Then a terrible suspicion flashed through her mind which in a moment had become a certainty. Tremulously she accused the operator, "You've cut me off."

"What number do you want?" replied that young woman.

"Oh, I don't know. I haven't any idea. Oh, why did you cut me off just then?"

The trio at the card table were staring at her strangely. "How absurdly you are acting, Carroll," exclaimed Marie sharply. "Come and finish the game."

"Yes, come and finish the game, Carroll," said her father. "The other matter can be settled another time, I hope."

"We're got 'em on the run, Miss Carroll," chuckled George Freeman, who happened to be Carroll's partner.

Slowly the girl moved toward her place. What would Jimmy think? Perhaps he would believe that she had deliberately hung up the receiver, preferring this way of giving him his answer. And he had spoken of the Philippines. She grew a little dizzy and grasped for her chair.

Just at that moment the telephone rang again, and Carroll bounded toward it, her agility in surprising contrast to her late uncertainty and feebleness.

"Hello! Hello!"

"Hello, Jimmy. I will. I mean I do."

A long pause. "I suppose it's too late for me to come up this evening," suggested Jimmy tentatively.

"Of course not. Only hurry." She hung up the receiver and turned a radiant face. Again Marie looked suspicious.

"That must have been a very important conversation," she said soothingly. "I hope it's settled now."

Carroll answered her with a dignity in which there was no suggestion of the downtrodden younger sister.

"It is," she replied. "Jimmy and I are engaged."

STANDARDIZING CANADIAN EGGS

ONE of the most important developments to date in the improvement of the Canadian egg trade was the action taken by the Canadian Produce Association last winter in adopting definite standards for Canadian eggs. Hitherto each market and in most markets each dealer had a system of grading peculiar to his own trade. This resulted in endless confusion to the consumer and great difficulty was experienced at times on the part of the producer in finding a satisfactory market for his product. Three general classes for eggs are provided under the standards, viz.: "Fresh gathered," "Storage," and "Cracked and Dirties." Four grades are provided in the first class, three in the second and two in the third.

The grades in the "Fresh Gathered" class are "Specials," "Extras," "No. 1's," and "No. 2's." The grade "Specials" is omitted from the "Storage" class, and both specials and extras from the class for "Cracked and Dirties."

"Specials," according to the standards, are eggs of uniform size weighing over 24 ounces to the dozen or over 45 pounds net to the 30 dozen case; absolutely clean, strong and sound in shell; air cell small, not over 3-16 of an inch in depth; white of egg firm and clear and yolk dimly visible; free from blood clots.

"Extras" are eggs of good size, weighing at least 24 ounces to the dozen or 45 pounds net to the 30 dozen case; clean, sound in shell; air cell less than ¼ of an inch in depth; with white of egg firm, and yolk slightly visible."

"No. 1's" are eggs weighing at least 23 ounces to the dozen or 43 pounds net to the 30 dozen case; clean, sound in shell; air cell less than ⅜ inch in depth; white of egg reasonably firm; yolk visible but mobile, not stuck to the shell or seriously out of place.

"No. 2's" are eggs clean; sound in shell; may contain weak watery eggs, and eggs with heavy yolks, and all other eggs sound in shell and fit for food.

Consumers in order to protect themselves in the matter of purchasing eggs should acquaint themselves with these standards and the above definitions of the grades. Only by creating a demand for certain grades of eggs will the supply be forthcoming, and the demand can come only with a thorough knowledge on the part of the consumer as to what constitutes the various grades. It has also been frequently suggested that since the adoption of the standards consumers generally, in order to safeguard themselves, would do well to insist that all eggs as offered for sale be labelled in accordance with their proper grade.

Producers, too, would do well to more systematically grade their eggs before marketing, and knowing definitely what they have in hand, thereby be in a better position to demand a price commensurate with the quality supplied.

WORTH KNOWING

STRAIGHT garden or orchard rows give a better appearance and are easier to cultivate.

These long evenings are good times to plan next year's garden and to study better methods.

Hoe all grass and weeds away from the trunks of trees. This will destroy a winter home for mice.

Prune grape vines as soon as the leaves drop. They should be laid down before the ground freezes.

Potatoes should be stored in a cool cellar. A temperature of about 35 is good. If they are kept warm enough to sprout badly, a loss of from 10 to 30 bushels per acre in yielding power may result.

Store cabbages in a cool cellar, heads down. They should be hung from supports, or the roots may be cut off and the heads wrapped in newspaper and laid on a shelf, but they should be hung heads down for a while to ensure draining the water out.

"Of All The World's Great Heroes"

(From the London Spectator.)

When an isolated Italian outpost, perched on an Alpine crag, is preparing to meet the assaults of the enemy, the spirit of the Stone Age is not far away. The Alpini have rifles and machine guns, and by supreme energy and skill they may even have carried and installed a light mountain field piece on their rocky pinnacle. Nothing that modern science or experience can suggest is neglected. Some form of trench or barricade, with loopholes and emplacements, is constructed for protection, and there is no part of the road or valley below which is not commanded by a modern weapon, effective at long range and marvellously accurate. Nor has the soldier any distrust of his weapons. He knows them and believes in them. But the blood of remote ancestry is still in his veins, and the thoughts and habits of the past will not be denied.

He gathers or loosens stones, boulders, anything that his distant forbears would have used, and when the attack comes it is not unlikely that he will forget his rifle, his machine gun, his education and science of war, and will return to the methods of primeval man, rolling and pushing great stones and boulders down the steep slope, watching them bounce and crash towards the enemy. The soul of his ancestors is in him. His is the same passion that men felt in the youth of the world and the same savage, intoxicating joy. The great war of the twentieth century has proved many things, but none more conclusively than this: that the education and science of modern warfare are but skin-deep, and that whenever the chance occurs man will gladly return to the weapons of the past, or, indeed, to no weapons at all, save a strong right arm and a stone to throw.

The Slav is a great fighter, but he is too near to the days of the sword and lance. His books and his training may tell him that "the chief aim in battle is to obtain superiority in volume and accuracy of fire," but when he sees the enemy he forgets all this. He feels the lance in his hand, call it bayonet or what you will, he sees his enemy in the flesh, and he charges; prematurely, probably, and all wrong according to the books, but little he cares, nor does he often lose by it. The spectacle of his wild onslaught brings no comfort to his enemy, better armed perhaps, but shaken in nerve, disciplined into apathy, and far less alive. The Slav has suffered much and from many causes. There have been whispers of "one rifle to three men, sword or lance for the other two." The cry has reverberated through Europe: "More men, but still more munitions!" But the lance is no mean weapon in Slav hands, and there are few who would not gladly turn to it, if the enemy will but come near enough.

And in this war the enemy is indeed near. If any man foresaw the lines along which a war of millions would develop, he was completely silent about it. And yet the moment that Europe decided to arm the whole manhood of her population the present form of warfare was inevitable. The plain truth is that in a densely populated country the land is not big enough for the army. To manoeuvre for battle is to deploy. Deploy your fighting men to develop the "maximum of effective fire," and the line will stretch from sea to sea. There may be an early stage in which one side may more quickly gather and launch its forces and thus gain ground, but as soon as that phase is passed the two lines will continue to extend, each trying to envelope or outflank the other, until the battle front reaches a point on both wings beyond which no further extension is possible. If rifle and gun were the only weapons, each side might even then hope speedily to destroy the other. But rifle and gun are not the only weapons. Pick and shovel and all the skill and ingenuity of the mining engineer are brought into play. The earth is made a defence, and both sides are soon out of sight and comparatively safe. At night they will advance and dig a little closer to each other, until at last the space between them is so small that the artillery no longer dares to fire at the enemy's front line for fear of injuring its own.

The deadlock is complete. We are in a deep trench where our rifles are useless, and our enemy is in a similar position, equally impotent. It is a mutual siege. Only two things can happen. The enemy must either be starved out—a long process—or we must destroy him in such numbers that he can no longer hold so long a line. His army must be reduced to such a size that it is liable to be enveloped in detail or disintegrated on so long a front. The land is too small for the armies. The armies must be made small enough for the land.

But how can we destroy the enemy? The fighting instinct is strong in us and something we must do, but our weapons are baffled by his protection.

Suddenly the past asserts itself. We forget the twentieth century, and we throw stones. We throw them high into the air so that they will fall almost vertically into his trench and destroy him. Our "stone" is not quite that of our forefathers. It is an ingenious contrivance loaded with high explosive and surrounded with an iron ring that scatters in many fragments on impact. Our military authorities have not entirely forgotten that war might yet come to this, but the provision they have made for it is rather a legacy from the past than an anticipation of the future. There are few of these missiles in existence and they are soon exhausted. The only official mention of them is in an appendix. No one believed in them, and the manufacture of them has practically ceased.

But we are not without resources. The impulse to throw something is urgent, and the engineers are there. So we borrow explosives and make our own missiles. It is great fun. A jam-tin, a few stones, a few ounces of explosive, and a piece of fuse are all the tackle we want. Pack the tin tightly and fasten the lid on with the fuse just peeping out, light the fuse, and you still have a second or two to spare. Throw it high and towards the enemy. Muscle and skill will drop it clean into his trench. O great game! Then some ingenious fellow thinks he could throw further if he had something with a handle to it. He cuts a flat piece of wood into the shape of a hairbrush with a long handle. Famous word "hairbrush," familiar now alone the whole battle line. Tie your explosive, with any old bits of iron and stones, to the "brush." Light the fuse and grip the handle firmly. Hurl with all your might. Magnificent! A great noise and scraps flying about everywhere, to the great confusion of the enemy. Meanwhile the old term "grenadier," of glorious memory, has begun to reappear, in official writings. Cunning workers at home are told to invent and manufacture. Millions of hand-bombs and grenades of many clever patterns are ordered. Soon the supply is enormous and the "game" is official. We have grenadier officers, with courses of instruction everywhere behind the lines and in the training camps at home. Every battalion must have skilled grenadiers. In some units every man is skilled. Even that is not enough. We must organize ourselves. Once get a footing in an enemy trench and you can "bomb" him out of the rest of it if your supplies are good and your party is properly organized for the purpose. Soon we begin to be of inestimable service in the attack. Soon we are indispensible. Soon the enemy has learned the same game, but he does not play cricket at home as we do. His throwing is wild. We feel our superiority, and we are going to win. This is cricket.

Our greatest trouble is that we cannot throw far enough. At 30 or 40 yards we are deadly, but no man can "bowl" a weight of nearly two pounds much further. Then some grenadiers find a disused gaspipe. Three-inch iron pipe—just the thing! Close one end and put a small charge in. The "jam-tin" fits it nicely. Fire away. A hundred, a hundred and fifty, two hundred yards! We are almost artillery. Another genius, in whose veins the ancient blood is strong, finds some stout rubber bands, makes a forked wooden frame and a canvas sling. Trench catapult he calls it; an excellent name. We have seen many devices for hurling jam-tins, but we like this the best. It is simple, it is accurate, and, above all, it is noiseless. It completely deceives the enemy, and we are jubilant. We try every kind of missile at every kind of range. We are delighted and fascinated, and never tire of fighting and experimenting with this latest weapon. This, we feel, is new, exhilarating, scientific. It gives us something to do, something to watch. It is effective, too, as the enemy well knows. We are inventive, ingenious, above all, scientific, we men of this modern age. There is nothing we cannot do when we set our minds to it. There is no situation to which we cannot adapt ourselves. We fight with our brains, and we shall win.

And yet this is the year of our Lord, 1915, and it is nearly 2,000 years since Caesar lived and fought that other Gallic war, in the same land and with similar weapons. We have found our text-books. It is called De Bello Gallico.

MONK WORKS FOR BELGIANS

Will the war paralyze for years to come the art of the world?

Many lovers of the best in heroic, painting and sculpture believe that the carnage of the battlefields will claim many of those who contributed to the arts and that want and suffering will take those who are not strong enough to shoulder a musket and march away to battle. Albert, king of the Belgians, has the interest of the artistic class near to his heart and his desire to see for Belgium after the war, the artists and craftsmen who have made Belgium one of the leading countries in the production of beautiful things, is shared by his queen and Cardinal Mercier. So strongly do they feel on this subject that they have sent Rev. Dr George Reyns, director general of social work in Belgium, to this country to obtain funds for providing food for the artists and fine arts craftsmen who are in want through loss of their livelihood and the ravages of war. On Sunday Dr. Rutten talked to the Belgians and Hollanders of Rochester at Notre Dame de Victorie church and $900 was given for this work of aiding the artistic class. Previously these same people has given $3,000 in answer to other appeals. This afternoon Dr. Rutten addresses the Alliance Francaise.

The importance of the mission is shown by the selection of Dr. Rutten, for he is a leading man in the clerical-official life of Belgium. He was appointed by the king to act as mediator in the differences between capital and labour several years ago and his efforts averted a strike. He is a Dominican monk, but has never been of the cloistered branch of the order, having always worked for social betterment.

Pride Checks Them.

"In coming to make this appeal for the artistic class," said Dr. Rutten, "I do not wish for a moment to give an impression that the American commission has not done its work well. It has saved thousands from starvation, but its inability to reach the artistic class is due, not to any lack of effort on the part of the commission, but rather to the pride of the artistic class. These people, painters, musicians, bookbinders, wood carvers, singers and illuminators have always had plenty of money and now that they are destitute their pride prevents them from applying for the aid they need to prevent starvation. It is to gather funds to protect this class that the king has sent me to America. The death of the artists would be a loss not only to Belgium but to the world and posterity. The funds raised will be distributed according to a plan perfected by the minister of arts and sciences in such a way as not to humiliate these sensitive artistic souls."

"Will Belgium rise industrially from the desolation of war?" was asked.

"It will be two or more years before Belgium can assume a place in the commerce of the world," was the reply. "Factories have been destroyed, machinery has been carried away and 'last names' lists will be almost useless due to the changes of war. Two years will be required before any rehabilitation can begin. The railroads will have to be rebuilt for the present troop roads will not be of a character to meet the demands of commerce. The good railroads have all been destroyed and a million dollars worth of railway signals has been made worthless junk. You have no idea of the destruction done in Belgium. Of that wonderful library of Louvain, the world's greatest library, there is not left that much." Dr. Rutten picked up a small sheet torn from the front of a catalogue to indicate the pitiful remnant of the great library.

Scientific Destruction.

"Tierlmonde was destroyed ten days after every soldier had left. Drug stores and hospitals were destroyed showing that the motive was only a spiteful vengeance. You know the Germans had a battalion of incendiaries who carried all the tools of their arson trade. They went to the doors of the houses, cut a hole in the door with their hatchets, threw tablets of highly compressed explosives into the house and then from their belts took cylinders of combustibles and threw them on the roofs. Houses were soon but charred masses of ruins. These tablets were made by scientists, indicating that all this destruction was premeditated. I was skeptical until I saw these things with my own eyes."

Asked about atrocities, Dr. Rutten was loath to speak. He said that when the war was over there would be ample documentary evidence to show what outrages the Germans had perpetrated and most of this evidence would be the work of the Germans themselves, leaves from their own diaries and admissions from official documents. But after some urging the priest did tell of a few things he had seen

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

NEW YORK, November 17. Congestion of freight in and around New York continues to be so great as to cause shippers and transportation companies serious concern. It is attributed mainly to the rush of foodstuffs and war munitions for shipment to the belligerent nations. It was stated today that one railroad has upwards of 7,000 loaded cars blocked between Pittsburgh and this city and that seven hundred freight cars with locomotive parts and railway equipment for Russia are included in the blockade.

No relief is seen by the railway officials and the president of one of the large eastern railroads said today that the congestion is the worst within his memory. Some of the freight must be distributed to southern ports or to Canada or vessels from other ports must be rushed to New York to take on the freight, he said.

The railroad official declared that hundreds of freight cars with shipments for Russia were sent from Pittsburgh to Seattle, an unusual course. Other shipments were sent to Montreal in order to avoid New York. Exports of all kinds from New York last week were valued at $60,540,870, an increase of more than $6,000,000 over the preceding week

Hospital Ship "Anglia" With 385 Wounded on Board Sunk By Floating Mine

LONDON, Nov 18.—The hospital ship Anglia, with about 300 wounded men aboard, in addition to the crew, nurses and attendants, bound from France for Dover, struck a mine in mid-Channel yesterday and sank in a very short time. Eighty-five men, most of them seriously wounded, and therefore in their cots, lost their lives.

The collier Lusitania, which was nearby at the time of the accident, immediately went to the assistance of the Anglia, and her boats had just been lowered when she also struck a mine and foundered. All her crew was saved.

A patrol vessel succeeded in rescuing 300 of the Anglia's passengers and crew, including some nurses. A number of bodies were recovered

Patrol Boat Saves 300.

The Press Bureau issued the following report:

"The hospital ship Anglia struck a mine in the Channel yesterday and sank. There were on board at the time about 18 officers and 372 men, making a total of 385. Of this number about 300 were saved by a patrol boat.

"A vessel that was proceeding to the rescue of those in the Anglia struck a mine while en route and also sank."

Conveyed King George.

The Anglia is the ship which conveyed King George across the Channel on the occasion of his recent visit to France. The King last night sent to the First Lord of the Admiralty a message expressing his regret at the ship's destruction.

200 Cot Cases Aboard.

The Anglia had 200 cot cases aboard. When the rescuing vessels reached her she was badly down by the head and her propellers were racing. Her stern was so high above the sea that one of the rescuing vessels was able to pass under her and 40 men dropped aboard.

The crew of the Lusitania give vivid narratives of the disaster, according to which, after a terrific explosion, the bows of the Anglia seemed to melt away until the sea lapped her rails. She surged forward, however, in a vain attempt to reach shore.

Soon many boats came to the rescue, including those sent by the Lusitania. Those watching the scene saw the soldiers coming up from below, assembling on deck and calmly waiting the order to pass into the boats.

A rescuing vessel ran right under the sinking steamer's stern and immediately the crew set at work under greatest difficulties to transfer the wounded

Wounded Fall Into Sea.

Every moment the stern of the doomed vessel rose higher, and the hull veered sideways as though about to turn turtle, but still the crew worked on.

Some of the wounded, unable to keep their footing on the sloping deck, fell into the sea and were picked up by the rescuers. Others jumped overboard. All the while the nurses worked with splendid devotion with the crew to transfer their patients to the boats.

The difficulties were augmented by the racing propellors, which gave a circular motion to the Anglia.

The King's message in regard to the Anglia was in the form of a telegram signed by his Private Secretary Lord Stamfordham. It read

"The King is shocked to hear that the hospital ship Anglia, which so recently conveyed his Majesty across the English Channel, has been sunk by a mine. His Majesty is grieved at the loss incurred, and trust that the survivors have not unduly suffered from the terrible exposure to which they must have been subjected. Please express the King's heart felt sympathy with the families of those who perished.

"(Signed) Stamfordham."

Earlier reports had it that the Anglia was torpedoed by a submarine. The official announcement that the disaster was due to a mine makes it appear that the Germans have recently been sowing the Channel with fresh mines.

The Anglia was a merchantman which was taken over by the British Admiralty after the opening of the war and refitted as a hospital ship. She was commissioned in August of last year.

There are four British steamships named Anglia. The one converted into a hospital ship probably is the former London & Northwestern Railway Company steamer 1,903 tons gross. She was 329 feet long, and was built in 1900 at Dumbarton.

At the time she was commissioned the Anglia was in charge of Commander Oscar V. Dechaire, retired

HYGIENE OF THE TEETH

Every one of course knows that dental decay if not promptly checked leads to much suffering and nervous strain and places a burden upon the digestion, since it leads to the swallowing of food without proper chewing. What has not been recognized until lately is that through decayed teeth and infected gums the germs of very serious diseases often find their way into the system. General blood poisoning and diseases of the heart and blood vessels and kidneys, many varieties of chronic rheumatism, have again and again been traced to this cause.

Some of the methods commonly advocated for the care of the teeth have probably done more harm than good. Some of the tooth powders and pastes advertised as "antiseptic" are much more likely to injure the membranes of the mouth than the bacteria, and others contain substances that serve as ideal food material for the harmful microbes. Chemical and bacteriological studies recently carried out in New York suggest the sprinkling of the tooth-brush with food acids, such as fruit juices or vinegar diluted with two or three parts of water, instead of alkaline dentrifrices, and the use of such food acids as mouth washes.

In the last issue of Health News, the monthly bulletin of the New York State Department of Health, Dr. W. G. Ebersole, of the National Mouth Hygiene Association, points out that

"To prevent unhealthy and diseased mouths we must have:

"Second—Proper care. Correct method of cleaning the teeth.

"Third—Proper treatment. Where the mouht is diseased of the teeth decayed dental treatment must be employed to remove the tartar and debris and fill the teeth."

Dr. Eversole gives the following detailed directions for the hygiene of the teeth:

"In the light of recent investigation conducted at the hands of some of the leading students of mouth hygiene the most effective way to use the toothbrush is to place the bristles of the brush firmly against the teeth, applying firm pressure as though trying to force the bristles between the teeth, using a slight rotary or scrubbing motion. This movement will be found to cleanse the teeth better than any other method of brushing.

"When the brushing is finished the user should take in the mouth lukewarm water and, with the use of the lips, cheek and tongue, using all the force that the individual can bring to bear, force the water in between and around the teeth, repeating this cleansing process several times. After a short time the power of force the water between and around the teeth will be increased until one who uses his method will be astonished at how much debris can be washed out in this way after a careful use of the dental cream and the brush.

"A clean tooth never decays. The teeth should be cleansed after each meal, in the morning before eating and at night before retiring in the morning before eating, to remove all disease producing germs that have accumulated during sleeping hours and at night before retiring to be sure that all food particles that have accumulated during the day are removed, thus preventing decay.

"Not less than three minutes should be spent in cleaning the teeth

GET IT FIRST—NOT LAST

When a cold grips your system it is convincing proof that your condition is weakened—remember that. It is risky indeed to [illegible] your strength to throw it out, because neglected colds have become serious sickness than any other ailment, while weakening cathartics and stimulating syrups are often depressing and dangerous.

The one best treatment for any cold—the one so often relied on when others fail, is the powerful blood-nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, which feeds the very sources of bodily strength to suppress the present cold and generate strength to thwart further sickness.

Get Scott's first, not last, and insist on the genuine—always free from injurious drugs. No advanced prices.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Whatever is fashioned and much trimmed in the way of skirts and the loose bodices which accompany them will be the ruling favorites of the present time and will most probably last well into the fall, as there seem to be but few real novelties.

In the costume herewith illustrated we have one of the most approved novelties and one which is extremely graceful on the slender figure of the majority of women. It can be varied by those who are shorter by the omission of the two upper flounces.

The blouse of this costume has the usual full fronts which are gathered to the extensions of the back along the shoulder seams. The front of the waist is open, with a flat folded vest below a chemisette. To this last the high, flare collar is attached. The sleeves may be full length or shorter as preferred.

The skirt furnishes the prettiest imaginable style for soft, summer fabrics, such as dotted Swiss, wash silk, crepe weaves, voile and the like, as well as for taffetas and for embroidered flouncing.

The foundation is a plain three gore skirt and on this are applied the gathered ruffles, with flat bands above them in place of any banding. As both bands and ruffles are stitched firmly to the underskirt there is no awkward fulness to control.

The dress pattern, No. 7301, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 5¼ yards of 36 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 18 inch goods for vest, 1 yard of lace edging for collar and 2⅛ yards of 36 inch foundation material.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

FIGHTING HOTTER ON WESTERN FRONT

HORRIBLE ATROCITIES BY THE BULGARIANS

Bulgarians Are Massacring Serbian Women and Children

The War They Are Making is Not One So Much of Conquest as it is of Extermination---Invaders Are Not Satisfied With the Slaughter of the Inhabitants But Are Laying the Country Waste as They Advance---Two Austrian Submarines Have Been Sunk.

ITALIANS PRESSING ATTACK ON TRIEST

PARIS, Nov. 19.—Atrocities by the Bulgarians so horrible as to make the Balkan campaign of 1913 seem merciful are described by Serb refugees who are pouring into Salonika to-day. The invaders are butchering their Serb prisoners with the utmost refinements of torture, despatches from the Greek port assert. Hundreds of women and children were burned alive in the neighbourhood of Nish in churches where they had taken refuge, thinking that houses of worship would be respected by the Bulgars. Instead, the torch was applied. Those who rushed out were cut or shot down. The others perished in the flames.

Women who fell into the invaders' hands are declared to be subjected to most shocking indignities. Many are killed afterwards. The war is said to be one, not so much of conquest as of extermination. Not satisfied with the slaughter of its inhabitants, it is charged that the Bulgars are laying the country waste as they advance.

PARIS, Nov. 19.—(French Official Communique).—Hotter fighting than the Southern extremity of the Franco-German line has seen in weeks is reported in to-day's official communique. "In Alsace," says the report, "in the regions of Uffholz Plateau and Hartmannsweilerkopf, there have been fierce combats with artillery, trench engines and grenades. A fleet of eight German aeroplanes attacked Luneville, and although five of them were quickly driven away by anti-aircraft guns, three succeeded in dropping a few bombs, but did little damage."

ROME, Nov. 19.—The destruction of two Austrian submarines was announced to-day, believed to be only the beginning of a vigorous campaign to clear the Mediterranean and the Adriatic of every undersea craft. Italy and France have combined the information of a flotilla of fast small vessels, which will patrol their own, the Austrian, Albanian and Greek and African coasts.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Col. Roosevelt here to-day refused to be interviewed regarding the reported proposal to enlist with the British Canadian forces, and his secretary said that Roosevelt had no comment to make in the matter.

The New York World this morning published a story that the Italian General Cadorna was using fifteen hundred guns in his fourth concentrated attack on Goritz, and the city of Trieste was in real danger.

PARIS, Nov. 19.—King Constantine of Greece will be given but little more time to waver between friendship for Germany and the Allies. Unless he decides in the Allies' favour, speedy action will be taken, it is said here to-day. Not only is his present attitude regarded as a dangerous one for the French and British campaign in the Balkans, but disquieting reports of a Greeco-Bulgarian agreement and of Roumania's possible entrance into the war as one of the Germanic allies have decided the Paris and London Governments.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The selection of the Russian and Italian Governments of their representatives on the Allies' Joint War Council is reported to-day in despatches from Petrograd and Rome. It is said they will attend the Council's next meeting to be held in London, on a date not yet selected.

BERLIN STATEMENTS.

BERLIN, Nov. 19.—Five thousand more Serb prisoners were taken by the Germans, Austrians and Bulgars on Thursday, an official statement announced to-day. "The German air fleet attacked the British camp at Poperinghe, on the West front, on Thursday," said the statement. In the Vosges and Argonne regions heavy artillery duels are reported.

BERLIN, Nov. 19.—The sinking of a British monitor, with the entire crew, on the Tigris, is reported to-day in an official statement from Constantinople under last Sunday's date.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—There were strong indications that the chief feature of the Cabinet meeting to-day was an extended discussion of the operations of alleged pro-German propagendists, said to be working in this country, with resultant bomb explosions, munition plant fires and disturbances of trade conditions.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 19.—"I have only heard rumours of such an offer, but I certainly would be delighted to give Colonel Roosevelt command even of a Canadian division. He would make a bonnie fighter." So said Major-General Sir Sam. Hughes this morning when asked concerning the report that it was possible that ex-President Col. T. R. Roosevelt might offer his services with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces.

ROME, Nov. 19.—Another raid on Venice on Thursday night by five Austrian aeroplanes was announced officially to-day, but it was said little damage was done, and that there were no casualties. Airmen also again bombarded Verona, where some civilians were wounded.

FIRST DEATH IN THE RANKS OF THE 93RD BATTALION

Pte. Fred. Sawyer of No. 1 Platoon, A Company Passed Away at St. Joseph's Hospital To-day, Following an Attack of Septic Peritonitis

LIVED HERE FIVE YEARS

The first death in the ranks of the 93rd Battalion occurred to-day, when Pte. Fred Sawyer of No. 1 platoon, A company, passed away at St. Joseph's Hospital, following an attack of septic peritonitis. Pte. Sawyer was one of the first recruits to join the Peterborough battalion and his comrades will be shocked to learn of his death.

He was taken ill three weeks ago and removed to St. Joseph's Hospital. His condition has been regarded by the doctors as serious ever since he was taken ill.

Pte. Sawyer had been a resident of Peterborough for five years and during the past two years had resided at 602 Rogers street. He was employed at the Quaker Oats Company before he enlisted in August last. He was born in England.

The dead soldier is survived by his wife and a three year old daughter, who will have the deep sympathy of the officers and men of the 93rd Battalion, as well as of the citizens generally.

The arrangements for the funeral have not yet been announced. It will undoubtedly be under military auspices.

Breach of the Traffic By-law

Cost a Local Man Two Dollars --Keene Man Imbibed the Wrong Kind of Medicine

A breach of the traffic by-law cost Joseph Birdgenaw two dollars in this morning's police court. Constable Lawrence swore that defendant drove down the centre of the street for some considerable distance and then turned to the left.

Chief Thompson said he was in receipt of a number of complaints respecting drivers who persist in driving on the centre of the roadway.

Birdgenaw claimed to be unfamiliar with the traffic by-law. Magistrate Dumble imposed a fine of two dollars.

The Wrong Medicine.

Wm. Miles, who gave Keene as his home, pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness. He was sick and came down town to get some medicine. "I got the wrong kind of medicine," volunteered the accused.

He was fined two dollars. Miles had no money with him, but agreed to forward it to the proper authorities.

Taken to Prison Farm at Whitby

Provincial Bailiff Ryan was in the city to-day for the purpose of taking away to the Prison Farm at Whitby, several prisoners who have been confined to the County Gaol. Those who left at noon in charge of Mr. Ryan were all serving six months' sentences on charges of vagrancy.

Donations to Band Fund

The Examiner has received a donation of $1 to the 93rd Band Fund from Mrs. H. Newton, and another donation of a similar amount for the same fund from Mr. and Mrs. Newton, "In loving memory of their son, Harold Newton" who died Nov 19th, 1911.

Send Your Tobacco Through Canada's Big Tobacco Fund

The following paragraph should convince the public that the best and only way to send tobacco to our boys at the front is through the Canada's Tobacco Fund, collected by the Overseas Club.

One family gave 50 cents to one of the collectors for Canada's Tobacco Fund, with instructions to send the tobacco to relatives in two English Battalions.

On Sept. 10th the postcards, which are addressed in Peterborough by the Overseas Club, were sent to Mr. Wrench in London, where they were enclosed in two parcels each containing 1-5 lb. of tobacco, 50 cigarettes, 1 box of matches.

On Oct. 25th the parcels arrived at the trenches, were opened, and one card was posted that afternoon; the other a few days later.

The first card arrived in Peterborough on Nov. 9th, just two months from date it left Peterborough. The other card came on Nov. 13th.

SUPPLY OF TOBACCO FALLING OFF.

Dear Meg,—Just a line to let you know that I am still keeping well. I received the taps (cigarettes) you sent me alright. It was very good of you to send them. They just came at the right time. I had not one. We do not get as many as we used to do because there is a lot more troops out here now. But we still get a few. I have not had the luck to meet Bill yet. It is beginning to get cold and wet here again. Best of luck to you and George and the kid.

Dear George,—Thanks awfully for the cigarettes and tobacco. I received the parcel this morning but have just opened it, and it was a surprise to see that you had sent it. It was very kind of you, and I thank you very much. It has been raining all day and night, and the trenches are in a terrible state already, and everybody is soaking wet. The first time I get a chance I will write.

You will note that the two brothers have not seen each other since they have been in the trenches.

ARE YOU SENDING TOBACCO TO SOMEONE AT THE FRONT?
WHY NOT SEND IT THROUGH OUR FUND?

For $1.00 you can supply a soldier with one package of tobacco and cigarettes each week for one month.

We want at least 2,000 Regular Monthly Contributors right now to keep our own Peterborough boys supplied with tobacco. Will you (reader) be one of them? Will you come up to our next meeting, this Friday, 8 p.m., in the Bank of Montreal Chambers? Bring your friends. We want a good big meeting.

Think of the 31 of our boys left with the 2nd Battalion. Are we going to let them be without smokes?

Come along and help us keep up the good work. We want suggestions, workers, collectors, monthly contributors. Surely you will help us out in one of these.

TREK TO LAKEFIELD POSTPONED BECAUSE OF THE BAD WEATHER

93rd Battalion Men Did Not Have Their Twenty Mile Jaunt To-Day--Drilled and Dined in the Armouries Instead ---Battery Recruits Left For Kingston This Morning --To-day's Military News.

To-day's downpour of rain prevented the contemplated trek of the 93rd Battalion to Lakefield this morning and the tramp was postponed until next week. Many of the men were anxious to make the trip in spite of the bad weather, but in view of the fact that a lot of the recruits have been in training only a short time, it was deemed unwise to put the battalion through such a severe test as a twenty-mile tramp over muddy roads and under such bad weather conditions. It was not even possible to drill outside this morning as the parade ground was a quagmire of mud and weather.

However, the battalion put in a profitable morning in the armouries with an hour's physical drill, under the direction of Sergt. Majors Hartshorn and Calladine, followed by rifle drill.

Dinner was served at the armouries to-day, the first meal to be prepared there by Sergt. Cook Wilde and his assistants, and it was a merry affair. It was the first occasion of the kind for many of the men, and there was a sort of picnic nature about it that made the event an enjoyable one. Big slabs of bread, heaping plates of beef stew and potatoes and mugfuls of steaming tea quickly disappeared before the attack of the 93rd. Lt.-Col. Johnston and the officers of the battalion had dinner at the sergeants' table and seemed to enjoy the meals as heartily as did the men.

The Kingston Standard says: That several peddlers of whiskey are reaping a harvest by the sale of bottles to soldiers, is the claim of a well-known officer, who while discussing the question of fining a man $300 at Belleville for selling liquor to an RCR man, stated that prosecutions here would also likely develop. The officer stated that it was a well known fact that bottles were being distributed for a financial consideration and in fact several local men were getting fat on the job. The liquor dealers are out of bounds so far as soldiers are concerned and are not to blame in any way, but individuals have and are making a prac-

OVER 400 BOYS ARE TO ATTEND THE CONFERENCE

Delegates Are Arriving To-day for Big Gathering Which Opens To-night—Mayor Butler Will Extend the City's Welcome to the Visitors.

REVIEW OF PROGRAMME

Over four hundred boys are expected to attend the Tenth Annual Boys' Work Conference, which opens in the Murray Street Baptist Church at 7.30 o'clock, to-night. They are assembling from all parts of the province, and represent the most earnest youths of their respective committees.

The burden of their discussions will be work among boys, and the conference theme "That I May Know Him" suggests the particular work under consideration.

During the past few weeks the local executive have been arranging the details of billeting, and the visiting boys are assured a cordial welcome. Mayor Butler will extend a general greeting from the city at 8 o'clock to night. Three boys will respond for the Conference. The election of officers will follow and then two feature addresses. Mr. Taylor Statten, Boys Work Secretary, National Council Y. M. C. A., will speak on "The All-Canadian programme of work for Boys"; Mr. Albert E. Roberts, New York, of the International Committee Y.M.C.A., has as his subject "What do you Think?"

The morning and afternoon sessions on Saturday will be held in St Paul's Church. The conference photograph will be taken at 12 o'clock, and a noon luncheon will be held for leaders and class mentors and will be followed by a discussion.

A banquet will be held in the Market Hall at 6.30 o'clock, and should be one of the events of the conference. At its conclusion Mr. Geo. A. Warburton, Secretary of the Toronto Y. M. C. A., will give a patriotic address, and Mr. Albert E. Roberts, will speak on "Playing the Game."

The final sessions will be for the most part devotional on Sunday.

NOTES.

The Y.M.C.A. is headquarters for the delegates. C. A. Schell and Herbert L. Troyer are the business secretaries. Mr. Schell is assistant Boys' Work secretary of the National Council of the Y.M.C.A. He has been busy for several days completing the billeting arrangements.

The banquet on Saturday evening will be the feature social event for the boys, and a big time is expected. In addition to the hundred local delegates there is about the same number of invited local guests.

The series of four addresses by Mr. A. E. Roberts of New York should attract large audiences. Two of them will be given in George Street Methodist Church at 3.45 p.m., and the last at the 7 p.m. service.

Saturday afternoon athletic events in the Brock Street Rink commencing at 3.30 o'clock should attract a crowd of Peterborough people. There are five events, putting the shot, standing broad jump, running high jump, hop step and jump, and 100-yards dash. All the boys who make the standard will be awarded the Canadian Standard Efficiency Test badges.

Quite a number of the boys arrived in the city at noon to-day, but the main delegations are coming early this evening.

AGED PRISONER AT COUNTY GAOL FOUND DEAD IN HIS CELL

Alexander Oliver and His Wife Were Arrested Yesterday on a Charge of Vagrancy—Had Been Living in North Monaghan

OLD MAN IS NOW DEAD

Alexander Oliver, a prisoner on remand, was found dead by Turnkey Ray in his cell at the county gaol this morning at seven o'clock. Oliver and his wife, an aged couple, were arrested yesterday afternoon by County Constable Archie Moore and were brought before Magistrate Langley on a charge of vagrancy. They were remanded until Monday next. Coroner Dr. Greer, on being informed of the death of the unfortunate old man, ordered an inquest, and the jury empanelled to inquire into the cause thereof, brought in a verdict that the deceased came to his death as a result of heart failure, brought on by lack of proper nourishment and care.

Lived in Monaghan.

In answer to a telephone call from Reeve McIntosh of North Monaghan, County Constable Archie Moore went out to what is known as the old Kincaid farm, where Oliver and his wife resided. In conversation with Reeve McIntosh, the Examiner learned that the old couple came to the township at harvest time. Varied reports as to where they came from were current in the neighbourhood. One was that they had run away from the County House of Refuge. The authorities wrote the House of Refuge but received no word in reply. Another story was to the effect that the pair lived in Lindsay before coming to Monaghan. They were practically in destitute circumstances and lived on what was given them by the neighbours. The couple were each about seventy years of age.

Resisted With An Axe.

When the constable called at the place of their abode he found the old man away. His wife informed the constable that he was at the farm of Andrew Hogg. When Constable Moore proceeded to take Oliver away with him, the latter resisted with an axe. However, he was quickly overpowered, and along with his wife, taken in custody.

At five o'clock they were brought before Magistrate Langley in the County Court, on a charge of vagrancy. No evidence was taken and the case was remanded until Monday next. They were then confined to the gaol.

The Inquest.

A jury was empanelled and heard the evidence, relative to the man's death, before Coroner Dr. Greer, this morning, in the corridor, fronting the cells, in one of which the old man passed away. Those composing the jury were Messrs. Jos. Picard (foreman), Patric Cahill, Wm. Paton, Geo. Evans, D. S. Minnicola, Thos. Laing and Thos. Belcher.

Constable Moore was called and told the story of the arrest. Under

THE SECRET OF A GOOD COMPLEXION

Did it ever occur to you that there is a reason for your sallow complexion, pimples, blackheads and other skin blemishes? Your skin, when healthy has to excrete 17 per cent. of its waste matter of the body. If the pores become clogged, this poisonous waste is imprisoned and skin troubles follow.

To rid yourself of these blemishes the skin must be cured of its sluggishness. This is just what Zam-Buk does. Zam-Buk is composed of stimulating and healing herbal essences, which penetrate the skin and enable it to expel the accumulated poisonous waste matter. A clear, healthy complexion is your reward.

The folly of endeavoring to cover up skin disfigurements with powders and other cosmetics is quite apparent. Use Zam-Buk, remove the root cause of the trouble, and enjoy a good complexion without resorting to artificial means. Apply Zam-Buk at night when retiring and wash with Zam-Buk soap.

SPECIAL AT ROYAL TO-DAY

Local patrons of the picture house admit that the Royal Theatre gives the most frequent change of pictures in Peterborough. For to-day a specially selected programme will be presented, including a thrilling drama, entitled "The Web of Crime," and other films, including Western pictures and laughable comedies. Right reels to-day. Don't miss the show.

PREPARE FOR WINTER.

The wise man or woman looks ahead. The prudent housewife has had her "storm" windows put on; her winter's butter laid in, dozens of eggs in pickle, and has her tender shrubs swathed in bandages. The armies in the field are prepared for winter. Even the mayoralty and aldermanic candidates are buckling on their armour. We have not, however, got all our streets ready for the winter, and no time should be lost. We can't depend upon the forbearance of the winter, which may drop down upon us any day from the 19th of November forward. Gutters are choked with leaves and the leavings of paving operations. A case in point. At the corner of Park and Gilmour streets there were two catch basins put in. That on the north side is so choked with rubbish and earth resulting from paving, that the water cannot get away. It overflows the pavement on Park street, and overflows Gilmour street from Park west about six feet wide upon the roadway a distance about 500 feet On the south side the catch basin is equally useless. Never since it was put in, was connection made with the gutter, and on the south side there is an elongated lakelet, that fills the gutter and overflows the street. If this condition obtains generally throughout the city, the streets are not in good shape for the winter.

NEED OF SYSTEM.

In all the enterprises of man, in peace as in war, systematic effort and coordination of activities and forces are the sine qua non of successful accomplishment. In the matter of caring for our returned soldiers, to whom so much is due, on the grounds of both gratitude and humanity, there is danger of doing, or trying to do too much with a possibility of doing less than should be done. If there is danger of coming to the ground between two stools, the danger is obviously increased by a multiplication of stools. We have a multiplicity of quasi independent commissions for looking after the interests of returned soldiers. We have the Federal Commission and two commissions formed in each province. In addition we have municipal measures taken to deal with the gradually lessening number of persons resulting from the distribution of the general number among their homes throughout the Dominion. The Federal Commission is calculated to give, as it were, "first aid." Then it turns the returned soldier over to the Provincial Commission, whose duty is to find him employment, and this duty is discharged by turning him over to the commission to be organized in municipalities, and if the municipalities fail to find employment, the much exploited returned soldier is to be further returned by being sent back to the provincial committee. There does not seem to be a possibility of the avoidance of clashing or overlapping with such a battledore and shuttlecock system, or lack of system.

The suggested remedy for this is that the matter should be exclusively dealt with by the state—the Government that enlisted the soldier, equipped, and sent him to war in which, by doing his duty he has placed the government under obligation to see him through.

The government by handling the matter could simplify the present proposed complicated machinery and avoid waste of energy and resources by dispersion of effort.

The question arises whether or not by trying to do so much in all ways, we do not do as much effectively as if the agencies were less numerous or better coordinated. We have in this city itself an almost infinite number of organizations, working independently. There is no doubt of the good will, energy, and noble spirit of all these organizations; but it is questionable whether the results are as great and effective as they would be if the respective organizations were placed under one controlling body. This is not suggested in the way of finding fault or disparaging the zeal and industry and energy of one of the many organizations whose aim is to do as much good as possible. In the stern work of war, whose results mainly call for the activity of these organizations, the various units of the forces are placed under a General Staff. Without this armies would be mere mobs, and whatever would be the esprit de corps, and courage, and zeal of the respective units, their individual and dispersed work would be ineffective. We want to do the best for the interests we have at heart in waging this war and caring for its consequences; but it is impossible that we can do our best by employing too much machinery, or by too much individuality of action.

WHY GERMANY MUST FAIL.

Dr. Andrew Macphail, who has now gone to the front to do his "bit" in the great fight against the Huns, never had any delusions regarding Germany. In his "Essays in Fallacy," published four years before the war began, he wrote:

> Forty years ago it was to Germany we went in search of a love for the ideal and a reverence of fact, for a high, austere, and disinterested view of life. To inculcate the value of these things was Germany's work in the world, wrought out by her unworldly professors, her authors dazzling with the brilliancy of their ideas, her scientists consumed with the pure love of knowledge, and her philosophers, whose thought ranged over the whole of human life and aspired upward to a knowledge of God. Shorn of her spiritual strength, Germany sits to-day, a blind giant, toiling in the mill for the benefit of any Philistine who requires meanness and cheapness. Forty years of commercial education has wrought this change of character, and made of the Germans the tinkers of Europe, the bagmen of the world, the supple traders who do not disdain the language of the Hottentot, if only a bill of goods may be sold thereby. To-day German science and learning have surrendered themselves to the vindication of brute force over moral ideals.

Dr. Macphail had no illusions as to the character of the German spirit developed by its universal programme of materialistic education. In her case the gospel of force has brought defeat. Mere force against mere force might have led Germany to realize her ideal of world domination; but she met, or is meeting, not only material force of equal strength, but that immeasurably strengthened by the spiritual force that animates the high ideals of the nations who are combatting Teutonic militarism. The brute force of the elephant is infiniately greater than that of man; but it becomes effectively powerless when confronted with the resources of the human mind. So German force, representing the preparations of decades, and the ideals of a darkened past, becomes ineffective when confronted with silent and irresistible spiritual forces that inhere in nations that have been true to their Christian civilization. In a fight between the brute and the man, failure to crush at the first onslaught, forecasts certain ultimate failure. Germany with her monstrous philosophy of force and frightfulness represents the brute force of nature as against the intelligent force of man. There can be no doubt of the outcome, though the intervening struggle may be long and hard.

THEFRUIT OF THE TREE.

Bulgaria addressed these words to Great Britain in 1876:

> "If ever the Bulgarians breathe again, if ever they succeed in throwing off the yoke of slavery which has weighed on them for five centuries, if ever they acquire the right to live, not as a nation of slaves, but as a free people governing themselves, the honour of the achievement will be due in the greatest measure to the noble English people."

But Bulgaria came under the evil influence of the German spirit; and what could one expect but that Bulgaria should show ingratitude, bad faith and treason to every high and noble ideal?

GET HALF OF THIS IN TAXES

The Minister of Finance is asking the people of Canada for their aid in floating a domestic war loan, and he will undoubtedly carry the country with him. But he is neglecting in an amazing way a veritable gold mine of revenue available to his hand. Mr McKenna, the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, hopes to secure $150,000,000 of revenue for the Treasury during the current year from excessive war profits In Canada Mr. White should be able to collect from fifteen to twenty million dollars in taxation of war profits without hurting any legitimate interest.

In a contemporary yesterday appeared the following paragraph, which may or may not have been intended to assist in stock market operations, but which should assuredly find a place in Mr. White's scrapbook:

> Sir Henry Pellatt, President of Steel and Radiation, Limited, has submitted in a report some figures of the profits the company expects to make on war munitions. It has on hand or in immediate prospect contracts amounting to $2,000,000, and from these profits of $1,050,000 will be realized, which is about 50 per cent. on the turnover and about 30 per cent. on the company's capitalization of $3,526,500. The contracts include 200,000 of 12-lb. shrapnel (cases only) at $3.80, total $760,000, on which the profit is placed at $400,000; 200,000 high explosive shells at $4, total $800,000, with profit of $400,000; 50,000 6-inch shell (100-lb.) at $10, total $500,000, with profit of $250,000."

Love of liberty, determination to preserve the Empire, and a profit of 50 per cent. on the turnover make an irresistible combination. But is there no way of keeping copies of yesterday's Toronto World from reaching the people of the United Kingdom? When they see that they are under contract to pay $2,050,000 for shells which cost $1,050,000 to manufacture they may come to the conclusion that the Empire needs to be saved from others than the Germans—The Globe

CRITICISM OF THE HEADQUARTERS STAFF.

One thing to be remembered about the criticism of the British Headquarters Staff which marked yesterday's proceedings in the House of Lords is that this criticism is indicative of the difference between British and German government. Such criticism would be impossible in Germany, from the simple fact that militarism is there the directing force in State affairs.

In Great Britain the military are the servants of the State. In Germany the military are masters of the State. The British people do not hesitate to criticise freely any fancied or real shortcomings of the military. The German people would not dare to do so; that would be insubordination, and punishable as such. Whether the criticism of the British higher command is justified or not, they have made no such gigantic and tragic blunders as the higher command of the German army.

Think, for instance, of Moltke's downfall; how his whole grandiose scheme for the swift annihilation of France fell tumbling about his ears like a pack of cards. The whole conduct of the war on the part of Germany has been one long blunder, because while she has had the accumulated war material of a quarter of a century to draw upon, and an army to use it such as the world never saw before, she has gained nothing but the prospect of utter defeat. Germany has killed many people and destroyed much property But where is the proof of superior application or superior brains? Think what the British Headquarters Staff would have done with half the army and war material that Germany had. And think what that staff has done without it. Both in men and war material we are rapidly approaching a position of more equal terms with Germany.

We must not give way to mere blind criticism. Our criticism must be intelligent. And if it is, we shall not lose confidence in the higher command of our army because a few members, either of the Lords or Commons, get up and exercise the inalienable birth-right of Englishmen to speak what is in their minds, no matter what calibre their minds may be. — Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

ARE YOU TO LAG?

You've sung, "God Save Our Gracious King."
You've wav'd old England's flag;
You've thrilled to hear its glory told.
What now—are you to lag
When crowned last would I sat pi down
And tramp it to a rag.

Since ever you remember, boy,
That flag has stood for you
For everything you hold most dear,
Most honorable and true.
The Motherland is calling now,
What are you going to do?

She does not say "You've got to come
And give your all for me."
Just, "Son o' mine, I'm meaning you
From yonder o'er the sea,
To come and stand at my right hand
And hold the flag with me."

What answer, boy, it's up to you
To go or stay at will;
No man may judge your loyalty,
But England's calling still.
And there are other things than war
Can crucify and kill.

WHAT BRITISH RULE HAS DONE FOR PEOPLE OF INDIA

An article in the New York Evening [illegible] headed "India wants [illegible] British nor German" drew [illegible] following reply by Alfred Biggs on what British rule has and is accomplishing in India:

There is food for serious reflection in the fact that education is more widely diffused in Madras than in any other part of India, and with what result? Here is one Srinivas R Wagel, of the alumni of Madras University, who, by his own showing, has delved deeply into the cup of British beneficence, with the infidelity of a cobra biting the hand which has fed him.

Indeed, it would almost seem to be a well-merited retribution were the British Raj to withhold from India the governing hand which holds to a nicety the balance between its nations and religions At once the fair lands of Madras and Bengal, populated by millions of peaceful Hindus, would be ravaged and put to the Mohammedan sword of the more robust fighting races of India.

For more than a century has India, under British rule, prospered and developed. The Madrasses and Bengals have waxed fat in a land which before the advent of the British ran with the blood of internecine strife.

However, the purport of the complaint of Mr. Srinivas R Wagel appears to be that complete self-government is yet denied to India. The reason for this is that India collectively is not yet ripe for self-government But by every available process, the fitness of India to this end is being developed — and especially through the priceless channel of education.

Although the masses of India are illiterate, many millions of children attend schools inaugurated by the British. The fact that only a small percentage of these scholars is female is due to the prejudice and sex tyranny of the Indians themselves. In Farther India, where the Buddhist religion allows greater freedom to women, the percentage of female scholars is many times greater. The religious susceptibilities of India are respected by the British. As shown above, perfect religious liberty does not always work harmoniously with the efforts made for their education; this situation is pregnant with difficulty. Nevertheless, complete religious liberty is the order of the day, the British limiting their good offices in this respect solely to the extermination of religious malpractices, such as suttee—the burning alive of a widow upon the funeral pyre of her husband.

There are splendid universities in Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Allahabad, and the Punjab and these have a national network of affiliated colleges. There are many engineering schools, medical colleges, and technical institutions as well as normal schools for the training of Indian teachers.

This great work is, of course, by comparison with the four hundred odd millions of population, but a grain of mustard seed. But it surely will spread over the land. The British are hastening by all means at their disposal the eventual fitness of India for self-government.

Our learned friend probably would be more worthily occupied also in hastening that end, than in penning cleverly expressed appeals to the American newspaper. Many American people will recognize that a wise system of government in their smaller dependencies of the Philippines and Cuba has accomplished or is bringing about precisely what England aims for in its vast Indian dependency which must perforce take generations to accomplish.

Already the people of India have much to say in judicial administration—there are native Indian judges and advocates galore. Most of the larger towns in India enjoy complete municipal self-government in which the native voice is an important factor.

The press censorship of which Mr. Srinvas R. Wagel complains, is solely due to the fact that certain native editors, whose education gives them but a local range of vision, play insidiously with oriental adroitness upon the fanaticism and ignorance of their readers. Unbridled press license would breed local chaos, and hinder the general advancement of India toward complete native self-government.

The trend of Mr. Wagel's article is to depreciate British rule in India. Let him remember the educational facilities, the commercial freedom and development, the complete religious liberty of the people, the famine insurance funds, the tens of thousands of miles of canals which irrigate tens of millions of acres. All of these things have been instituted by the British.

Let him also remember the hundreds of millions of souls, adherents to all the great religions, speaking nearly one hundred and fifty different languages who, for the first time in Indian history, live together in peace and harmony.

The wisest and best of the British race spent their lives in this great altruistic work and the future generations of India will profit thereby.

In the meantime, although the British sword is always sharps against the enemies of India, its forbearance toward the Indian people is so great that it is rare indeed that they are even tapped with the flat of it.

THE HOUSE WREN

THE diminutive house wren frequents barns and gardens, and particularly old orchards in which the trees are partially decayed. He makes his nest in a hollow where perhaps a wood-pecker had a domicile the year before, but he is a pugnacious character, and if he happens to fancy one of the boxes put up for blue-birds, he does not hesitate to take it. He is usually not slow to avail himself of boxes, gourds, tin cans, or empty jars placed for his accommodation.

In food habits the house wren is entirely beneficial. He may be said to live upon animal food alone, for an examination of 88 stomachs showed that 98 per cent. of the contents was made up of insects or their allies, and only two per cent. was vegetable food, including bits of grass and similar matter, evidently taken by accident with the insects Half of this food consisted of grasshoppers and beetles; the remainder of caterpillars, bugs, and spiders. As the wren is a prolific breeder, frequently rearing in a season from 12 to 16 young, a family of these birds must cause considerable reduction in the number of insects in a garden. Wrens are industrious foragers, searching every tree, shrub, and vine for caterpillars, and examining every post and rail of the fence and every cranny in the wall for insects or spiders.

The house wren is only one of a numerous group of small birds of similar habits. There are within the limits of the United States 28 species and sub-species of wrens, occupying more or less completely the whole country from the Atlantic to the Pacific. With the exception of the marsh wren, they all appear to prefer some cozy nook for a nesting site, and, as it happens, the farm buildings afford just the place desired. This has led several of the wrens to seek out the habitation of man, and he is benefited by their destruction of noxious insects. No species of wren has been accused of harm, and their presence should be encouraged about every farm, ranch, village, or suburban residence.

WORTH REMEMBERING

Cabbages make good winter feed for poultry. Secure some now.

Do not put a heavy mulch on perennials. It is likely to smother the plants. Straw makes the best mulch

A final clearing of trash from the garden is due now. Trash and weeds make fine harbors for insects to winter in.

Parsnips may be left in the ground over winter. If wanted for winter use dig late in the fall and store in a box of soil in a cool place.

Do not coddle your plants. Give them plenty of light and fresh air. Keep them clean and give them what water they need—neither too much nor too little.

You'd better put a little good rich garden soil in the cellar or where it will not freeze. It will come handy to start those early vegetable and flower seeds in next spring.

Mulch the tulip bed with straw or strawy manure as soon as the ground freezes.

If a merchant or a manufacturer is willing to spend good money for advertising, to ask you to try his store or his product, it stands to reason that he must have something worth offering. Otherwise you would not go back, or you would not again purchase the product, and the first sale would be the last. In that case advertising would NOT pay. It only pays when it brings continuous patronage, and to do that there must be real value given. That is the reason advertised stores or products are almost invariably good. It will pay you to patronize the advertisers.

PETERBORO'S INDUSTRIES ARE IN A THRIVING CONDITION SAYS MR. E. EDMUND STARR

Auditor and Inspector for the Workmen's Compensation Board Has Spent Several Weeks in the City, Auditing the Payrolls of the Various Industries—Mr. Starr is Very Favourably Impressed With What He Has Seen During His Stay Here—A Synopsis of the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Mr. E. E. Starr, auditor and inspector for the Workmen's Compensation Board, who has been in the city upwards of four weeks in connection with his official duties, is nearing the completion of his task. In conversation with the Examiner, Mr. Starr related a number of interesting matters concerning the business with which he is connected. One of his chief duties is to audit the pay-rolls of the various industries and places of employment covered by the Workmen's Compensation Act. The pay roll forms the basis for an assessment out of which the compensation to workmen is paid. Mr. Starr estimates the number of pay-rolls in Peterborough at two hundred. That of the Canadian General Electric Company, which is probably the largest of them all, was audited at the head office of the firm in Toronto. The remainder of them are audited right in Peterborough. Today Mr. Starr made his initial visit to the Quaker Oats Company.

Courteously Treated.

Mr. Starr is favourably impressed as a result of his visit here. He says he has received nothing but courteous treatment from employers of labour and all others with whom he has been associated. "From the office boy up to the general manager I have received the most generous treatment," said Mr. Starr, who included in his commendation street car conductors and others. He has yet to find a case in Peterborough where an attempt has been made to evade the law. This has occurred to some slight extent in one or two places. Employers of labour in Peterborough are ready and willing to conform to the Act, which became operative simultaneously with the birth of the current year. It will be noted that the compensation for injury is payable irrespective of any question of negligence or absence of negligence, and the old defences of common employment and voluntary assumption of risk are no longer applicable. The provisions of the Act respecting compensation are in lieu of the right of action for damages at law.

"Your industries are in a mighty thriving condition," said Mr. Starr, who went on to point out how they had taken the initiative at the outset, with the result that when the bottom dropped out of the market for their regular line of products, they speedily made plans for the manufacture of war munitions. Mr. Starr referred to the Brinton Carpet Company, which was in receipt of a letter from one of the largest commission houses in London, England, asking for quotations on their goods. This Mr. Starr regarded as a practical tribute to the firm's ability to produce goods that can find a place on the larger markets of the world.

SYNOPSIS OF WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT

The Workmen's Compensation Act was passed by the Ontario Legislature on 1st May, 1914, and became operative as respects payment of compensation on 1st January, 1915.

A number of amendments were made to it on 8th April, 1915, relating chiefly to matters of detail and not involving any change in principle.

The Act was framed by Sir William Meredith, the present Chief Justice of Ontario, and embodies what may be described as a new code of law respecting compensation for accidents to workmen.

Employments Covered.

The part of the Act which is to be administered by the Board is called Part I. It does not apply to all employments, but it applies to employments in the very large numbers of industries enumerated in Schedule 1 and Schedule 2, chief among which are manufacturing, building, construction, lumbering, mining, quarrying, transportation, navigation, operation of public utilities, etc.

The distinction between the two Schedules is that as to employers in the industries in Schedule 1 the Board levies an assessment and collects an acciden, fund out of which the compensation to workmen is paid, the employers in this Schedule not being individually liable to pay the compensation; while as to employers in Schedule 2, no accident fund is collected from them, but they are individually liable to pay the compensation as each acciden, occurs.

When Compensation Payable.

The compensation for the injury is payable irrespective of any question of negligence or absence of negligence, and the old defences of common employment and voluntary assumption of risk are no longer applicable. The only cases in which compensation is not payable, provided the accident arises out of and in the course of the employment, are:

(1) Where the disability lasts less than seven days;

(2) Where the accident is attributable solely to the serious and wilful misconduct of the workman and does not result in death or serious disablement.

No agreement to forego the benefits of the Act is valid; no part of the amount payable to the accident fund by the employer is to be charged against the workman; and the compensation cannot be assigned, charged, or attached, except with the approval of the Board.

An employer in Schedule 1 may carry himself on his wage list at a reasonably salary, not exceeding $2,000 per annum, and if he makes return to the Board accordingly he or his dependants will be entitled to compensation as in the case of an ordinary workman.

Compensation is to be paid for the industrial diseases specified in the Act as well as for accidents.

If the accident results in death and the workman leaves a widow but no children, the widow is entitled during life or widowhood to a payment of $20 a month.

If he leaves a widow and children the payment to the widow is $20 a month and $5 a month for each child under 16 years of age, but not exceeding $40 in all.

If he leaves children only, the payment is $10 a month for each child under 16, but not exceeding $40 in all.

Where the dependants are persons other than those above mentioned, they are entitled to a sum reasonable and proportionate to the pecuniary loss occasioned to them by the workman's death, but not exceeding to the parent or parents $20 a month, or in the whole $30 a month.

All the above is governed, however by the provision that in no case is the compensation to exceed 55% of the workman's earnings in the employment, and all provisions for compensation are subject to the proviso that no salary or wages of a workman shall be reckoned at more than $2,000 a year.

The necessary expenses of burial, not exceeding $75, are also in all cases to be paid.

Where a widow marries again the periodical payment ceases on her marriage, but she is entitled within a month after her marriage to a lump sum equal to two year's payments.

Where the accident results in total disability of the workman, he is entitled during the continuance of the disability, whether for life or temporarily, to a weekly or monthly payment equal to 55% of his earnings in the employment.

An important feature of the compensation under the Act is that it is payable periodically rather than in a lump sum, and as a rule it continues during disability or during life, as the case may be.

Where the impairment of earning capacity does not exceed 10% the compensation is to be fixed by the Board at a lump sum, unless the Board thinks it is not to the advantage of the workman to do so, and the Board may in other cases fix the compensation at a lump sum, if it sees fit, or may in cases of special need make lump sum advances without entirely commuting the compensation.

Settling Compensation.

All questions as to the right to compensation and the amount of it are to be determined by the Board and its officers instead of in the Courts.

The employer is required by the Act, to notify the Board, within three days, of any accident happening to a workman in his employ which disables the workman from earning full wages.

The workman must, as soon as practicable and before voluntarily leaving the employ, give notice of the accident to the employer, and, where the compensation is payable out of the accident fund (being in all cases under Schedule 1), also to the Board, and must make claim for compensation within six months.

Forms supplied by the Board are required to be filled up by the workman, by the employer and by the doctor, where one has been in attendance, and forwarded to the Board, and from the particulars given in these reports, and from an examination by a medical referee chosen by the Board, where that is deemed necessary, the Board will deal with the claim, award payment, make further investigation, or take such action as seems proper.

How New Laws Differ from Old.

Some respect in which the new law differs from the old may be mentioned.

(1) Under the old law an injured workman, or the dependants of a deceased workman, had no right to recover anything unless negligence or breach of duty of the employer could be proved. If he was himself guilty of negligence contributing to the accident he could not recover. If he was injured by the negligence of a fellow workman, or if it was a case in which he was presumed to have voluntarily assumed the risks of the employment, he was also barred from recovery. Under the new law none of these [illegible] of any consequence. The new law recognizes that the misfortune of a crippled workman or the needs of his widow or children are not any less because he was at fault or someone else was not at fault, and it provides that the workman or his dependants are to be entitled to compensation irrespective of negligence or any other circumstance, except only as before mentioned, that the accident must not be attributed solely to his own serious and wilful misconduct; and even where it is attributable solely to his serious and wilful misconduct he or his dependants will still be entitled if the accident results in serious disablement or death.

(2) Under the old law the compensation was a lump sum fixed by the jury or the judge, varying greatly in different cases. Under the new law there is greater certainty and a more equitable rule as to the amount. A very important feature of difference in the new law is the periodical continued payment instead of a lump sum in settlement of damages. Often lump sums in damages recovered by the widow or other dependants have been badly invested, frittered away, or otherwise lost, and the widow and the children perhaps in the end left without support. The policy of the new Act is to provide continued support.

(3) Under the old law if the employer and the employee did not agree upon a settlement the remedy was an action at law. This often meant long and expensive litigation, loss of time, and annoyance, and perhaps in the end not a very satisfactory result. The ordinary workman would often prefer to do without damages or compensation rather than undertake the trouble and expense; and perhaps he did not have the money and could not proceed without it. On the other hand, in many cases claims for damages would be brought against employers without, just grounds, and litigation and expense would be entailed; and often the employer, rather than fight the lawsuit, would settle. In this way the old system of recovering damages by lawsuit was unsatisfactory and oppressive to one or both parties. Those who deserve compensation most often got nothing while some not entitled, harassed employers with vexatious actions. Under the new law all matters as to the right to and the amount of compensation are settled by the Board with little or no expense to the parties and without an appeal. Employers in Schedule 1 will no longer be liable to pay or to be sued for damages, but will be liable only to contribute to the fund out of which the compensation is to be paid.

Collection of Accident Fund

All employers in the industries in Schedule 1 are required, without notice, and subject to penalty in case of default, to prepare and transmit to the Board statements of the amount of wages paid and expected to be paid by them. Assessments are levied for such sums as are deemed necessary for each class of industry, and after receiving notice of assessment employers must transmit the amount to the Board in accordance with the terms of the notice. Employers failing to make pay roll returns may be assessed for such sum as the Board deems right. In case of failure to pay any assessment judgment may be entered in the County or District Court, or other means of enforcing payment may be taken, and while in default the employer will also be liable for the compensation payable in respect of any accidents to workmen in his employ. If any employer is for any reason not assessed he is nevertheless liable to pay the amount for which he should have been assessed. Audit of pay roll statements will be made by the officers of the Board from time to time and errors in amount or classification or otherwise will be corrected.

Employers commencing any industry after an assessment has been made are required forthwith under penalty to notify the Board of the fact, and security may be required in the case of any industry carried on only temporarily.

A person letting work to be done by contract is responsible for seeing that the contractor and any sub-contractor pay their proper assessment, and if he fails to do so, is himself personally liable to the Board for it.

Wherever any employer included in Schedule 1 would be entitled to a lien under The Mechanics' and Wage Earners' Lien Act it is the duty of the owner as defined by that Act to see that assessments are paid by such employer, and if he fails to do so the owner will be personally liable to pay them to the Board.

Employers in the industries included in Schedule 2 are not required to contribute to the accident fund, but as accidents occur from time to time they must pay the compensation fixed by the Board. They are, however, to be assessed for contribution to the expenses of administration.

Accident Prevention.

Employers in the industries included in any class may form themselves into an association for accident prevention and may make rules for that purpose, and when such rules are approved by the Board and by the Lieutenant-Governor Council they shall be binding upon all the employers in the class. Such an association may, in accordance with such rules, appoint an inspector or expert for accident prevention, and his salary may be paid in whole or in part by the Board, and the Board may make a grant towards the expenses of any such association.

Committee of Employers.

Employers in any class in Schedule 1 may appoint a committee of not more than five of their number to watch over their interests and to supervise payment of claims or act as a medium of communication with the Board.

Part II. of the Act.

Though not covered by the new code of law and not under the jurisdiction of the Board it may be mentioned that, with the exception of farm labourers and menial and domestic servants, workmen omitted or excluded from Schedule 1 and Schedule 2 have, by Part II. of the Act, had their right of action in the ordinary Courts extended by the taking away of the employers' defences of common employment and assumed risk and by making contributory negligence only a ground for reduction of damages instead of a bar to recovery, and these workmen are thus in a better position than under the old law.

For more complete information upon other points the Act should also be perused.

Raises $34.00 Per Head for Patriotic Fund—Population Only 2,200

FORD CITY, Ont., Nov. 15, 1915.—Patriotism burning with a passion of self-sacrifice swept the little town of Ford City, Ontario, with a population of 2,200 persons, this home of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, and in two days time contributed to the Canadian Patriotic Fund and the Red Cross Funds a grand total of $75,776.99.

Employees and officers and stockholders of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, alone contributed $36,204.49, or an average of $29.00 each to the funds.

The 1,625 Ford factory employees pledged $41,410.04 to the funds. This is an average of $1.71 per year, per man. Every one of the Russian employes of the company pledged a day's pay per month for a period of twelve months. Hundreds of others followed suit.

Office employes of the Ford Company raised $6,168.60. Every one, almost without exception, gave to the absolute limit. For instance, twenty-two girl office employes, stenographers and file-clerks, contributed a total of $77.50 per month for twelve months. Twelve men in one department pledged $64 a month. Other departments in the office did as well.

When the final totals were in, even those who knew the intense patriotism of the workers, were surprised at the response which had been made. There were, for instance, several clerical workers in the office and mechanics in the factory whose contributions were in the neighbourhood of $100.

The funds were swelled still further by the contributions of the executives who gave a total of $16,700.

The campaign for funds at the Ford factory was in response to an appeal for contributions to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, the Canadian Red Cross Fund and the British Red Cross Fund, made to the town of Ford City, and a committee was organized composed of W. L. McGregor, C.A., Montreal, president of the Ford, and W. E. Jones. October 26 and 27 were set for the canvassing days, and it was publicly announced that every effort would be made to raise $25,000 for the funds.

When the canvass of the factories of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, and the six other industries most of which are dependent upon the Ford industry, got well under way, however, it became apparent that the committee had underestimated by thousands of dollars the patriotism of the workers.

Other factories in Ford City, which are smaller than that of the Ford Company, did as well in proportion. Employees of the American Arch Trimmine Company gave $10,400.00. Of the 111 employees of the company, 106 pledged a day's wage a month for twelve months to the funds. Employees of the Dominion Stamping Company contributed $4,500. Those of the Fisher Body Company, $4,425.40; those of the McGregor-Banwell Fence Company, $2,647; those of the Imperial Machine Company, $1,000; those of the Canadian Lamp & Stamping Company, $955, and $2,400 was contributed by the clerks in Ford City not employed in the factory industries.

FRESH AIR IN THE HOME

A PENNSYLVANIA doctor says that people who live on the farm will never enjoy good health until they let more air into their bedrooms. While it is, we believe, becoming more and more common for people to sleep in a room where the windows are raised in winter, there are many others who will tell us that they cannot see the sense in having windows up on a cold winter's night. Why is it necessary, they ask, when windows are open all day to have them open at night as well. The most of us, however, are aware that cold air is not always pure air. One who is not accustomed to sleeping with open windows, might commence by raising the window only an inch and gradually increasing the space.

Pneumonia is a germ disease caused by a living organism. It is contagious and prevails largely in the winter months, at a time when people commence to close their bedrooms. This germ flourishes most in a cold bedroom with poor ventilation. Adenoids, which is a common disease now among the young people, is caused largely by sleeping in rooms that are poorly ventilated. It is said that the disease can be cured without an operation by sleeping in the open air, for a period of six months. Another effective way of making proper ventilation is to leave the window screens in all winter. By tacking cheese cloth over the screen, it will prevent all unnecessary drafts, at the same time admitting the free circulation of oxygen into the room.

Auditor and Inspector for the Workmen's Compensation Board Has Spent Several Weeks in the City, Auditing the Payrolls of the Various Industries—Mr. Starr is Very Favourably Impressed With What He Has Seen During His Stay Here—A Synopsis of the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Mr. F. E. Starr, auditor and inspector for the Workmen's Compensation Board, who has been in the city upwards of four weeks in connection with his official duties, is nearing the completion of his task. In conversation with the Examiner, Mr Starr related a number of interesting matters concerning the business with which he is connected. One of his chief duties is to audit the pay-rolls of the various industries and places of employment covered by the Workmen's Compensation Act. The pay-roll forms the basis for an assessment out of which the compensation to workmen is paid. Mr. Starr estimates the number of pay-rolls in Peterborough at two hundred. That of the Canadian General Electric Company, which is probably the largest of them all, was audited at the head office of the firm in Toronto. The remainder of them are audited right in Peterborough. Today Mr. Starr made his initial visit to the Quaker Oats Company.

Courteously Treated.

Mr. Starr is favourably impressed as a result of his visit here. He says he has received nothing but courteous treatment from employers of labour and all others with whom he has been associated. "From the office boy up to the general manager I have received the most generous treatment," said Mr. Starr, who included in his commendation, street car conductors and others. He has yet to find a case in Peterborough where an attempt has been made to evade the law. This has occurred to some slight extent in one or two places. Employers of labour in Peterborough are ready and willing to conform to the Act, which became operative simultaneously with the birth of the current year. It will be noted that the compensation for injury is payable irrespective of any question of negligence or absence of negligence, and the old defences of common employment and voluntary assumption of risk are no longer applicable. The provisions of the Act respecting compensation are in lieu of the right of action for damages at law.

"Your industries are in a mighty thriving condition," said Mr. Starr, who went on to point out how they had taken the initiative at the outset, with the result that when the bottom dropped out of the market for their regular line of products, they speedily made plans for the manufacture of war munitions. Mr. Starr referred to the Brinton Carpet Company, which was in receipt of a letter from one of the largest commission houses in London, England, asking for quotations on their goods. This Mr Starr regarded as a practical tribute to the firm's ability to produce goods that can find a place on the larger markets of the world.

SYNOPSIS OF WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT

The Workmen's Compensation Act was passed by the Ontario Legislature on 1st May, 1914, and became operative as respects payment of compensation on 1st January, 1915.

A number of amendments were made to it on 8th April, 1915, relating chiefly to matters of detail and not involving any change in principle.

The Act was framed by Sir William Meredith, the present Chief Justice of Ontario, and embodies what may be described as a new code of law respecting compensation for accidents to workmen.

Employments Covered.

The part of the Act which is to be administered by the Board is called Part I. It does not apply to all employments, but it applies to employments in the very large numbers of industries enumerated in Schedule 1 and Schedule 2, chief among which are manufacturing, building, construction, lumbering, mining, quarrying, transportation, navigation, operation of public utilities, etc.

The distinction between the two Schedules is that as to employers in the industries in Schedule 1 the Board levies an assessment and collects an acciden, fund out of which the compensation to workmen is paid, the employers in this Schedule not being individually liable to pay the compensation; while as to employers in Schedule 2, no accident fund is collected from them, but they are individually liable to pay the compensation as each acciden, occurs.

When Compensation Payable.

The compensation for the injury is payable irrespective of any question of negligence or absence of negligence, and the old defences of common employment and voluntary assumption of risk are no longer applicable. The only cases in which compensation is not payable, provided the accident arises out of and in the course of the employment, are:

(1) Where the disability lasts less than seven days;

(2) Where the accident is attributable solely to the serious and wilful misconduct of the workman and does not result in death or serious disablement.

No agreement to forego the benefits of the Act is valid; no part of the amount payable to the accident fund by the employer is to be charged against the workman; and the compensation cannot be assigned, charged, or attached, except with the approval of the Board.

An employer in Schedule 1 may carry himself on his wage list at a reasonably salary, not exceeding $2,000 per annum, and if he makes return to the Board accordingly he or his dependants will be entitled to compensation as in the case of an ordinary workman.

Compensation is to be paid for the industrial diseases specified in the Act as well as for accidents.

Scale of Compensation.

If the accident results in death and the workman leaves a widow but no children, the widow is entitled during life or widowhood to a payment of $20 a month.

If he leaves a widow and children the payment to the widow is $20 a month and $5 a month for each child under 16 years of age, but not exceeding $40 in all.

If he leaves children only, the payment is $10 a month for each child under 16, but not exceeding $40 in all.

Where the dependants are persons other than those above mentioned, they are entitled to a sum reasonable and proportionate to the pecuniary loss occasioned to them by the workman's death, but not exceeding to the parent or parents $20 a month, or in the whole $30 a month.

All the above is governed, however by the provision that in no case is the compensation to exceed 55% of the workman's earnings in the employment; and all provisions for compensation are subject to the proviso that no salary or wages of a workman shall be reckoned at more than $2,000 a year.

The necessary expenses of burial, not exceeding $75, are also in all cases to be paid.

Where a widow marries again the periodical payment ceases on her marriage, but she is entitled within a month after her marriage to a lump sum equal to two year's payments.

Where the accident results in total disability of the workman, he is entitled during the continuance of the disability, whether for life or temporarily, to a weekly or monthly payment equal to 55% of his earnings in the employment.

An important feature of the compensation under the Act is that it is payable periodically rather than in a lump sum, and as a rule it continues during disability or during life, as the case may be.

Where the impairment of earning capacity does not exceed 10% the compensation is to be fixed by the Board at a lump sum, unless the Board thinks it is not to the advantage of the workman to do so; and the Board may in other cases fix the compensation at a lump sum if it sees fit, or may in cases of special need make lump sum advances without entirely commuting the compensation.

Settling Compensation.

All questions as to the right to compensation and the amount of it are to be determined by the Board and its officers instead of in the Courts.

The employer is required by the Act, to notify the Board, within three days, of any accident happening to a workman in his employ which disables the workman from earning full wages.

The workman must, as soon as practicable and before voluntarily leaving the employ, give notice of the accident to the employer, and, where the compensation is payable out of the accident fund (being in all cases under Schedule 1), also to the Board, and must make claim for compensation within six months.

Forms supplied by the Board are required to be filled up by the workman, by the employer and by the doctor, where one has been in attendance, and forwarded to the Board, and from the particulars given in these reports, and from an examination by a medical referee chosen by the Board, where that is deemed necessary, the Board will deal with the claim, award payment, make further investigation, or take such action as seems proper.

Some respect in which the new law differs from the old may be mentioned.

(1) Under the old law an injured workman, or the dependants of a deceased workman, had no right to recover anything unless negligence or breach of duty of the employer could be proved. If he was himself guilty of negligence contributing to the accident he could not recover. If he was injured by the negligence of a fellow workman, or if it was a case in which he was presumed to have voluntarily assumed the risks of the employment, he was also barred from recovery. Under the new law none of these things is of any consequence. The new law recognizes that the misfortune of a crippled workman or the needs of his widow or children are not any less because he was at fault or someone else was not at fault, and it provides that the workman or his dependants are to be entitled to compensation irrespective of negligence or any other circumstance, except only as before mentioned, that the accident must not be attributed solely to his own serious and wilful misconduct; and even where it is attributable solely to his serious and wilful misconduct he or his dependants will still be entitled if the accident results in serious disablement or death.

(2) Under the old law the compensation was a lump sum fixed by the jury or the judge, varying greatly in different cases. Under the new law there is greater certainty and a more equitable rule as to the amount. A very important feature of difference in the new law is the periodical continued payment instead of a lump sum in settlement of damages. Often lump sums in damages recovered by the widow or other dependants have been badly invested, frittered away, or otherwise lost, and the widow and the children perhaps in the end left without support. The policy of the new Act is to provide continued support.

(3) Under the old law if the employer and the employee did not agree upon a settlement the remedy was an action at law. This often meant long and expensive litigation, loss of time, and annoyance, and perhaps in the end not a very satisfactory result. The ordinary workman would often prefer to do without damages or compensation rather than undertake the trouble and expense; and perhaps he did not have the money and could not proceed without it. On the other hand, in many cases claims for damages would be brought against employers without, just grounds, and litigation and expense would be entailed; and often the employer, rather than fight the lawsuit, would settle. In this way the old system of recovering damages by lawsuit was unsatisfactory and oppressive to one or both parties. Those who deserve compensation most often got nothing while some not entitled, harassed employers with vexatious actions. Under the new law all matters as to the right to and the amount of compensation are settled by the Board with little or no expense to the parties and without an appeal. Employers in Schedule 1 will no longer be liable to pay or to be sued for damages, but will be liable only to contribute to the fund out of which the compensation is to be paid.

All employers in the industries in Schedule 1 are required, without notice, and subject to penalty in case of default, to prepare and transmit to the Board statements of the amount of wages paid and expected to be paid by them. Assessments are levied for such sums as are deemed necessary for each class of industry, and after receiving notice of assessment employers must transmit the amount to the Board in accordance with the terms of the notice. Employers failing to make pay roll returns may be assessed for such sum as the Board deems right. In case of failure to pay any assessment judgment may be entered in the County or District Court, or other means of enforcing payment may be taken, and while in default the employer will also be liable for the compensation payable in respect of any accidents to workmen in his employ. If any employer is for any reason not assessed he is nevertheless liable to pay the amount for which he should have been assessed. Audit of pay roll statements will be made by the officers of the Board from time to time and errors in amount or classification or otherwise will be corrected.

Employers commencing any industry after an assessment has been made are required forthwith under penalty to notify the Board of the fact, and security may be required in the case of any industry carried on only temporarily.

A person letting work to be done by contract is responsible for seeing that the contractor and any sub-contractor pay their proper assessment, and if he fails to do so, is himself personally liable to the Board for it.

Wherever any employer included in Schedule 1 would be entitled to a lien under The Mechanics' and Wage Earners' Lien Act it is the duty of the owner as defined by that Act to see that assessments are paid by such employer, and if he fails to do so the owner will be personally liable to pay them to the Board.

Employers in the industries included in Schedule 2 are not required to contribute to the accident fund, but as accidents occur from time to time they must pay the compensation fixed by the Board. They are, however, to be assessed for contribution to the expenses of administration.

Accident Prevention.

Employers in the industries included in any class may form themselves into an association for accident prevention and may make rules for that purpose, and when such rules are approved by the Board and by the Lieutenant-Governor Council they shall be binding upon all the employers in the class. Such an association may, in accordance with such rules, appoint an inspector or expert for accident prevention and his salary may be paid in whole or in part by the Board and the Board may make a grant towards the expenses of any such association.

Committee of Employers.

Employers in any class in Schedule 1 may appoint a committee of not more than five of their number to watch over their interests and to approve payment of claims or act as a medium of communication with the Board.

Part II. of the Act.

Though not covered by the new code of law and not under the jurisdiction of the Board it may be mentioned that, with the exception of farm labourers and menial and domestic servants, workmen omitted or excluded from Schedule 1 and Schedule 2 have, by Part II. of the Act, had their right of action in the ordinary Courts extended by the taking away of the employers' defences of common employment and assumed risk and by making contributory negligence only a ground for reduction of damages instead of a bar to recovery, and these workmen are thus in a better position than under the old law.

For more complete information upon other points the Act should also be perused.

One who is not accustomed to sleeping with open windows, might commence by raising the window only an inch and gradually increasing the space.

Pneumonia is a germ disease caused by a living organism. It is contagious and prevails largely in the winter months, at a time when people commence to close their bedrooms. This germ flourishes most in a cold bedroom with poor ventilation. Adenoids, which is a common disease now among the young people, is caused largely by sleeping in rooms that are poorly ventilated. It is said that this disease can be cured without an operation by sleeping in the open air, for a period of six months. Another effective way of making proper ventilation is to leave the window screens in all winter. By tacking cheese cloth over the screen, it will prevent all unnecessary drafts, at the same time admitting the free circulation of oxygen into the room.

ASSURE POLISH STUDENTS.

Germans Promise Them Much at Reopening of Warsaw University.

BERLIN, Nov. 18.—"At the celebration incident to the reopening of War-saw University, General von Beseler, the German Governor General, in replying to the speech of thanks made by President Brudhinski of the university," says the Overseas News Agency, "urged that the youth of Poland, in accordance with the wish of Emperor William, resume the living of their intellectual life, untroubled by thoughts of strife, and aspire to the highest achievements of noble humanity."

The semi-official Nordeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung says: "Warsaw University will enjoy entire freedom after the manner of German universities. Classes will be taught in Polish. Under the Russian regime students were compelled to wear uniforms. Poles were almost excluded from the Faculty, the Russian language only was used, and students were under police control, being imprisoned at suspected of political misbehaviour. Under Germany it is said there will be no limitations on account of race or creed."

For one-piece frocks a combination of serge and silk is more attractive than one of serge alone and equally suitable for general wear.

MEN AT FRONT BELIEVE WAR WILL BE ALL OVER BY THE SPRING

"But Who Knows?" Asks Signaller Percy Gray In An Interesting Letter to His Mother—Cyclists Are Living Like Kings.

SIGNALLER PERCY GRAY

RATHER QUIET JUST NOW

Mrs. W. W. Gray 121 Brock Street has received the following interesting letter from her son Signaller Percy Gray, who is in France with the 2nd Cyclist Corps. The "Mac" referred to in his letter is Lance Corp. Alan McNab, son of the local G.T.R. Station Agent.

Somewhere in France.
Nov. 3, 1915.

Dear Mother,—Just a line or two to let you know I am still O.K., trusting this missive will find you all the same. Today is the anniversary of my leaving home to join the 21st Battalion for over-seas. What changes since then. It has been raining two days in succession and are now in for a third day of it by all appearances. Am writing this letter in Madamoselle's kitchen, which she has given the use of for the small consideration of two francs per week (40c.) It was sure miserable last night on duty. "Mac" and I were on from 12 till 4 a.m., raining, with a cold north wind blowing right into our sentry box. It is "Mac's" birthday today 20 years of age. You wouldn't know him now if you saw him, growing like a weed and filling out, sure is some difference in him to what he was a year ago. I suppose by this time the 93rd is coming along in good shape. You would laugh to see us getting our supply of coal. When "Mac" and I are on duty I stop the waggon to examine the pass and "Mac" make hay, or I should say, coal, while the sun shines. There is not a great deal of news this week, as nothing has happened of any great importance; rather quiet on this portion of the line, outside of a little "shell game" now and then.

It is the firm belief out here among the men that the war will finish about Spring, but then who knows. You hear all kinds of talk and rumours around here. We get the English papers every day, but then you know pretty nearly all that's in them before they arrive. I see by the papers the King was hurt when he was over here. I trust no serious results occur. Do you get all my letters, and how long does it take one to reach you. It takes your letters two weeks to reach us. Once I received two together, but then I didn't receive one for three weeks. Haven't had a letter for two weeks now, but received a parcel which came O.K. It is getting near dinner time and am beginning to wonder what the cook has put up for us, but I think it is a roast. We sure are lucky in the "grub" line. We live like kings to what other troops do. Saw in an old Toronto Globe that we were in action, and have been trying to figure out ever since what kind of action it was. Must close for this time. Kind regards to all.

Yours at the front,
BUD

P.S. Saw quite an exciting airfight the other day, it sure was exciting, too, while it lasted. As usual the Huns got the dirty end of it.

Billy Sunday Will Open New Temperance Campaign on Sunday

There is every indication that a considerable number of Peterborough citizens will hear Billy Sunday in the Toronto arena on Sunday afternoon and evening. These meetings, which are attracting the present attention of the entire province, have been arranged by the Committee of One Hundred, whose aim is to make Ontario dry by Dominion Day, 1916. The new movement is interpolitical and interdenominational. It has already succeeded during its brief existence in rallying the temperance people of all complexions, thousands of whom will be brought together on Sunday, to fire the first big gun in the new campaign. Billy Sunday will preach two of his famous sermons against the liquor traffic. At the 3 p.m. meeting the subject will be "The Trail of the Serpent," and in the evening, "Climbing up the Water Wagon."

Not Practical.

"The Romans had a strong sense of the beautiful," remarked the student.

"Yes," replied Mrs. McGuffle, "but they wasn't practical. For instance, those Roman candles was very pretty to look at, but they wasn't much good to read by."

A LETTER UPON OUR REQUIREMENTS IN MUNICIPAL MATTERS

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—With the spirit of your article in last night's Examiner, all thinking men must heartily agree. Our city is badly in need of good sensible men of broad views to conduct our municipal government. Particularly in the mayoral position do we need a man of that type, calm, sensible, without any brainstorms, and above all impervious to any party or clique. Too long have our city's affairs been managed in a comic opera manner. To-time of the Council taken up by a long discussion as to whether a street should be known as Gladstone or Stratton avenue and sides taken upon that question as if it was a matter of life and death to the city. One thing they deserve credit for, they are great on deputations; they have evidently inherited the spirit of Dickens' remark: "Hello! here's something, let's get up a deputation." The labour men, Mr. Editor, are interested in the city, and they strongly desire to see it a business city, not only well governed but economically governed. Whatever is for the benefit of our city is equally for the benefit of the labour men. Because of that we are going to strongly support Mr. J. J. Hunter in his candidature for Mayor. We believe him to be a man of clear, common sense views, with backbone enough to withstand the pressure that any party or set may put upon him, for their own benefit. If elected, we believe he will govern the city without fear or favour, and will study the interests of the citizens, which will be quite a new and pleasant experience for them. The fact that he is not connected with the aldermanic board is the great asset in his favour.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am,
Yours truly,
E. MITCHELL.

BERLIN NOW HEARS BRITISH SOLDIERS ARE NOT SO POOR

At the beginning of the European war the Germans professed a poor opinion of the British soldier. A change in the German view is indicated by a correspondent's article to the Berliner Tageblatt sent after the terrific battles of Givenchy and Loos. Referring to some British prisoners he says:

They constantly wash themselves like cats. Whenever or wherever you see them they are brushing or sculling themselves. With their pocket knives they scrape the spots off their uniforms.

A couple of Highlanders are in front of the hydrant industriously washing the mud off their knees. It is plain that they love order and neatness. They are different from the French prisoners who do not trouble themselves so much about their outward appearance.

Yesterday these Englishmen resembled a lot of tramps as they emerged from the battle. To-day they are as neat as a pin. Some have rather hard faces like those seen in the Whitechapel district of London but the majority of them are fine, clean, honest looking fellows. They are good soldiers without a doubt, faithful and brave. It is a mistake to believe that Kitchener's army is made up of recruits from the slums and the underworld. Many are respectable persons who are not obliged to go to the front if they had not felt so inclined.

The soldiers are quiet and reserved, but when addressed they are respectful, and soon enter into lively conversation. They are honest and tell you that they are listed to fight for their country. One soldier who was from Wales, told me that they were fighting the Germans here in France as they feared we would invade England.

"But that is silly," I replied. "That would be impossible with your fleet."

"I don't know about that, sir," he said. "You might have landed troops in England just as we did in Gallipoli."

When asked if they would like to continue fighting all said that they would. With the exception of one prisoner an artist, none of them had any clear idea just at what point he had been fighting. All they can tell you is that they had been in the trenches.

The majority gave it as their opinion that Germany would be beaten in the end. Kitchener, they said, could get all the men he wanted. They did not favour conscription. As one aptly remarked:

"It is better this way. Let him who wants to fight do so and who wants to stay home do so. There is neither honour nor patriotism in a man who is forced to fight. That is my view. Of course we all wish that the war will soon be over. We cherish no particular hate against Germany. We are only fighting for our dear, beloved England."

Several English officers are standing nearby. They say it does not matter to them how long the war lasts—one year, two years or three years. England has the money and the men, and the longer the war the stronger she will grow. If they failed to break through our lines now well, they will try until they do.

With them also is a French officer, who enters into the conversation.

The Englishmen fall in line to march to the train. They are impatient to be on the way. They laugh and joke and sing. With lively elastic step they start and all swing along more like athletes than soldiers. Some of them smile and wink at me. How quickly they have adjusted themselves to their new surroundings. If they go into battle in the same manner as they are now marching to the prisoners' camps, then God be with us!

Hindenburg's Wife Denies His Special Knowledge of Swamps

BERLIN, Nov. 17.—Frau von Hindenburg, wife of the most popular of the German army leaders, recently granted an interview to the Hungarian journalist Nicholas Vecei. He says:

"The wife of the great German Field Marshal is a woman of pronounced German type. She is tall and strong, but not stout and her natural grace gives her an almost youthful appearance. Although she has passed the half-century mark nobody would take her to be more than 40 years old. Her rich blond hair is but slightly mixed with gray, her large blue eyes give her a particular charm and she moves with the grace and ease of a young girl. Her face has a hard and severe expression, but her voice is soft and her manners are charming. She dresses very plainly and never wears any jewelry but her wedding ring and a narrow bracelet, a gift of her famous husband.

"The lady received me at her hotel after the unveiling of the giant wooden statue of Field Marshal von Hindenburg in Berlin. 'You desire me to talk of my husband and to tell you how he lived before the war,' she said. 'The Field Marshal has always been a typical soldier. When the war broke out he was, of course, greatly excited. He had been retired four years before and was afraid that he would not be permitted to go to the front. An hour after mobilization was proclaimed he offered his services to the Minister of War, but he only received a noncommittal answer, which stated that he might possibly be called later. Our only son and our two sons-in-law left for the front, but my husband had to stay with me at our residence, 15 Wellenkind street, Hanover.

"He became grouchy and melancholy and would not be humored. At last, on August 22, of last year he received a telegram informing him that he had been appointed commander-in-chief of the German forces in Eastern Prussia and that General von Ludendorff, his future Chief of Staff, would meet him at Hanover to accompany him to the front. Now he was as happy as a boy and he started packing his things with feverish haste. When General von Ludendorff arrived a few hours later he was ready. I went to the depot with him and have not seen him since.'

"When I asked whether it was true that the Field Marshal had been the military instructor of the Emperor and that he had made a special study of the strategic value of the Mazurian Lake district, Frau von Hindenburg replied smilingly: 'These stories are legends. My husband never was a tutor, nor an intimate friend of the Kaiser. When he was commander of an army corps he had to report to the Emperor personally once a month, but further than that the monarch did not now him.

"It is also untrue that he made a special study of the Mazurian lakes. When he was stationed at Koenigsberg as a captain of the general staff years ago he studied the military conditions on the eastern frontier, he every other staff officer, but he paid no special attention to the lakes. As a matter of fact, he made more extensive studies on the western frontier than in the east.

"My husband writes to me almost every day," she continued, "but he never mentions strategic matters and he does not report his victories to me. When he destroyed the first Russian army at Tannenberg he did not even send a telegram and I never learned more about this battle than what the newspapers reported. The Field Marshal only writes about minor incidents at the front, about the thousands of congratulatory letters he has received from all parts of the world and about the excellent state of his health. Since he left me to go to the front he has not been sick a single day."

To my remark that more monuments would probably be erected in honour of her husband than of Bismark, Frau von Hindenburg replied positively:

"That is all nonsense. Bismark and Moltke were our greatest men, because they welded the German Empire together. We are to-day only defending their work and the unity of the German nation. Our statesmen and soldiers are doing nothing in this war but building further on the foundations laid down by Bismark, Moltke and the other great leaders of 1870-71."

SHOT TO DEATH BY THE STATE

Salt Lake Murderer Went to His Death Fighting in an Insane Manner

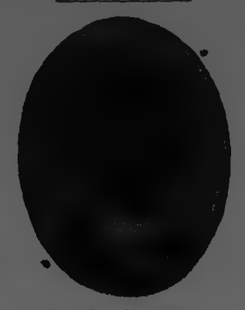
Special to The Examiner:

SALT LAKE CITY Utah. Nov. 19—Shot through the heart while blind-folded and strapped in a chair, Joseph Hillstrom, young I. W. W. leader, convicted of murdering two men here for robbery in January, 1914, was legally executed by the State to-day. The pleadings of the Swedish Government, and of President Wilson's intercession on two occasions, failed to save Hillstrom.

Five riflemen shot Hillstrom. He was pronounced dead at 7:42.

Hillstrom went to his death fighting in an insane frenzy. In some unknown manner he had concealed a broom handle in his cell, and when the door was opened he leaped upon the guards, swinging a club fiercely on their heads, severely cutting one about the scalp and face.

The guards sprang upon him and overpowered him.



TAYLOR STATTEN,

Boys' work secretary of the National Council of the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Statten is well and favourably known to the boys of Canada, having been a leader in every Boys' Work Conference conducted in Ontario. He is the man behind the Canadian standard efficiency tests, which will be discussed in the Conference, and will speak in George Street Methodist Church on Sunday morning.

Aged Prisoner At County, etc.

Henderson Nesbitt told of having given the deceased his supper of bread and water at 6.30. He saw him again at 8 o'clock. He was lying with his head and shoulders on the bed and his feet on the floor. The gaoler asked him if there was anything wrong and he replied "no."

Turnkey Ray in his evidence, testified to the prisoner being apparently alright when he visited the cell between six and seven this morning, but on being summoned later found him dead.

Jno. McCory, a prisoner in an adjoining cell, told of going into the deceased's cell between seven and eight o'clock and assisted him to take off his clothes to get him to bed. At nine o'clock McCory heard a spluttering noise like a drunken man would make. The deceased had rolled off his bed. Between four and five o'clock he seemed restless. At six thirty witness felt Olivers' pulse and it was still beating. It was later when he summoned the gaoler, who found him dead.

Dr. Morgan, the gaol physician, stated that he was called to the gaol about 8 o'clock this morning. He found Oliver dead, but the body was still warm. He attributed death to heart failure, due to lack of nourishment. Possibly he suffered a stroke of apoplexy. There were no marks of violence.

This concluded the evidence and the jury in ten minutes returned the above verdict.

The deceased's wife had not this morning been told of her husband's death. No relatives of the deceased are known. Consequently no arrangements have yet been made for the disposition of the body.

FOUR JUVENILES WERE SENTENCED

Two of Them Will Sojourn in the Industrial School for Three Years

At this morning's session of the police court, a couple of youngsters were sentenced to St. John's Industrial School, Toronto, for a period of three years each. They pleaded guilty to a charge of entering the Church of the Sacred Heart and removing a small sum of money. Other charges of a minor character were also registered against them. One of the boys was under suspended sentence. The boys were given a severe lecture by Magistrate Dumble, who advised them that they would have an opportunity of earning a trade. His Worship admonished them to realize the error of their ways and endeavour if possible to live down the dark and sunny past.

A couple of their companions of still younger years, will each be given ten lashes. The father of the boys consented to this form of punishment.

The two older boys, who will be sent to the Industrial School, broke down upon receiving sentence.

CITY HAS BEEN "PUNISHED" BY WARD SYSTEM

To the Editor:

Permit me to say that this will never be accomplished so long as the "ward system" of electing our aldermen is in vogue. That's the kernel of the whole matter. What else but the "ward system" is responsible for the caliber of some of the aldermen during the past five or six years.

Who will be the "Daniel that" will rise up in the Council and have the courage to move for a return to the "general vote" system when the vote of the whole city must determine the fitness of our aldermen. Then the ambitious aspirant, the fellow with an axe to grind or with a personal pull, or the inexperienced dummy will have less chance of "getting there."

The Examiner in days gone by did good service in strenuously advocating the "general vote" system, and was rewarded by seeing it adopted for a time. But the man who found he could not be elected outside of his own ward, agitated against it, and the city has been punished for it ever since.

Yours,
CIVIS.

Analyzes Mechanical Tendencies in 1916 Cars

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The first opportunity of making a personal survey of the various offerings of the leading automobile manufacturers of the country, says the Horseless Age in analyzing the 1916 tendency of design, will be afforded the motoring public at the opening of the great New York show in Grand Central Palace on December 31, held under the auspices of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. However a sufficient number of models have been announced to date to get a fairly complete idea of what the average 1916 car will represent, mechanically.

In 1914 it was prophesied time and again that the year 1915 would provide changes of an unusually startling nature in the automobile school of design, and such proved in due course, to be true. To-day, however, the prospective buyer may enjoy a positive surfeit of good things in the shape of greater value for less money and may revel in innovations of proven merit to an even greater degree than has been possible at any other stage of the history of the industry, the versatile automobile engineer having surpassed even himself in giving the motoring world a selection of new models which has certainly never before been paralleled either in America or abroad.

The advent of the twelve cylinder car as a commercial proposition and at a reasonable price is no doubt a big event of the year, and in addition to this the increasing number of eights listed for 1916 serves to emphasize the rapidly growing popularity of what may be termed the multi-cylinder type of motor.

In recent years pride of place has invariably been held against all comers by the four-cylinder motor. It still holds that place, but it does so by a very bare margin, indeed, the six pushing it closely. The six cylinder motor however, is not maintaining its gain of this year, when it represented 49.1 per cent of the total, as it has dropped back to 38.29 per cent., a figure which also represented its position in 1913.

The "eight" which stood at the almost negligible figure of 6 per cent early this year, now looms large with a percentage of 13.96 per cent., and the "twelve," as a newcomer, starts well with 6.3 per cent.

RECORD RECRUITING DAY.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—A cable to the Tribune from London says:

With only fifteen days left before Lord Derby's recruiting scheme gives way to conscription, bachelors stormed London's recruiting offices yesterday, until the war's record was made. Men with silk hats, men with opera hats, men with derbies, jostled one another in the anxiety to be enrolled as soon as possible. Sometimes they came in batches from the same business house, which had released all its clerks.

This rush to the colours was not confined to any section but from every part of London came reports of record enlistments.

Patriotic Meeting at Janetville Addressed by Patriotic Speakers

Judge Huycke and Col. Miller addressed a large patriotic meeting at Janetville, Manvers Township, last night. It was one of the most successful meetings they have attended, the big assembly hall occupied by the Foresters, being crowded with an audience that manifested a splendid enthusiasm. Many had driven distances of seven miles and more and some of those who were at the recent meeting at Manvers Station were so pleased on that occasion that they returned to the Janetville affair. Both the Peterborough speakers were in fine form and it has been learned that Peterborough's Speakers' Patriotic League have made a deep impression in this township. Last night's Chairman was Reeve James Armstrong and another speaker was Rev. Mr. Balfour. A short musical programme, including songs by Messrs. Anderson and Irwin was given.

Mr. R. G. Sturgeon a Candidate For Alderman in North Ward

Mr R. G. Sturgeon, 657 Bethune Street, announced to-day his candidature for the approaching aldermanic elections. He is one of the city's leading sanitary engineers, with office on Charlotte Street, and is the present Chairman of the General Board of the Ontario Sanitary Engineers. His experience in this connection should strengthen his candidacy in view of the assistance he would be able to give in handling the city's sewerage problem. Mr. Sturgeon will run in the North Ward.

THE SECOND PHASE OF THE SERBIAN CAMPAIGN

(Written by Frank H. Simonds.)

It is now plain that the second phase in the Serbian campaign is approaching a crisis. The first was concluded when the Serbs were driven west and south of the Orient Railway from Belgrade to the Bulgarian frontier. This opened the way, once the railroad was repaired, for German munitions and supplies to go to Constantinople. Pending the reconstruction of the railway the Danube was available and has been used for transport.

The second phase is supplied by the success of the Serbian armies, so far, in escaping destruction and by the effort of the Anglo-French forces to join hands with them and enable them to escape south into Macedonia. The parallel with Belgium is fairly complete. The allies were unable to reinforce Belgium and the defeated Belgians fell back upon Antwerp. With allied assistance they subsequently succeeded in getting out of Antwerp and reaching the Yser. For the Serbs the problem is the same.

Shaped Like Hour Glass.

To grasp the military situation a single figure suffices. Serbia is in shape much like an hour glass, the upper half being Old Serbia, the lower Macedonia. The narrow neck is at Uskub. Here Serbia is less than a hundred miles wide, and because of the mountains all roads from north to south converge in the neck of the glass, which is the Vardar Valley.

The only possible way in which the Serbians can get south to the allies is through this narrow neck, barely a dozen miles wide. To-day the Serbians are in the upper half of the hour glass, the allies in the lower, and the Bulgarians have seized the Uskub neck and have held it for more than two weeks.

Now the allied armies starting from Saloniki, were upwards of 150 miles from Uskub. The first sixty miles they had to cover were in Greek territory and they met with no opposition. But once across the Serb boundary they encountered Bulgarian troops, which had crossed the mountains from Strumnitza and were in the Vardar Valley, the main corridor of Macedonia which runs north and south from Saloniki to Uskub.

Three things the allies had to do—they had to push the Bulgars back off the Orient Railway in the Vardar Valley, the main corridor of Macedonia, which runs north and south from Saloniki to Uskub.

Three things the allies had to do—they had to push the Bulgars back off the Orient Railway in the Vardar Valley; they had to intrench themselves to protect the line against further attacks; they had to push north to Uskub to open the neck of the hour glass. In addition time was of utmost value, because they must, to be successful, get to Uskub before the main German army came thundering down from Nish.

Now, after three weeks the British and French have covered something more than half of the distance to Uskub. They have passed Krivolak and approached Veles known also as Kupril. In throwing the Bulgars back from the railroad and toward the east they have been uniformly successful.

On the other hand, as they pushed north they have been opposed by larger and larger Bulgar forces, which have come west over the mountains from the Bulgars' railroad at Kustendil and passed through Kumanovo and Uskub and passed south of Veles. At the same time the Bulgars have sent two forces over other roads, one leading from Uskub into the plain of Monastir and the other by Veles in the same direction.

Cutting off Serb. Rretreat.

A third Bulgar force has pushed north-west from Uskub, seeking to work straight across Serbia to Albania, cut the country in two, and join hands with the Albanians about Prisrend. Such a movement, if successful, would close the Serbian line of retreat into Albania and back upon the Adriatic, where it could be supplied by Italian and British ships at Durazza and Valona.

Roughly speaking, the present situation is this: The Germans and Austrians are steadily driving the Serbs south into the neck of the hour glass. The Bulgars are holding this neck and at the same time checking an allied advance north which aims at clearing the Bulgars out of the neck. The Serb problem is comprehended in the race between the allies and the Germans, the former to open a retreat for the Serbs while the Bulgars hold fast.

Holding Uskub, the Bulgars command the only route by which the allies could reinforce or supply the Serbs. They hold the main line of Serb retreat. Unless the hold can be broken up and take refuge in the Montenegrin mountains, which lack roads and constitute a natural stronghold, but once there the Serbs could not be supplied in great numbers and might perish of hunger.

Serbs in Great Danger.

At no time in the war has any considerable army been in graver danger than the Serbian, and its fate cannot long be postponed. If the Bulgars hang on to Uskub for another week, nothing is more certain than that they will be reinforced by the Germans, the allied advance will be permanently checked and the allied army will be faced with the necessity of retreating down the Vardar Valley and into Greek territory.

Even if the Serb army does get south, it is possible that the whole force will be inadequate to withstand the combined force of the Germans and their allies and will be driven out of Macedonia. This is what the allies have in mind in exerting pressure upon Constantine to obtain a promise to permit them to pass south, if they have to retreat.

The allies have failed to save Serbia, as was inevitable when Greece declined to enlist. They are striving madly to save the Serbian army and have made considerable progress, but are still far away from Uskub, and Uskub is the key of the whole military situation.

A possibility of the situation must be the fortune which overtook the British army early in the Peninsular war, when the French under Soult drove it in upon Corunna, and the army, after the death of its commander, Sir John Moore, was forced to take ship. The parallel between this and the earlier Peninsular war must appeal in more points than one, and supplies comfort both for the allies and for the Germans.

320 JURORS CHOSEN FOR WORK NEXT YEAR

The selection of jurors for 1916 was completed this morning by the following committee: Judge Huycke, Sheriff Hall, Mayor Buller, Mr. Frank Adams, Warden Kindred, and Mr. Ed. Elliott. They have been at work for some time and finally drew up a list of 240 petit jurors and 80 grand jurors. From this list the jurors for next year's courts will be drawn. They are for two sessions of the High Court and the County Court jury sessions. The names were selected from about three times that number, the others being discarded.

LUNCHEON SET AT $1.00 PER YARD

Owing to a typographical error appearing yesterday in connection with the advertisement of Richard Hall and Sons, a luncheon set cloth was quoted at ten cents per yard whereas it should read $1.00 per yard. Out of one and a quarter yards you get twenty pieces, a complete luncheon set, three sizes. This is excellent value and is one of the features of the drapery department of Richard Hall and Son.

No Duty to Be Charged On Gifts to Soldiers

Col Hodgetts, the Canadian Red Cross Commissioner in London, in a cable to the Dominion Headquarters, stated that the Treasury have given directions that all gift parcels of dutiable goods sent to members of the Canadian contingents on duty in Great Britain are to be admitted duty free. The contents of the parcels should be declared. Further, no duty is charged by the French Government on any goods sent to the British forces in France.

Germans Want Exact Facts About Copper, Brass, and Bronze.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—The Havas Correspondent at Geneva says that the German authorities at Ghent, Bruges, Mont. St. Amand, and Ledeberg have ordered by poster that all industrial establishments must declare how much copper, brass, and bronze they have and in what forms. The Directors of the industries are obliged to declare all old copper and extra pieces. The penalty for inexact or incomplete declarations is a fine of 20,000 marks or imprisonment.

The Commune of Menkle has been fined 5,000 marks because of obstacles placed on railway tracks to obstruct traffic. The same commune was fined in September because telephone wires were cut and taken away.

HARBORD COLLEGIATE TO PLAY HERE TO-MORROW

Rugby fans will get an opportunity to see a high class game to-morrow afternoon at Riverside Park, when the fast team of the Harbord Collegiate Institute, Toronto, will clash with the Peterborough Collegiate. The local students have won all their games so far this season, but they will have worthy adversaries to-morrow, when they tackle the Collegian from Toronto. The game is called for 2.30 o'clock. The Peterborough team will line up as follows:

Flying wing—E. Smythe.
Halves — Jobbitt, Eastwood and Long.
Quarter—Stevenson.
Scrimmage — Crawford, Soden and Brandon
Outside wing—Carmichael, Green and Webster.
Middle wing—Austin, T. H. Smith
Inside wings—Kirn, Canniff.
Spares—Vonden, McIntyre, Elliott and Logan.

tice of the illicit traffic. The military authorities state that they will demand the maximum fine, which is $500 on the first occasion.

The non-coms and privates of the 93rd Battalion clashed again in a soccer game at Central Park after the afternoon parade, yesterday, and this time the privates, orders or no orders, brought home the bacon by a 4 to 3 score. The game was hard fought and interesting and it was not until the last thirty seconds that Pte. Kitchen rolled the winning goal past Sergt.-Major Calladine. The men with the stripes were ahead twice in the last period, but the privates were not to be denied. Sergt. Naples was referee.

The men who went this morning were:

Arthur Horsfield, 226 London street born in Canada.

Kenneth McClelland, 301 Boswell Avenue, born in Canada.

Asa Downer, Douro, born in Canada.

Fred Primeau, Driscoll Terrace born in Canada.

C. E. Hill, 497 Rogers street, born in Canada.

Frank Godfrey, Birdsall, born in England.

Another recruit, Geo. Lockwood, R. R. No. 1, Keene, who was born in Australia, is in hospital, undergoing an operation, and will report as soon as he is fit.

Peterborough has supplied 126 men and five officers to the 33rd battery, so far.

Nearly 600 men have enlisted in Peterborough since August 1st. 15 officers and 581 men up to yesterday, is the record. Nearly 250 recruits have left Peterborough with different drafts during that period.

At the suggestion of the St. John Ambulance Association, all units of the Canadian expeditionary forces are to receive instruction in first-aid work before being sent overseas. The proposal in general outline is that three to five competent instructors, selected by the provincial councils of the association, will be appointed for each division or military district. They will have the rank of sergeants, and wherever a unit is being trained an instructor will be sent. The training will embrace such subjects as fractures, hemorrhages, insensibility artificial respiration, bandaging, and methods of carrying the wounded. The appointments will be made within the next ten days.

Another new battalion of infantry will be raised in this district, Col. Hemming having received instructions from Ottawa to that effect yesterday. The commander of the new battalion, which will be known as the 136th, will be Major S. B. Scobell of St. Catharines. He is outside of this division and his appointment is

Pte. Sidney Ecobichon as signalling sergeant, provisionally, was announced. Sergt. Ecobichon has been a member of the 57th Regiment signallers for a number of years. Lieut. Gillham, the signalling officer, intends to organize the battalion signallers at once.

The Lindsay Post says: Barrack Sergt. Bate, of the local armoury, received word to the effect that his son, Gordon Lewis Bate, had been wounded. The information came through the Adjt. General at Ottawa, the message reading:

"Sincerely regret to inform you 59040 Gordon Bate, 21st Batt. officially reported admitted Canadian General Hospital, Etaples, Nov. 9th. Gunshot wound left hip. Will send further particulars when received."

Gordon was a member of the 45th Regiment and attended several camps at Barriefield. His friends will be sorry to hear of his injury, but trust no serious effects will follow.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P.; Mr. E. A. Peck, Mr. Jos. Wearing, and Private Charlie Stenson, will speak at a Red Cross meeting in Young's Point on Monday night.

Presentation Made.

The Guild Room of St. John's was the scene of another farewell to departing choristers, when Corporal George Coleman and Gunner Arthur Horsfield were presented with leather wallet belts by their fellow choristers before leaving on active service. In asking Major Canon Davidson to make the presentation Mr. R. J. Devey voiced the appreciation of all the choristers of the valuable services to the church given by these members, and all regretted to lose them, although it was hoped only for a time. The past year had called all the men but three, or over 80 per cent. Major Davidson expressed his pleasure at being asked to make this presentation, and on his own and the congregation of St. John's behalf, heartily thanked both choristers for their splendid assistance in the chancel for many years. The work of all in the choir was highly appreciated, and occasions such as the present were true indications of the admirable fellowship that existed among them. The membership of the choir was still kept up, owing to the untiring work of Mr. Devey, many men out of the congregation having filled the ranks of those members now at the front. The presentations were then made and the recipients vocally proclaimed "Jolly good fellows," with added cheers. Corporal George Coleman thanked all present for their gift, but disclaimed any merit on his part. He had tried to do his duty, and in volunteering for the war that duty was the motive of his action. Had he known of to-night's happening he would not have been present, but he appreciated their good feeling, and hoped to be able to take his place among them after the war. Gunner Arthur Horsfield thanked the Rector and Choirmaster for their kind expressions, and the choristers for their present. He had been in the choir for twelve years and hoped to have the pleasure of singing with the choir again. This singing of the hymn "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," and the pronouncing of the Benediction brought the incident to a close. Of the St. John's "Old Boys," the departure for Kingston this morning of Arthur Horsfield makes the twelfth of those who have been in the front seats of the chancel during the last ten years, and now most of them are in England or France. Their names are: James and John Dennistoun, Claude Bartlett, Wilfrid and Reggie Stratton, Allen Kingscote, Leonard Williams, William Morris, Sydney Ecobichon, Horace Ballard, Howard Crowe, and Arthur Horsfield. When Major Davidson takes in duty at the front, he might possibly will have the care of, or come into contact with officers and men, some of whom have worked with him all through his clerical life in this city, and some who have passed through Baptism, Confirmation, and marriage during that period.

MUST DO THREE THINGS

THE poultryman who wishes to have a profitable laying flock for the season just ahead, must do three things NOW.

First, he must make his poultry house ready for the laying flock. This means that he must make it perfectly weather tight, repairing roof and windows if need be; that he must clean it thoroughly and either whitewash it or spray it with kerosene and zenoleum or kreso; that he must thoroughly renovate roosts and nests; he must refill the loft with clean straw; provide new sand and litter, hoppers for dry mash, for grit, shells, and charcoal, a table or shelf for pans or crocks for water and milk, and a cheese box of road dust or hard coal ashes.

He must determine the capacity of his house in order that the laying flock may not be crowded. Each laying hen needs at least four square feet of floor space. If an enclosed scratching shed is included, this may be considered in making calculations of the amount of floor space. If a considerable number of old fowls are kept over, it will be worth while to divide the poultry house proportionally between old and young.

He must gather in all the young chickens from brooder houses, coops, boxes, trees, and bushes, for a thorough culling of the flock. He must give pullets, hatched in April and May, a chance to make good. They will lay in November and December if properly housed and fed. He must dispose of all old stock, except birds desired as breeders; also old roosters and cockerels, excepting those needed as breeders or for family consumption. Colony houses may be utilized for cockerels and surplus stock until they can be profitably marketed.

MAN ILLS HIS MOTHER TEACHING HER TO SHOOT.

JOLIET, Ill., Nov. 17 — John Christopher is a carpenter. He works nights in the shops of the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern Railroad. His aged mother and father were left without protection. The house had been plundered twice by burglars.

John, twenty-two, bought a revolver. He loaded it, and then took the cartridges out to show his mother how to operate it. Four times he pulled the trigger. Then he pointed the weapon at his mother's head—and killed her instantly. He is hysterical, and the police are holding him.

The scene illustrated above, shows members of the Patriotic League of the Women's Institute of Aurora, Ont., busily engaged in Red Cross work. They have accomplished a great deal during the past year, the following being some of the results of their labors: 168 hospital night shirts; 112 pairs wristlets; 3,112 yards bandages; 285 pairs socks; 154 sheets; 110 pillow cases; 14,430 mouth wipes; 198 large dressings; 150 small dressings; 128 pints fruit and jam; $70 cash to Red Cross Society; 85 to Major Kilgour for sand bags. The total amount of money raised by this League since August 31, 1914 amounts to $1,406 25. This includes the proceeds from a very successful Field Day held September 18th, which were $412.37.

$40,000,000 Spent in Four Months By German Propagandists, is Charge

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 17.—The Providence Journal says:

"A vast fund of money amounting to between $30,000,000 and $40,000,000 has been spent in this country in the last four months for propaganda work against the Allies, under the immediate supervision of Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, and Dr. Heinrich Albert, Privy Councillor, who described himself to a Journal representative as the "fiscal agent" of his government.

"The Journal has a positive record of the receipt by Ambassador von Bernstorff and Dr. Albert of at least $10,000,000 in the time mentioned. A great deal of this money has come through the Guaranty Trust Company, of New York, and most of it has been immediately transferred to the Chase National Bank and other banks in which Dr. Albert and Ambassador von Bernstorff keep a joint account.

"The Journal charges that not one dollar of this money has been spent for legitimate purposes but that all of it is going for propaganda work of the most vicious description. One item alone, the maintenance of bureaus for dragging men out of munitions factories, amounts to many millions of dollars.

"The cost of sustenance of the consular service of Germany and the expenses of the Embassy reach the various officials through regular channels which are in no way connected with the fund referred to. It is believed that the entire cost of propaganda work conducted by Austrian consuls and consuls general is financed from the German fund.

"Accordonica" Fund.

"Dr. Albert was interviewed in his office at room 74 of the Hamburg-American Building, New York city, last Friday by a Journal representative, and was asked point blank to state whether the financial transactions in which he had been recently involved covered legitimate operations, the character of which he could explain in general to the public. Dr. Albert immediately called in a secretary as a witness to the conversation, and then replied:

"'I am fiscal agent of my government in this country, and I am handling certain sums of money.'

"'Will you tell us,' he was asked, 'if you and the German Ambassador have joint funds in the Chase National Bank and a number of other banks in this country?'

"'What is your purpose in asking me that question,' he replied.

"He was told that the only purpose was to have him state if he would so state, that whatever joint funds he and the Ambassador were carrying and however great the sum total of these funds was, they were being expended for lawful purposes.

"Dr. Albert refused to make any statement whatever in regard to this matter. He was asked if he would deny that he had received personally over $5,000,000 from his government in the last two months, and if he did not on September 5 receive, through the Guaranty Trust Company, the sum of $2,000,000 for 'Accordonica' work. At this question Dr. Albert was visibly thrown off his balance. The question was based on a wireless despatch received by the Guaranty Trust Company on September 5, through Sayville, purporting to come from the Litmus Company of Berlin—really the Berlin Foreign Office—and which read as follows:—

Got $3,500,000 in Week.

"Accordonica. Pay on application to Geheimrat Heinrich Albert, New York, two million dollars. Notify him. Let us know by wire when part of payment is done. Cable receipt of telegram.'

"'What do you mean by asking me a question like that?' Dr. Albert said finally.

"'We mean,' said the Journal representative, 'that "accordonica" is a code word used by both the German Ambassador and yourself in communicating with Berlin and that it designates the particular account for which the money is to be expended.'

"Dr. Albert said, 'I refuse to make any statement whatever to the Providence Journal or to anybody else. I will make no statement, no matter what you print.'

"It was immediately after the exposure of the contents of Dr. Albert's portfolio on August 15 that he began to receive these great sums of money. Up to that time most of the peremptory demands for large sums from the Foreign Office had gone from Count von Bernstorff, who within a period of a week, just before the breaking up of the Huerta plot, got more than $3,500,000. The government has in its possession evidence of these large transfers.

"On September 28 Dr. Dumba was also violently affected with a distressing financial shortage and sent the following wireless message to his Minister of Foreign Affairs in Vienna from Lenox, Mass.:—

Dr. Dumba's Plea for $611,246

"The translation of this message is as follows.—

"'I reiterate my telegram of the 15th. If I am not empowered by the 28th of the current month to receive the sum of $611,246 for the Hungarian postal administration I will be compelled to pay the whole amount. I beg you to acknowledge receipt of this telegram.'

"The words 'Hungarian postal administration' are, of course, a blind in this case, because under no circumstances could Dr. Dumba be addressing a communication to the Minister of Foreign Affairs with regard to such a matter. It is declared that the amount referred to was connected with a transaction through the Transatlantic Trust Company and that the reference to the Hungarian postal administration means the Transatlantic Trust.

"The Journal prints this morning facsimiles of communications from the Austrian Consul General in New York and the Austrian Consul General in Philadelphia to individual workers in munition factories who have written to them for an explanation of the advertisement appearing in a great number of foreign language newspapers and threatening such workers with dire penalties unless they withdrew at once from their employment.

"This advertisement, which is still being inserted and paid for by Consul General von Nuber, in spite of the fact that it is part of the propaganda for which Dr. Dumba was dismissed, reads as follows:—

"'The imperial and royal Austro-Hungarian Embassy, acting under orders from the home government, gives notice by the announcement to all Austrian and Hungarian citizens, including the men that belong to Bosnia and Herzigovinia, conformity with paragraph 327 of the Austrian military criminal law, that workmen who are employed in factories in this country which are making either arms or munitions for the enemies of your country are committing a crime against the military safety of your fatherland. This crime is punishable by from ten to twenty years imprisonment, and in especially aggravating circumstances with the penalty of death. Against those who violate this order the whole weight of the law will be brought in the event of their return to their own country.'

Fight on Croatian Society.

"The Journal has positive proof that the advertisement is still appearing in great numbers of Austro-Hungarian newspapers throughout the country and that it is being paid for directly by the Austro-Hungarian government.

"An example of the methods pursued in this country by Austrian consuls in the effort to compel closest adherence to Austria-Hungary among both naturalized and unnaturalized citizens in the United States, is shown by the following communication sent to the Austro-Hungarian Embassy in Washington by Baron von Hauser, Consul at Pittsburg, who is one of the men who yesterday vigorously denounced Dr. Goricar as 'a liar and a Benedict Arnold.' Baron von Hauser writes as follows:—

"'In re Southern Slav propaganda:—

"'To the Ambassador, Washington.

"'To stop once and forever the work carried on among the Croatians in the United States by the National Consulate Society this imperial and Royal Consulate has taken upon itself to prevent the re-election of the present supreme committee of that society.

"'The Nardoni list in New York and our Croatians paper in this city have been for a long time carrying on a keen campaign against Nardoni and his consorts. The National Croatian Society is a very prominent society in America and in the opinion of this consulate it is of very great importance that we succeed in overthrowing the present administration."

TORTURE OF ARMENIAN.

Hanged by Wrists, Finger Nails Pulled Off, and Maltreated.

BOSTON, Nov. 17.—Rev. James P. McNaughton, a missionary who was formerly in Turkey, addressed the Boston Laymen's Convention last night.

"I have recently received a letter from the mission field describing the treatment of an Armenian University professor," he said. "Because he would not make a confession of treason, he was hanged by his wrists for 24 hours; then his finger nails were torn out. Subsequently he was subjected to unspeakable barbarisms. He died without signing the confession."

Attempts to obtain confessions of treason were prompted by a wish to be able thus to justify atrocities as acts of military necessity.

HOUSEING OF FOWL

EARLY in October the pullets should have been housed in their winter quarters, but if this has not been done do not delay any longer; have all the houses ready and the layers into them as soon as possible now. Make repairs, put glass and cotton in the openings and have everything ready for the pullets to go right ahead. Arrange the house so that the pullets may be divided from the hens.

All surplus cockerels should be disposed of by this time, as well as pullets which are not likely to be fit for laying or breeding purposes, and, of course, all old hens which are not suited for breeding next spring.

Select the pullets very carefully; do not retain for winter laying any but the very best. Market all pullets which are lacking in vigor, are undersized or deformed in any way, and keep only those from which good production can be expected.

Do not move the pullets from house to house, or even from pen to pen, at this time of the year they are very sensitive and the least excitement will mean a loss of dollars by the decreased egg yield. Never allow them to be chased, and particularly do not allow the dog to amuse himself with them.

Adopt system in feeding: have a supply-bin in each pen and in this put a bag or two of mixed grain as required. The mixture may consist of almost any good grain raised on the farm. A very good combination is wheat two parts, corn one part, oats one part, barley or buckwheat one part; the corn may be cracked or given whole as desired. Feed this morning and night in a heavy litter, making the birds scratch for all the grain they get. In a dry-mash hopper put some dry bran or crushed oats, depending upon the price; leave this before the birds all the time. In another hopper put beef scrap alone, or 10 per cent. beef scrap mixed with bran. A supply of grit and oyster shell should be available to the birds; also plenty of water, though if milk can be obtained give them what they will take of it as well. Should there be plenty of table scraps and milk, the beef scrap could be left out, but give what will take its place to the pullets rather than to the old hens at this time of the year.

Feed regularly; not just when you happen to think about it; let some one person be responsible for the work.

If it has not already been done, now is the time to see about a special egg market. It is during the early winter months that consumers find it difficult to get new-laid eggs, so that those who have new-laid eggs have what others are willing to pay a good price for, if they can be shipped direct and with an absolute guarantee.

When whipping cream, add three or four (or more) drops of lemon juice and it will become thick.

COL. ROOSEVELT MAY JOIN THE CANADIAN FORCES

OTTAWA, Nov. 18.—It is reported here that there is a possibility that ex-President Theodore Roosevelt may put into practical effect his public and vigorous espousal of the cause of the allies by personally leading the way and himself volunteering for active service with the Canadian forces. While of course no official statement could for international reasons be made as to what post Colonel Roosevelt would be given were he to offer his services it is certain that he would be given a high command, possibly as an officer in command of a whole division.

Both in public and private Colonel Roosevelt has intimated his strong conviction that national honour and national safety demanded the active participation of the United States in the overthrow of the German attempt at world tyranny, and his personal desire to get into the fight himself.

It is stated that during his visit to Quebec on a hunting trip he declared that he would like to be fighting at the front in the same cause as the Canadians.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. Max Fleischman, the Russian boy violinist, arrived in the city today. He is staying at the Conservatory of Music.

WEDDING BELLS

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mrs William McIlmoyle, Wellington street, when her daughter, Miss Ethel Smith, was united in marriage to Mr. Hallie McMullen, son of Mr. W. J. McMullen. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. S. McMullen, uncle of the groom.

Miss Doris Edgar of Bobcaygeon, was the charming ring bearer, while the wedding march was played by Miss Zetta Bottum, of Bobcaygeon. The bride looked beautiful in an empire gown of duchess satin with Juliet cap, while her travelling suit was navy blue trimmed with ermine and black velvet hat also trimmed with ermine.

After the ceremony the guests partook of a buffet luncheon in the dining room, where the pretty, big wedding cake occupied the centre of a table tastefully decorated.

Among the visitors from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. W. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. W. Keller, and Miss Teresa Clements, of Midland; Lt. and Mrs. A. H. Bottum, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Edgar and Miss Zetta Bottum of Bobcaygeon, Mr. Bruce Bottum of Belleville, and Miss Ethel McIlmoyle of Peterboro.

The bride is one of Lindsay's most charming young ladies, being immensely popular with a wide circle of acquaintances who will join in wishing her and her choice in life a long life of connubial bliss.—Lindsay Post.

DOHERTY—SIROIS.

Mr. Fred Doherty of Cap Rouge, Que., son of Mr. John Doherty, Hastings road, joined the benedicts on the 30th ult., his partner being Miss Rose Sirois, of Eagle Lake, State of Maine. They will make their home in Quebec city. The groom is widely known in sporting circles, having gathered considerable fame as a hockeyist. His many friends here will join in extending congratulations.—Norwood Register.

THE RESULT.

A sunday school teacher asked a little fellow how many commandments there were. To her surprise the lad answered glibly enough, 'Ten, madam.' 'And, now, Sammy,' said the teacher, 'what would be the result if you should break one of them?' 'Then there'd be nine!' triumphantly answered the youngster.

Pigeon Creek Bridge Will Be Discussed

At the coming session of the County Council it is expected that delegations from Victoria County Council and Peterboro City Council will meet the Peterboro County representatives to discuss the Pigeon Creek bridge. This is a floating structure and requires to be replaced. It is one and one-eighth miles long, crossing Pigeon Creek and connecting the township of Ennismore in Peterboro with the township of Verulam in Victoria. A new bridge is estimated at $120,000.00. Formerly, it was a section of a mail route by which parts of Victoria were reached. Now, however the mail is carried around by Burketon on the C. P. R. Some maintain that the bridge is of real concern only to a few farmers in Verulam and Ennismore. At any rate this is one of the subjects to be debated at the coming session.

HUNTERS SHOOT $1600 FOX, BUT HE NIMBLY ESCAPES

HAZLETON, Pa., Nov. 18.—A black fox, supposed to be extinct in Pennsylvania and whose fur is worth from $1,000 to $1,600 was seen in Pierce county by Mr. and Mrs. William E. Munnaw of Hazelton, while running for pheasants.

They brought back 33 of the birds, but missed the black hide, although one of their party fired a shot that knocked the fox over, but it got to its feet again and escaped.

PUTTING IT UP TO FATHER.

After several unnecessary attempts to draw her husband into conversation at the restaurant the wife discovered the cause of his abstraction to be a beautiful girl dressed in black and seated at a near-by table.

"A attractive widow," observed the wife coldly.

"Yes, indeed, a very attractive widow," agreed the wife enthusiastically.

"Yes," sighed the wife. "I wish I were one."—Ladies Home Journal.

A countrywoman presented herself at the out-patient department of the infirmary of a country town, and as usual, saw the house surgeon. He naturally asked:

"Well, my good woman, what is the matter with you?"

"That is what I've come to find out," was the reply.

"Then, what are you complaining of?"

"Oh, I hain't be one to complain, mister."

"Well, why do you come here?"

'HUMAN TANK' LOSES HAMMERSTEIN SUIT

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Gustav Francis Delair, known on the stage as the "Human Tank" swallows goldfish and frogs alive.

He appeared yesterday in a suit against William Hammerstein's estate for $2,040 on a contract to employ him.

The defence was that the Society for prevention of Cruelty to Animals stopped the "Human Tank" from swallowing frogs and fish. Justice Greenbaum ordered a verdict for the defendant.

Gortiza is Burning In Many Places To-day Inhabitants Are Killed

Italians Have Thrown 3,000 Shells Into the Town---Renewed Italian Assault All Along the Isonzo Line.

VIENNA, via Berlin, Nov. 20. — Gortiza is burning in many places to-day. The Italians have thrown 3,000 shells into the town. Many of the inhabitants were killed. The property damage is enormous.

The bridge head in particular has been under an incessant bombardment for many days. Guns of every calibre have been directed against it. The increased intensity of the Gortiza attack has been an incident to a renewed Italian assault all along the Isonzo line.

Sensational Disclosures Promised

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Sensational disclosures were promised by Federal officials to-day when the trial of indicted Hamburg-American line officials begins on Monday. The Government's evidence, it is said, probably will bring into the case the name not only of Captain Boy-Ed, military attache of the German Embassy, but other Teutonic representatives here whose names have not been mentioned previously in alleged neutrality violations. The counsel for the Hamburg-American officials has formally conceded Captain Boy-Ed's participation in plans to furnish supplies to German commerce raiders from New York, District Attorney Marshall said, and Germany sent out half a million dollars to cover the expenses.

WOMAN TOOK DRUG IN COURT

Leading Female Journalist in England Makes Dramatic Attempt to End Her Life.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Defeated in a lawsuit, Annesley Kenealy, the leading woman journalist in England, took poison in the presence of judge and jury.

As the court announced that the case had been non-suited, Miss Kenealy arose dramatically from her seat, and standing before the police, drank the contents of a small bottle before any court attache could reach her.

As she threw aside the empty vial she exclaimed to the court: "I have taken enough poison to kill five people. My lord, you have ruined my life." Just before she became unconscious she again shrieked at Justice Coleridge: "My lord, I told you that you were trying a woman for her life."

Order was restored in court, and doctors who had been summoned were able to reach the side of the suffering woman, and administered antidotes. They said she would have died within a few moments if aid had not promptly reached her. They had her removed in a stretcher to the Charing Cross hospital, where it was stated that her condition was serious.

Was Suing Booksellers.

Miss Kenealy had brought action against Smith & Sons, booksellers, for damages on the ground that the firm had made false, malicious statements defamatory of "The Waterfly" Wooing," a book which she had written. After taking testimony for three days, Justice Coleridge entered judgments for the defendants without submitting the case to the jury.

Miss Kenealy is a sister of the late Alexander Kenealy, editor of the Daily Mirror, and a daughter of Edward Vaughan Kenealy, who spent his fortune and many years of his life in the defence of Arthur Orton, the notorious Tichborn claimant. In January, 1910, she drank poison in the Daily Mail office after an unsuccessful suit against the owner of that paper, Lord Northcliffe, for dismissal from the staff.

Seeking Publicity.

It was strongly hinted then that she had no real intention of committing suicide, but took the poison in an effort to win public notice and favour.

Alexander Kenealy, her brother, was formerly on the staff of the New York Herald, and was correspondent for that paper on Peary's first Arctic expedition. He was a war correspondent with the American fleet in the Spanish war.

How to Wave Hair to Appear Naturally Curly

You won't need to resort to the parching, scorching curling iron if you will adopt the simple plan I will mention. Isn't that good news?

At night merely apply a little liquid silmerine with a clean tooth brush, drawing this through the hair from root to tip. This will impart a delightful wavy appearance and a bright lustre suggestive of "hidden sunshine." It will prove beneficial to the hair, instead of making it brittle and dead looking, as the hot iron does. In the morning instead of your tresses being mean and contrary, you will find them quite easy to do up in any form, and there will be no unpleasant odor, grease or stickiness about the hair. I would suggest that you ask your druggist for the liquid silmerine—four or five ounces—which will require no mixing and you can pour a little into a saucer when required. Emily Coulson in Hygienic Review.

THE RISE OF THE KRUPPS

Started in a Little Blacksmith Shop in Essen in 1812

From a little blacksmith's shop founded a, Essen in 1812, the mighty firm of Krupps, the makers of German guns, has grown into the largest armament concern in the world. Friedrich Krupp originated the smithy, and 16 years struggled against poverty. He died a poor man and on his deathbed confided the secrets he had discovered to his son, Alfred. Alfred Krupp gained recognition, but after obtaining fame through exhibiting a 43-ton cast ingot of steel a, the Crystal Palace Exhibition in 1851 he never looked back. When he died in 1887 60,000 people followed him to the grave. To-day Krupps' works covers 1,000 acres. Even before the war rush the firm employe 1 60,000 men at the main works at Essen and thousands of others o, their collieries, shipbuilding yards, and private testing grounds. It is estimated that more than 500,000 people depend on Krupps for their livelihood.

Work at Krupps' is conducted in great secrecy. Each worker is forbidden to enter any office or workshop not connected with his own department. He has a passport for his special job and must take no interest in any other. Hundreds of watchmen guard the secrets of the Krupps, works day and night, and the grounds are a mass of electric traps which immediately signal the approach of an intruder.

Has been Canada's favorite yeast for more than forty years.

British Take a Turkish Trench Line in a Sharp Fight at Dardanelles

Advance on Both Sides of "Valley of Death" is Made With the Support of War Ships--House of Lords Hears Question of Withdrawing Troops.

LONDON, Nov. 20—After a period of comparative inactivity lasting since August, the British force at Gallipoli resumed the offensive on Monday, and after a spirited action took 250 yards of Turkish trenches along the Krithia Nullah, or "the Valley of Death." Two war-ships with their big guns aided in the operations.

The Krithia Nullah is near the tip of the peninsula. Geographically it is the Sazhir dere. Soon after the landing of the contingent in April it became the scene of particularly vicious fighting and soon was named by the men "the Valley of Death." It opens to the sea at what is called Gully Beach. Boomerang Fort, about a mile up the valley from the beach, has taken a place in British history for the desperate struggles waged around it, and it was just beyond this extemporized fort that Monday's advance was made. On this action a report issued by the War Office said:

"In the Dardanelles the Fifty-Second division carried out a very successful attack on the Turkish trenches on the 15th instant, for which careful preparations had been in progress for a considerable time.

"Three mines were exploded successfully under the enemy's trenches in the neighborhood of the Krithia Nullah at 3 p.m., and the infantry, pushing forward immediately after, captured about 150 yards of trenches on the east of the Nullah and 100 yards on its west. The captured trenches were at once consolidated and bombing parties pushed on up to the communication trenches and erected barricades.

"Simultaneously with the assault, our artillery opened on the enemy's reserve support trenches, two 14-inch monitors and H. M. S. Edgar (cruiser) co-operating, and maintained their fire until the position was reported consolidated at 5.30 p.m.

The enemy's batteries replied heavily but very erratically, and did little damage. The Turks in the neighbouring trenches, who fired heavily, were caught by machine gun and rifle fire and bombs, and suffered considerably, their fire becoming very weak.

"No attempt at a counter attack was made until the night of November 16-17, when it was easily repulsed. Our casualties were under fifty killed and wounded. More than seventy dead were seen in the captured position, and a wounded prisoner reports that more than thirty were buried by the explosion of one mine.

"The units employed were portions of the Fourth and Seventh Royal Scots, the Seventh and Eighth Scottish Rifles and the Ayrshire Yeomanry, all of the 156th Brigade."

Just before news of the engagement was made public Lord Ribblesdale said in the House of Lords, in addressing a question to Lord Lansdowne, that he understood Lieutenant General Sir Charles C. Monro, commander of the British expedition at the Dardanelles, had reported in favour of the withdrawal of the British army at the Dardanelles.

Lord Lansdowne announced that the government asked Lord Kitchener to go to the Eastern Mediterranean because in its opinion the report of Sir Charles Monro and the evidence accompanying it did not seem sufficient to enable the government to come to a decision upon the great questions of policy involved. This announcement was made in response to Lord Ribblesdale's question whether General Monro favoured the withdrawal of the army.

2,000,000 ENGLISH WOMEN ARE READY TO MAKE SHELLS

BRINGING PRESSURE TO BEAR ON LLOYD-GEORGE TO GIVE THEM A TRIAL.

LONDON, Oct. 2. (By Mail)—If Lloyd George will permit the women of England to win the war for the allies by solving the question of munitions, they'll do it, they say. Two million of them say it. Under the increasing pressure they are bringing to bear on the minister of munitions, he is showing a disposition to give them a try.

They have pointed out to Lloyd George that England has at least 2,000,000 women who can devote their entire time to shell making. Every woman, they insist, can make at least one shell a day. That means 2,000,000 shells a day, a number far beyond Lloyd George's most extravagant estimate of England's needs. The women would like to undertake the job for all the allies.

Recently a military expert established that the French consumption of shells in July was 100,000 a day. It is certain that it is not now over 1,000,000 a day. This would leave a daily surplus of another million per day to pass around to the other allies. The women say that after Lloyd George their next greatest obstacle has been the engineer employers at the munition factories, who have used them for fuse making and light electrical work, but decline to give them charge of the heavy machine tools.

Just to show them how wrong they were, the women at least succeeded in arranging for a full experiment in several of the factories testifying both to their ability and capacity for any branch of shell making.

Splendid Workers.

They are declared to have done their work with an exactitude, thoroughness and conscientiousness that could not be excelled. They put into it brain as well as muscle. In one factory where women were employed exclusively, the output showed a quality superior to that for which it was designed.

The women are admitted to have become skilled in far shorter time than is required by men. A week's tuition is quite sufficient to initiate a woman into every process of complete shell making, equipping her to begin with a plain bar of steel and put it through all the successive stakes of turning, boring, screwing and fitting the band and the plug. She showed equal ability in the factories making munitions machines.

How Fat Folks May Become Thin

By Elizabeth Thomas

Perhaps you are suddenly becoming stout, or it may be that you have been putting on weight for years. In either case the cause is the same lack of oxygen-carrying power of the blood. This trouble occurs in adults of both sexes and all ages, but it may be overcome very easily and without any of the privations that most people imagine necessary to reduce their weight.

Simply go to your druggist and get some oil of orilene capsules. Take one after each meal and before going to bed. Weigh yourself so as to know just how fast you are losing weight. Wonderful results have been accomplished by this inexpensive recipe, but be sure to get the genuine oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any large druggist can supply you, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can.

EMERGENCY BAKED BEANS

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat Less Meat If You Feel Backachy or Have Bladder Trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels, removing all the acids, waste and poison else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder disorders.

Gordon Craig

Copyright, 1912, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

"You are extremely free spoken for a fellow in your condition. You will at least confess that I am master on board this ship, that my word here is law and you are in my power."

"Yes."

"Then why expose yourself and that young woman to unnecessary danger? To be frank, Craig, I sent for you just now in a friendly spirit. You can be decidedly useful to me, and I can afford to pay well for services rendered. Now, wait. Don't break in until I am through. I know who you are and how you originally became involved in this affair. What did Neale and that other fellow, Weil, offer you?"

"Never mind the sum," I said soberly. "I am not altogether mercenary although I need money. I'll say this, however, and you can take it for what it may be worth. I originally came into this game believing I was doing a kindness to a helpless man who was being defrauded of his rights. There is no necessity of my going into details, but Neale told me an apparently straight story and convinced me my part was a mere form. Later I learned different and promptly quit. I haven't sent in a line of report to my employers."

"What convinced you of the fraud?"

"A conversation with Mrs Henley."

"You claim still to be Henley?" I asked, stifling my indignation.

"Not only claim, but am. My identity is already firmly established in court. Lawyers have the final papers ready to file."

"Is the woman on board?" I questioned. He hesitated just an instant.

"Yes."

"Will you have her brought here?"

He walked across the cabin twice, turning the proposition over in his mind. Apparently concluding that the ordeal might as well be over with first as last, he opened the door and gave an order to Peters. Then he returned to his seat at the desk.

We both arose to our feet as she entered, glancing about her curiously at the rather strange surroundings, then stopping irresolutely, apparently recognizing neither of us. Suddenly the light of recognition leaped into her eyes and she took a quick step forward.

"Mr. Craig—you here? Why, I can hardly understand. Were you made prisoner also?"

"I suppose that to be my status, although I hardly know," I answered, yet unable to refrain from accepting the extended hand. "I presume you know this person?"

She swept my face with a swift, questioning glance and then looked beyond me at the man standing beside the desk.

"No, I do not," slowly. "I have no remembrance of ever seeing him before."

"Is that not rather strange," I asked, steeling myself to the task, "after asserting that he was your husband? He is the owner of this vessel—Philip Henley."

"You are not Philip Henley," she said firmly. "He is my husband."

"I expected heroics. It was hardly to be supposed that you would confess your fraud at once and—before your lover."

She shrank back, her hands still extended.

"My—my lover"—

"Now stop!" I broke in, every nerve tingling as I stepped between them. "Another insinuation like that and you will learn what I can do. You may be captain of this boat, but you are alone with us now, and I can kill you before you could utter a cry. I will if you dare insult her again."

He reeled back against the desk, although I do not think I touched him, and his hand sought an open drawer. I knew him instantly for a coward and gripped his wrist, hurling him from me half across the room. He gasped a bit, rubbing his bruised wrist, his eyes shifting to the closed door as though contemplating an alarm.

"There is no use going off at half cock, Craig!" he snarled. "I didn't mean any insult. And I'll get you for that some time. You'll learn yet what the Sea Gull is."

"No doubt," I coincided, tired of his threats and awakened to the fact that this quarrel was not likely to help our chances. "But for a few minutes it will be worth your while to listen to me. I am not defending this woman from anything but unnecessary insults. If she has deceived me I want to find it out. If you are Philip Henley, as you claim to be, you must have evidence to prove it. Convince me that her assertions are false and you will not find me unreasonable."

"Gordon Craig, do you mean"—

I paused to her, steeling myself to look into her appealing eyes.

"I have been honest with you from the beginning," I interrupted abruptly. "Now, if I discover that your statements are false, the inducements are all the other way. I am a soldier of fortune."

THE JOY OF BEING ALIVE AND WELL

Restored To Health By "Fruit-a-tives" The Famous Fruit Medicine

MME. ROCHON

Rochon, P.Q. March 2nd, 1915.

"I have received the most wonderful benefit from taking 'Fruit-a-tives'. I suffered for years from Rheumatism and change of life, and I took every remedy obtainable, without any good results. I heard of 'Fruit-a-tives' and gave it a trial and it was the only medicine that really did me good. Now I am entirely well; the Rheumatism has disappeared and the terrible pains in my body are all gone. I am exceedingly grateful to 'Fruit-a-tives' for such relief, and I hope that others who suffer from such distressing diseases will try 'Fruit-a-tives' and get well".

MADAME ISAIE ROCHON.

The marvellous work that 'Fruit-a-tives' is doing, in overcoming disease and healing the sick, is winning the admiration of thousands and thousands.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Henley laughed, the sound grating harshly on my nerves, yet I made no movement of protest as he stepped silently back to his desk. I was no longer afraid of the fellow, even although he might have a weapon concealed in one of the drawers, for I knew I had drawn his fangs. This open avowal on my part was sufficient to convince one of his stripe that I was concerned only with my own interests. His words confirmed my judgment.

"Well said, my man. Now we begin to understand each other. Of course I have the proofs. I would be a fool to sit in such a game without a winning hand. Sit down, both of you, while we talk this over. There is no reason why the three of us should not be friends, provided you are sensible."

"But—but I am his wife," she panted to me indignantly. "Philip Henley's wife. I—I showed you our certificate."

"A fake, a forgery," asserted the other roughly, before I could find voice. "You had it framed up all right, if you had never run across me. Show me the paper."

"I cannot, for it is not here. I placed it in my valise back at that house." She stepped forward with hands held out toward me. "But you know—Gordon Craig, you know. I could not have forged that. I had not time; no information which would have led to such an act. You tell him so."

"I hardly think he will, madam," returned the captain shortly, evidently feeling it better not to let me speak. "And there is no use going on with this any further. Answer me a question or two, that is all. When did you first tell Craig you were Philip Henley's wife?"

"It was after we came here, when I was frightened, and felt that I must confess the truth. I—I had begun to trust him."

"Oh, indeed, and you failed to tell him at first because you did not trust him."

"Partially that—yes. Although I do not think the name Henley was even mentioned during our first interview. I am sure I did not realize it was my husband's father who was dead until later."

"Exactly; you picked up a strange man on the street, agreed to go off on a criminal mission with him, and now expect us to believe you perfectly innocent of any wrong intent."

"That will be enough," I interrupted, unable to remain quiet any longer. "The motives of the woman and how we chanced to meet are no concern of yours. If you are Philip Henley, prove it, and let it go at that. I have told you plainly enough where I stand."

"Just as you say, Craig," affecting an easy good nature. "That is perfectly agreeable to me. However, as it makes no difference what the late Mrs. Henley thinks, we will dismiss her from the case and settle the affair quietly between ourselves. I have got a proposition which will interest you." He touched a button, and I heard the sharp tingle of a bell outside. Almost instantly the door in the cabin opened. "That you, Peters? Conduct the woman back to her stateroom, lock the door and bring me the key."

He bent forward, searching for something in a pigeonhole to his right, and I caught her eyes, touching my lips with my fingers to signal silence, while an inclination of the head told her to go without resistance. The swift change of expression on her face proved her instant comprehension, as, without uttering a word of protest, she turned and disappeared. Peters returned with the key. Henley dropped it into his pocket.

"That will be all," he said. "You can go."

As the door closed again behind Peters, the fellow rose to his feet and held out his hand. "You are the kind I like, Craig," he said cordially. "At first I had my doubts about you and, no doubt, have been harsh. Did you see her face when you first sided in with me? She wilted completely. Well, that will make the rest easy. Sit down again, and I will explain what I want you for. The legal papers which absolutely establish my identity as Philip Henley are in the hands of lawyers who represent me at Carrollton. The case will not come up for adjudication for several weeks yet," speaking slowly and with careful choice of words, "but my contention as heir to the property is thoroughly established. It had to be, for, as you know, the judge's son had been away from this neighborhood for years, practically ever since boyhood. He was almost unknown to the local inhabitants, even to the servants. He was even reported as being dead. This state of affairs made identification the most important thing to be considered. Consequently all documents bearing directly on that point are at present out of my reach. You understand?"

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it formed stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Your taste for good tea will prove to you
Red Rose Tea "is good tea"

When the ball players are down south in the spring the old boys do not take any chances with their pitching arms, letting the youngsters prove their energies instead. One day at Little Rock, when the Detroit team was playing an exhibition game, old Red Donahue, who in his day was the sharpest tongued man in baseball, was tossing them over and letting the Little Rock batters hit at will to the great delight of the spectators.

"I'm not half as easy as you are," retorted Red, "you paid 50 cents to see me do it."—The American Boy.

Customer—Gee, this is a rotten cigar! Shopkeeper—Well, don't complain. You have only got one of them. I've got ten thousand of the darn things.—Life.

Theodore Watt, says Charles Rowley in his book, 'Fifty Years of Work Without Wages,' tells a good story against himself. A nature enthusiast, he was climbing Snowden and overtook an old gypsy woman. He began to dilate upon the sublimity of the scenery in somewhat gushing phrases. The woman paid no attention to him. Provoked by her irresponsiveness, he said, "You don't seem to care for this magnificent scenery?" She took the pipe from her mouth and delivered this settler: "I enjoys it. I don't jabber!"

PLAIN.

"Are you a plain cook?"

"I suppose I could be, ma'am."

An English town council, after a protracted sitting, was desirous of adjourning for lunch. The proposition, as opposed by the mayor, who thought that if his fellow councillors felt the stimulus of hunger the business would be much facilitated. At last a rather illiterate member got up and exclaimed:

"I ham astonished, I ham surprised, I ham amazed, Mr Mayor, that you will not let us go to lunch."

"And I am surprised," replied the mayor, "that a gentleman who has got so much 'ham in his mouth should want any lunch at all!"

A CALL DOWN.

Mr. Bragg—I object to being called a "gay Lothario." Of course I am not engaged to any particular girl, but—

Miss Snappe—Of course you are not. If she were particular, you would not be.

A school teacher who had been telling a class of small pupils the story of the discovery of America by Columbus, ended it with:

A little boy, his eyes wide open with wonder, said, after a moment's thought: "Oh, my, what a memory you've got!"

Read it in the Faces of the People You Meet

The Irritability, the Worry, the Gloom, the Despair of Nerve and Brain Troubles. The Blood is Watery, the Nerves Are Starved.

This is the age of nervous troubles, of brain fag, of heart failure, of paralysis and bodily weakness. You can read it in the faces of the people you meet.

The business man, the factory hand, the professional man, the woman in the home, all find their nervous systems giving way before the terrible strain of modern life and keen competition. Nervous force is consumed at a terrible rate, and the blood which must make good this loss becomes thin and watery, lacking in quality as well as quantity.

The whole secret of preserving health and curing disease in all such cases is to supply an abundance of rich, red blood. Stimulants may drive the heart at a more rapid pace for a time, but the breakdown will come with greater force.

The blood demands nourishment, the nerves cry for sustenance. They call for just such help as is supplied by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the great blood builder and nerve restorative.

In many, many thousands of cases of this kind Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has proven exactly what was needed. In using it you are not experimenting, but are supplying to the system the very ingredients from which Nature reconstructs the wasted nervous system. For this reason its cures are both thorough and lasting.

HISTORIAN LAUDS HUNS IDEA OF COMPULSION

War Glorified by Treitschke, the Slav, Who Became Prussia's Greatest Teacher

The works of Treitschke are just now being translated into English. Asked why his histories did not have that popularity abroad which those of Mommsen and Ranke enjoyed, he replied, "The foreign critics do not like them. That is natural. I write only for Germans."

There is a saying that proselytes often burn with a greater zeal than is found in the hearts of those born to the faith. Heinrich von Treitschke was not a German, but a Czech. His ancestors came from Bohemia. They found their way into Saxony, distinguished themselves in peace and war, became privy councillors and army officers, and earned their title of "von" and many honors.

Heinrich von Treitschke was the son of a Saxon general. Had he not been nearly deaf he would have been a soldier, and it was his physical infirmity which turned him to the field of politics, his inclination to deeds of arms which made him the worshipper at the altar of Prussia. He studied at the Universities of Bonn, Leipsic, Heidelberg and Tubingen, and as a teacher of history and politics joined the Faculty of the University of Freiburg. The years passed, and the influence of Treitschke, publicist, politician, and parliamentarian, grew apace. The aristocracy of Imperial Germany flocked to his lectures in Berlin, and all classes hailed him as the seer of a united, aggressive Fatherland.

Britain the Enemy

The friend of Bismarck, he was the enemy of Britain. He was a charter member of the Gott strafe England Bund; a bard of prose who sang a Hymn of Hate. To him was ascribed much of that resentment against the British which flamed forth in the Boer War. In the pages of his first book there are flashes of scorn for England which in the succeeding volumes burst into flame. That colossal clash between Great Britain and Germany was bound to come, and its coming is foretold in every line of his story of the Fatherland.

The first volume deals with the rise of two great forces fostered by Prussia, compulsory education and compulsory military service. It places on a pedestal Frederick the Great, exalts Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, founders of militarism, and sings the glories of Prussia and her manifest destiny as the true leader of the Fatherland. We hear much in these days of the place of Germany in the sun. To Treitschke, Prussia was a Joshua who could make the sun stand still, if the cause of Germany could be thereby advanced.

His Narrow Bloody Ideal

The student of history may find the spirit of Treitschke narrow and intolerant, and he may also realize that such an opinion would have been received by the great advocate of Germany with indifference. He considered that he had only half performed his duty when he had set forth events in order, for he thought, too, that he had been called upon to feel himself in his work and to create in the hearts of his readers joy in that Fatherland of which, after all, he was only a foster child. His ideal was that of a country ever ready to wage war for its own advantage. What sentence more filled with the spirit of the Germany which he loved could there be than the one which ends the first volume:

Thus while in Vienna the great Peace Congress assembled, there rose in Prussia a new glory of German history; a people in arms.

It is of Prussia and its influence that Treitschke, the Slav, writes to the end of the chapter. His is the mission to hold before the eyes of all the world that ancient motto of the dynasty and the people: "It is not necessary that I should live, but that I should do my duty to my country and fight for the Fatherland."

HORSES IN BATTLE

Very Kindly Treated But Suffer Many Casualties—Still Useful

As to the treatment received by British military horses from their riders, I should say, writes Mr. Fox Russell in "The Royal Magazine," that it is remarkably good. Practically all British cavalry officers are sportsmen, and so are the Tommies at heart, the latter lacking only opportunities; a true sportsman would never be cruel to his horse. As to giving opportunities for sport, I think the Kaiser's army officers would have a fit if they know that the 10th Hussars officers actually provided ponies for their non-coms. and men to play polo on in India.

In spite of the motor, whose usefulness in haulage of big guns to the front is undented and undeniable, there are several sorts of ground where the functions of the traction engine end, and those of the equine gun team begin. Generally speaking, horses have the honor of galloping their gun on to the field of action and standing the hellish racket of the bursting shells, and the percentage of killed among the gun teams is always a very high one.

The powerful beasts, excited by their surroundings, maddened by the rush they have just taken part in, sweating, and covered with foam, often get out of hand, and, rearing and plunging, threaten to break away from their harness. To contend with a pair of these half-frightened, half-infuriated animals is all one man's work, and the authorities do well to pick out powerfully-built men for the R.A. drivers. Should one of the team be hit with a piece of shrapnel, or even should a shell burst in close proximity to the pulling, straining horses the drivers' energies receive an even greater call upon them.

AGED GRANDMOTHER

So Weak She Could Hardly Stand —Made Strong by Vinol.

Right here in Peterboro we have seen such excellent results from Vinol that it is a pleasure to know it is doing so much good for old people in other parts of the country.

Woodbridge, N. J.—"My Grandma was recovering from the grippe and was so weak she could hardly stand, and as she keeps house for my father and myself, she could not get around at all. She had taken cod liver oil and many other medicines, but nothing seemed to do her any good. At last we heard of Vinol and tried it, and Grandma commenced to feel better right away, and got strong very soon, so she gets around as well as ever. We all praise Vinol for it is a splendid medicine." Myrtle H. Bunn.

The reason Vinol is so successful in restoring strength to the aged is because of the rare combination of tonic iron, the curative medicinal extractives of fresh cods' livers, beef peptone and mild native wine. It supplies iron to the blood, quickens the appetite, aids digestion, promotes proper assimilation of food, and enriches the blood, and brings back the strength of renewed health. McDermit & Jury and E. Sentenced to Five Years

ROCHESTER, Nov. 19.—A straight sentence of five years in Auburn prison was imposed by County Judge J. B. M. Stephens on Harry Smolen, alias John Graham, 27 years old, of New York, a yeggman, who was caught in the act of robbing the safe of the United States Cigar Stores' South Avenue branch in January 1914. Smolen was taken to Auburn prison on the first afternoon train by Deputies Fosmire and Martin.

Two pleas were made by former Senator George L. Meade in behalf of Smolen, one before sentence and one after, and these were preceded by pleas in chambers by two prominent and wealthy New York men. Mrs. Smolen, who was the pathetic figure in the little drama, also made an earnest petition for her husband.

The law provides that where a man is convicted of a second offence, the punishment shall be at minimum not less than the maximum of the original crime. Smolen once served a term in Elmira Reformatory. Then he went into the "yegg" business and eked out a living as a safe blower. While at work on the cigar store safe, with his pal, Wm. Morrison, Smolen was captured by Patrolman Pribus. Both were taken to the jail.

Alterations were being made at the jail at the time and Smolen, seeing a chance to escape through an open door, climbed a wire trellis and got away. He was gone until a few weeks ago. Morrison was convicted and is serving a term of 4 1-2 years in Auburn prison.

Mr. Meade pleaded that Smolen went directly to New York, where his wife was in confinement, and that he remained with her. "He became a chauffeur for a Montecello man," said Mr. Meade, "and afterward was made manager of a five and ten-cent store in Brooklyn. Until he surrendered recently he was a clerk in a New York hotel. He has lived a straight life, has cared for his family and has shown pronounced desires to lead an honest life. Two well-known men in sociological work in New York, and the officers of the United Cigar Stores Company are interested in him. The latter has offered to employ him, although once he tried to rob them. If ever a man wanted to be right and needed a real chance the man is Smolen. Clemency to him will not be wasted."

Judge Stephens remarked that the law offers no alternative in the pronouncement of a penalty, but that it does not prescribe against the suspension of sentence. That is discretionary. "If the suspension of sentence would be properly interpreted by everyone, everywhere, it might be possible to grant the request," said the Court, "but it might have a bad influence on others who would come to this county expecting clemency upon pleas of guilty and assertions of reform."

Smolen's wife sat with him during the incident in court. She had a long talk with him prior to that. He broke down and cried when mention was made of his two children at home. His wife tried to brace him up and bore the ordeal better than he did. It is an odd commentary that although a reward of $500 was offered for the arrest of Smolen, and that he was posted all over the country, he worked openly in New York city and was not detected or suspected.

Had Palpitation OF THE HEART

ALSO WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

When the heart begins to palpitate it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells, and if you should happen to wake up in the night with your heart palpitating, and that "all gone" sinking sensation, you feel as if you were surely going to die.

When you feel this way, you may be sure that both your heart and nerves are out of order, and what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will build up and strengthen both the heart and nerve system.

For this purpose nothing can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble, ever since childhood, and finds great relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

COLE YOUNGER TELLS FACTS OF FAMOUS RAIDS

Gives True story of Northfield Bank Robbery for the First Time

PONCA CITY, Okla., Nov. 18.—"Dad" Halliday, a teaming contractor, one of the few oil field men of the early days left, has just returned from Lees Summit, Mo., where he visited his old-time friend, Cole Younger, the last remaining member of the famous gang of robbers who were led by the James boys.

After serving twenty-five years in the Minnesota State prison Younger went to Missouri twelve years ago, and over two years ago, on the anniversary of the Lawrence raid, joined the Christian Church. Bent in years and facing a death from which there would be no escape by a Winchester fight, as in the old days, he told Halliday he did not believe he could have lived his life differently even if he had so chosen.

According to "Dad" Halliday, Younger said of himself:

"There was nothing in my life so eventful as my part in the raid on Lawrence during the Civil War. There is nothing that ever happened that is so misprinted in literature and in history.

"My father was opposed to the war and had friends on both sides, but was shot down in cold blood and robbed by a gang of freebooters as he was driving home from Kansas City. That day changed our whole life. It filled my heart with a lust for vengeance.

Three Hundred in Party.

"I was nineteen the day we started from Blackwater, Mo., about 300 strong—the Quantrell band, I mean. It was August 20, 1863. I was a lieutenant. When we reached a hill in sight of Lawrence we learned from an old bog feeder that there were 300 regular federal troops in Lawrence and 300 militiamen.

"'They outnumber us two to one,' said Quantrell, 'but we can whip them.'

"And sure enough, soon we came upon them. There were no guards and we tore open the flaps of their tents and killed them as fast as our guns would work. We lost only four dead and three wounded.

"We rode through the town and then rode away. Later we fought for twenty-four hours with pursuers who had organized. They followed us until we were among friends in Missouri.

"That is the truth of the famous raid on Lawrence, often called the bloodiest episode of the border warfare between the Missouri Southerners and the Northerners from Kansas. It started my career as an outlaw.

"The remaining years of the war were busy ones for me and my three brothers. Mobs several times were formed to lynch us, but each time our good marksmanship drove away the would-be lynchers.

Joined James Gang.

"In the early 70s the escapades of the James boys in robbing banks attracted nation-wide attention, and we got credit for being in many of these, when really we were hundreds of miles away. They kept accusing us until they drove us to it.

"We became civil outlaws when four Chicago detectives attempted to arrest us and my brothers, Jim, John and Bob. We heard the detectives were coming, and we rode out to meet them. It took only a little shooting to make them turn their horses the other way, and they rode back to Chicago as fast as they could.

"The hunt for the Younger boys went on, and to elude the hunters I went to Florida and lived under an assumed name. While staying at Jacksonville I quelled a negro riot and some of my friends in Missouri tried to get the Legislature to pass an amnesty bill, so that I could come back and not have to face arrest for escapades during the war, but that failed.

"One day while sitting in a hotel I overheard a conversation that General Ben Butler, of the Union army, had taken back from the South $300,000 in cash and had it in a bank in Northfield, Minn. Indignation arose in my rebel heart. I believed it was lost.

"I sought out Frank and Jesse James and plans for the robbery were laid. There were eight in the party.

Whiskey Caused Failure.

"A bottle of whiskey kept the robbery from being a success. I didn't touch it myself, but Bob did. When they walked into the Northfield Bank they were drunk. They disobeyed instruction not to shoot to kill, and they took the life of the cashier of the bank. They forgot to close the door and were seen from the street. There was a carnival in town that day and the streets were crowded.

"Five of us tried to keep off that crowd while the other three did the robbing, but we were hard pressed. Some one saw what was going on in the bank and shouted that it was being robbed. I called to the boys in the bank to come out, but they were slow and the whole town was shooting at us before we got started.

"All of us were hit as we rode away, but by jumping from the wounded horses and riding double we managed to get out of town. For two weeks we eluded them, but at last they surrounded some of us in a swamp, and I saw that the jig was up for us. The James boys had separated from us and made their escape successfully.

"We decided that we could not surrender, but that it would be almost sure death to do what was left to do. We could wait, however, until the pursuers were right on top of us, then break through and try to shoot our way to safety. Not one of the boys was willing to surrender, so we tried the plan.

"The pursuers shot all of us, though, before we could get through. I had eleven wounds and the others were nearly as bad.

"No three men who ever went into the Minnesota Penitentiary were so closely watched as we three during the first year of our terms. Brother Bob just wilted away and died."

SHE GAINED 36 POUNDS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont. writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was in fact, a semi-invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up but by using 10 boxes of Dr Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 36 pounds in weight."

Easily Solved.

Ernest was very big and very black, and when it came to sleeping and eating fully justified his name. Ernest did not fancy steady work, but he was apt to be available when spring came for odd jobs at a dollar a day and his dinner.

One spring he came in with a sheepish grin.

"Miss Sally, I been hearin' in de lodge meetin' 'bout dese hard times, and I 'low I better raise my sal'ry to a dollar an' a quarter a day."

"You're not worth that, Ernest, and you know it. Besides I can't afford to pay more."

Ernest scratched his head: this was a matter for more thought than he had anticipated.

"I tuggered it when dey wuz talkin' about dem hard times dat I couldn't 'ford to work for nuthin'. But"—his black face gleamed with a sudden thought—"I won't eat so much."

Cancer: In my last article I told you something about cancer. From the many inquiries regarding a form of treatment that can safely be used it is evident that there are a vast number of people who are afflicted and know it, and a still larger number who suspect that they are afflicted and are afraid to go to their doctor for fear he will confirm their suspicions and order a surgical operation. For this latter class, it is difficult to find words sufficiently strong with which to condemn them.

If you have any kind of a diseased condition, by all means go to your family physician and find out just as much in regard to its nature and extent as it is possible for him to discover, and then insist that he tell you frankly and fully all about it. Only the silly ostrich thinks it is safe when it hides its head in the sand.

I am fully convinced regarding the power of the mind in the treatment of disease and know of its practical value in effecting many cures, but as I have told you in a previous article, fear itself can and does cause disease, and the thing which you fear the doctor may tell you is cancer, may not be such, but you are establishing a mental cancer, so to speak, by your fear and cowardice. It is best to know, and then much may be done before it is too late.

I once saw a man aged 85 years, who had a cancer, and he told me that the diagnosis had been made 30 years previously, and he was given only a year or two to live. By a careful regulation of his diet and habits of life, he had lived in comparative comfort, and the cancer had remained stationary. He was past 90 when he died, but his death was not due to cancer.

I have been asked how one is to know when they have an internal cancer, and again I say, go to your doctor. One of the latest methods of diagnosis of internal cancer, that is safe, simple, and will tell the story quickly in many cases, is by the use of cataphoresis. A certain liquid is placed upon a pad and attached to the positive pole of a galvanic battery, the negative pole is attached to another pad that is saturated with warm water. The pad connected with the positive pole is placed over the seat of the supposed cancer, directly on the body, supposedly on the stomach, while the pad attached to the negative pole is placed at an opposite point at the back. About 20 to 40 milli amperes is then turned on for 15 minutes. If there is a certain kind of cancer within the body, its characteristic odour will be found in the pad attached to the negative pole, and this odour will be so strong and positive that anyone who has ever been so unfortunate as to come frequently in contact with the cancer odour will be able to make a positive diagnosis.

I have seen this method tested in a number of cases, and in one of them a man was so positive that he had cancer of the stomach, that in spite of the fact that the test showed no signs of it; he went to a hospital for surgical proof. After two weeks' nursing through the surgical test, he was informed that there was no cancer.

The safest and most successful method of treatment that I have ever yet heard of or seen used is now being adopted by a number of physicians. It has been used by the discoverer for about 30 years, and I have seen cases in which the cure was completed over eight years ago. The principle of the discovery was like many others of importance, accidental and made by a layman. If I have the story right, this man conceived the idea of smoking the salt for his hams instead of smoking the hams, and then liquifying the salt and injecting it into the hams. It worked, and liquid smoke, as it is now called, can now be bought by the gallon; it preserves meat, that is, the meat does not decay.

When the doctor saw this method of stopping the process of decay, he thought of a sore on the breast of one of his patients—cancer, the flesh was rotting away. He invested a retort, liquified and combined the smoke from a derivative of carbolic and chlorine, with smoke from arrum, iodine, hydrargarum, and beechwood. All of these remedies are considered powerful antiseptics, and the liquid smoke, as we might call it, is injected into and around the cancer and also into the blood. The result is markedly beneficial from the first, as it appears to eliminate the ptomaine from the blood, and the patient improves at once.

A dressing is made of the material, in the form of an ointment or paste, which gradually destroys the cancer sore and is heals without leaving much if any scar. I believe that in time, as this form of treatment comes to the general knowledge of the profession, most cancers will be cured if the sufferers do not too long postpone the diagnosis.

To Get Rid of Wrinkles and Bad Complexions

It is more important now than during the period of profuse perspiration, to keep the pores clean. All cosmetics clog the pores. In cool weather this interferes greatly with elimination of waste material, injuring instead of aiding the complexion. Ordinary mercolised wax serves all the ordinary purposes of creams, powders and rouges, giving far better results. It actually peels off an offensive skin, at the same time unclogging the pores. Minute particles of scarf skin come off day by day, causing not the least pain or discomfort. Gradually the healthy, younger skin beneath peeps out, and in less than a fortnight you have a lovelier complexion than you have ever dreamed of acquiring. Mercolised wax, obtainable at any drugstore, is spread on nightly like cold cream and washes off mornings. One ounce usually suffices.

For removing wrinkles, without stopping the pores with pasty stuff, here's a never-failing formula: 1 oz powdered saxolite, dissolved in ½ pint of witch hazel. Bathe the face in this daily for a while, every line will vanish completely. Even the first application gives surprising results.

Tim (hard up and always on the borrowing track)—"Isn't it sore, Jack, to lose one's relations?" Jack (well-to-do, and given to the putting of his hand in his pocket)—"Well, it seems to me almost impossible."

A REVIVAL OF SKATING

A Popular Sport This Winter, Indoors and Out

THE PANTALETTE PETTICOAT

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—It looks just now as if all the world would go on skates this winter just as all the world took up the dance craze last winter. Our Hippodrome is displaying some wonderfully attractive skating notions in its present show, and many of the glass-enclosed roof gardens have taken up the fad and are giving a skating cabaret instead of the dancing cabaret. The sport is wholesome and appeals to young and old.

Piquant Skating Costumes.

Among the costumes, particularly youthful and chic, are the box coats, worn with short flaring skirts and tasselled Tam-o'-Shanters. The Norfolk model too, is much in favour, and the sweater in some popular vivid tone combined with skirt of corduroy or tweed, is a prime favourite. Each of these suits allows the ease of movement so necessary to this sport, and the grace of line so much sought after in all costumes.

Fabrics favoured for skating suits are tweed, in its various mixtures of soft browns, reds and grays; sweater cloth, warmly and vividly coloured; lamb's wool, so light and warm; and numberless novelty wools and other fabrics favoured for sports use. Corduroy should not be omitted; in wide and narrow wale, it is being used for both coat and skirt. The colours are pleasing and of course the wearing qualities of corduroy are too well known and appreciated to require mentioning. Corduroy lends itself particularly well to the belted Norfolk models for golfing and other out-of-door sports, as well as skating.

Coats Are Unlined.

The belted Norfolk, the sweater coat, and the box model, now worn for sports, are all of them unlined unless it be perhaps a shoulder yoke of satin or heavy silk as a sort of body foundation. This fact makes the fashioning of them at home a much simpler matter. Sport clothes, being more or less of a luxury, are of necessity expensive when purchased ready made; materials, however, may be purchased and the garment made at home very reasonably. A particularly effective suit seen recently, was developed in a soft sage green English coating; it was reversible, the underside being checked in soft blues, greens, reds and browns. Collar, wide cuffs, lapels and belt were made with the check outside; the coat was fastened with large brown leather buttons; a line of the buttons extended down the front of the skirt as well, adding a smart bit of trimming. Pockets are a great convenience for sports wear, and coats and suits this winter are well supplied. The various styles of collars too, so much a part of the new coats, are particularly adapted to real out-of-door wear. The wide chin collar, coming well up about the throat and ears, is becoming and wonderfully warm and practical. The throw scarf of the same material as the coat, or of a fur fabric, often attached directly to the coat itself, is a practical and comfortable notion; what could be more ideal for skating than the wide muff cuff, into which one may slip the hands and remove them instantly if necessary, doing away entirely with the danger of losing a valuable muff, and also the inconvenience of carrying one when the hands may be put to better use.

To People Who Are Under Normal Weight

Good Advice For Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women Who Want to Put On Flesh

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomachs, who having tried advertised flesh-makers, food-fads, physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to life-long skinniness and think nothing will make them fat. Yet their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered combination of assimilative agents has made fat grow after years of thinness, and it is also unequalled, judging from reports, for repairing the waste of sickness or faulty digestion, and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable preparation is called Nargol. Its strength-giving, fat-producing assimilative elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this preparation, which is endorsed and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A few weeks systematic use of nargol should go far to produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying nourishing fats to the blood. If not, every druggist who sells it is authorized to return the purchase price. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fats that thin people need are thus provided. All leading druggists supply Nargol and say there is a large demand for it.

While this new preparation has from reports given splendid results as a nerve-tonic and vitalizer, its use is not recommended to nervous people unless they wish to gain at least ten pounds of flesh.

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

Showing Willingness at Home.

Love shows itself in our willingness to do little or big things that will please our loved ones. A man may not care for violets, but he shows his love for his wife if he will for her sake go down on his knees in the grass and gather a bunch just for her. He may not care to go to church, but if his wife and children want him to go, he could show his love for them by going with them. He may think that they ought to know he loves them dearly, because every day of his life he is working for them.

But his love is not "I that it might be until it leads him to do the things that are especially pleasing to his family. Numerous cares, deep thought, an absorbing life work, a crowded day, free no man from the duty of showing his love at home in ways which are wholly of his wife's or his children's choosing.

The man who complains of the useless demands his family make upon him had better right-about-face and ask himself how much he is doing to make such loving claims seem no longer like demands.

There is nothing that conduces more to the happiness of the home than to find a bright, sunny face looking into ours as we enter the door. If the light of the love shines, it lightens the load and brightens up the outlook. The bright, sunny face in the home is a power for good that cannot be estimated. There is nothing like the cheerful, happy frame of mind which it helps to bring about.

A woman must remember that marriage is not for to-day, nor to-morrow, looks. If she bases her ideas upon any preconceived notion that it will be one long pleasant dream, she will soon think she has the nightmare instead. If she has, however, in herself, the qualities which go to the make-up of a good wife, and those which are essentially needed for the special man upon whom she has set her heart; if she feels that his faults and failing are only such as she can bear with good humour, then let her say "yes," and be happy, for she will be whether fate leads her to a palace or to a hovel.

HOME.

"Be it ever so humble
There's no place like home."

They were written from personal experience. There are no pleasures so sweet as home pleasures, no pleasures so full of genuine enjoyment.

Home should and can be made the dearest spot on earth, sweet and attractive in various ways.

Cultivate a taste for the good, true and beautiful. Do not save the kind, loving word for the stranger alone, but be generous with it at home.

The best of literature should be provided; books, like friends, should be few and well chosen.

The Bible, that holy volume, should be read daily, and its grand and holy precepts carefully followed in the home.

The cultivation of flowers affords happiness, and they lend a charm to the quiet pleasures of home.

Its environments should be made bright, cheerful and pleasant. Let discords be dismissed and peace and harmony reign.

Our home on earth should be typical of heaven. Music greatly enhances its pleasures. In the sweet twilight hour how entrancing to sit and listen to sweet strains of music peeled forth from the organ or piano by the artistic touch of some dear loved one at home.

Home influence, when for good, and not evil, is the best. It prepares us to battle with life when the cold winds of adversity overtake us.

Home should be made an ideal spot with its well-selected library, sweet blooming flowers and innocent games for out and indoors.

A BOOK IN DEMAND.

Some day some sensible man or woman will write a book called "Home Philosophy."

There will be a chapter on the philosophy of washing dishes— without making a mess or getting mad.

There will, of course, be several making beds without mountains or valleys.

There will, o fcourse, be several chapters about good health and air, says the Quincy Herald.

The woman who fills her home with knick-knacks will receive a gentle chiding; and the man who litters the house with tobacco ashes from his pipe or cigar or cigaret will receive a mild scolding.

The man who never stays at home evenings will get what he deserves, and the woman gadder will get hers, too.

That dear home-body woman will receive full credit.

That fine man who works and thinks and lives for his home will be remembered.

"How to Run Your Furance," three chapters.

"How to Keep on Good Terms with the Janitor," five chapters! No living person has solved this problem; it is extremely important.

"The Home Beautiful," let us hope, will receive proper attention.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS

The most economical method of preparing potatoes is to cook and serve them in their skins, thus preserving their full flavour and valuable salts.

Your eyeglasses will not steam if they are dipped in soapy water and wiped dry. There will be a film of this on the glass, which keeps them from steaming.

A cold bath or a sponge bath and rubbing, or a rapid walk in the open air, or going up and down stairs a few times just before retiring, will aid in equalizing the circulation and promoting sleep.

Handles of all new tools, such as hoes, forks, spades, etc., should be oiled when first purchased. Two coats of linseed oil applied hot will make them last better, and there will be less breakage in this kind.

A rusty grate may easily be cleaned if it be black leaded and left for twenty-four hours, or even a couple of days. The black-lead will absorb the rust, and the steel may be polished in the ordinary way.

To many tastes sweet pickles are far more acceptable than acid ones, and they always seem much more of a dainty than the sharper sort. If tender and well-sweetened and spiced they often seem like delicious preserves.

Pieces of bread may be dried in the oven and crushed to make bread crumbs. These can be stored and used to sprinkle on cheese and other dishes. Uncrushed they may be served with any soups. Odd pieces of bread and crusts may be soaked and used in puddings, stuffing, etc.

When towels are wearing thin join two together, and make one strong towel. They should be as nearly alike as possible, of course. Corresponding threads on under and upper towels are not always equally worn, and by darning over worn parts they may be made to last a long time.

Newly Married.

A certain minister lately paid a visit to a lady of his acquaintance who was newly married, and who was attired in the modern fashion. After the usual compliments he familiarly said: "I hope you have a good husband, madam?" "Yes, sir," replied she, "and a good man, too." "I don't know what to say about his goodness," added the minister rather bluntly, "for my Bible teaches me that a good man should clothe his wife, but he lets you go half naked!"

WORTH REMEMBERING.

If hands are red and unsightly, wash them in buttermilk, then rub them with almond meal.

A gas stove should be thoroughly cleaned once a week. The best things to wash the inside fixtures with is strong soda water. Dry well.

To clean japanned trays, heat flour in the oven and rub the tray with it.

To remove slight scratches from silver, mix a little putty powder with sweet oil to a paste, and apply to the scratches, wipe off, and polish with chamois.

Squeaky boots may be stopped by having the shoemaker spring them on each side and insert a little French chalk. Driving a few pegs into the sole will also remedy the annoyance.

Save all clean tissue paper, and place in a bag. Nothing is better for polishing purposes, especially mirrors and window glass.

If you are near-sighted, and must do sewing at night, thread up a paper of needles when it is daylight, with the threads required. The eye only saves the eyesight, but saves time also.

CHICKEN WITH PEPPERS

A delicious made-over dish of chicken is constructed with the aid of green peppers. Cut off the tops of the peppers and scoop out the membrane. Parboil for about five minutes. Place in a baking pan and pour in enough stock or water, immerse the peppers half way and bake for an hour.

HERMITS.

Three eggs, one and a half cups sugar, two and a half cups flour, one and a half cups raisins (chopped), one and a quarter teaspoons soda (dissolved in one tablespoon of hot water), a pinch of salt, one teaspoon of grated nutmeg, one pound of English walnuts (broken in pieces), one wine glass of sherry. Drop from a teaspoon into a well greased pan shape quickly, or add a little more flour, roll out and bake. Best when a month old.

Physician's Skin Remedy

Dr. Holmes, the well known skin specialist, writes:

"I am convinced that the D. D. D. Prescription is as much a specific for Eczema as quinine for malaria. I only 25c. trial bottle and let you have been prescribing the D. D. D. about our money back guarantee for years." This soothing, healing compound of oil of wintergreen and other healing ingredients gives instant relief the moment it is applied. It sinks through the pores, kills and throws off the gnawing disease germs and quickly heals the inflamed tissues. All cases of skin disease, no matter how severe, always benefit after the first bottle. A generous trial bottle for 25c. from druggists will convince you. If your druggist cannot supply you, send 25c. to us and we will forward prepaid. Don't suffer another day. Ask about our money back guarantee.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S CORSET COVER.

By Anabel Worthington.

This model is ideal for general wear, as it has the plainest and flattest of backs and full fronts. There is no yoke in the back, but in front there is a small one at each shoulder, and below this the material is gathered. The fronts cross over in surplice fashion and there is a shaped peplum to hold the garment in place below the waist.

These corset covers are made of crepe de Chine, wash silk, figured and plain nainsook, batiste, cambric and batiste. Sometimes they are trimmed with beading through which ribbon is run and have a little lace frill as a finish.

The corset cover pattern, No. 7308, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires, with peplum, 1¼ yard of 36-inch material. Also, 2½ yards of beading, 3¼ yards of ribbon and 3⅞ yards of edging.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age if a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

WITH FLYING COLORS.

The Incident That Ended His Period of Probation.

By CHARLIE ENGLE.
[Copyright, by Associated Literary Press.]

A man picked his way slowly along the sun baked trail that led westward to Taggart across the depot. It was high noon and the day had been hot and dry and the man's throat was parched with thirst. This did not tend to lessen his ferocious aspect nor to soften the anger that glowed in his eyes. It was all due to his visit that morning to the little ranch a few miles behind, for there he had met with the first failure in his life. He had proposed and been rejected.

It was not Bill Warren's nature to be balked by anything. He usually carried matters his own way and with a high hand, as a result of which he was looked upon as a sort of local "bad man." But this supposition was applied to him only by people who did not know him. In reality no better nor kinder natured man than he ever rode into Taggart.

But Sue Patterson was one of those who were not intimately acquainted with Warren, and this assertiveness she looked upon as something evil. Therefore, although otherwise she liked Warren better than any other of her admirers, she felt that she was acting quite right when she rejected his offer of marriage.

All the consolation that she had given him in answer to his earnest pleading was that she would put him on an indefinite probation and if he came through it with flying colors why—she would think about it.

All of which Warren took too literally, and he thought that she had spoken thus only to soften her refusal. He became angry at the thought of it.

She don't care nothin' for me," he muttered savagely, "an' I know why. It's all along of that sneakin' coyote, Ralph Henderson. Been to France an' seen a few things an' comes out here to lord it over us. I know the brand. She's plumb loco over the cuss, too, an' he ain't no man. No," he finished spitefully, "he ain't no man."

He rode on across the desert in a sort of dulled consciousness, with his hat pulled well down over his eyes. At length, toward the middle of the afternoon, he came into the foothills. Before him lay the Tooth of Time. Beyond it, ten miles to the westward, was Taggart. This necessitated his taking the trail that wound round the slope of the mountain. This trail was hardly more than a well trodden footpath and was only wide enough to permit a single rider upon it. One side of it sloped up at an angle of almost eighty degrees. The other formed the side of a precipice that dropped a sheer 200 feet to the sandy ravine below.

As he rode over the trail, lost in thought, Warren was dead to external sounds. He did not notice the fidgeting of his horse nor his frightened whinnies. He had no intimation whatever that any one was approaching along the trail from the opposite direction. And yet not a hundred feet ahead of him a horse and rider were rounding the curve of the mountain. Neither noticed the other until they were fifty feet apart. Then by some strange intuition both raised their heads. Recognition was mutual and instantaneous, for the man ahead of Warren was Ralph Henderson.

The faces of both men paled with fear. Not in years had two men met on that narrow trail, and it seemed some strange intervention of destiny that it should be Warren and Henderson. While the face of the cattleman grew anxious, that of Henderson became quickly overshot with a crafty cunning.

"Hello!" he drawled pleasantly.

"Hello!" muttered Warren nervously. "Well, what are we going to do about it?" the city man continued. "It looks as if you'd have to go back."

"Not by a — sight!" snapped Warren. "There's no turning about for either of us. We'll have to manage to pass each other. The place seems pretty wide here."

"Whip a coin for the inner side," suggested the other, suddenly reaching a hand into his pocket.

Henderson's face turned scarlet and he stayed his hand. "I declare, I'm all out of coin," he rattled sheepishly.

"Here's an eagle," replied Warren, with narrow eyes. "Heave her up! Heads I pass on the inside, tails I pass on the outside."

He tossed the coin to Henderson as he spoke who, pale faced and hesitating, fumbled with it a moment and let it fly up into the air with a twirl of a veteran trickster. It fell down on the trail at their feet, ringing out clear and cold.

Warren accepted his fate nonchalantly, although he knew that it might mean death for him. There was one thing about it, however, that galled him. He well knew that Henderson was on his way to the Patterson ranch and it came to him as a rather bitter thought that he might have to play the martyr and sacrifice his own life in order that the man could do so. But without a word he pressed his pony's ribs with his heels and rode forward.

Henderson had drawn his horse as close as he could against the side of the mountain out he seemed overtaken by fits of nervousness, for the reins shook in his hands and the color came and went in his dark cheeks.

The ledge where Warren would have to pass Henderson was somewhat wider than the rest of the trail, and he rode forward light hearted and confident that he would easily accomplish it. But just as he brushed against the side of Henderson the latter suddenly drove his spurs with great force against his horse's ribs. With a snort of terror the animal plunged madly forward, dislodging the other horse and rider and sending them hurtling down and over the edge of the precipice. Then he went careening down the slope.

The breath went out of Warren as soon as he felt himself falling, and under the sickening sensation that ensued he lost consciousness. A stinging pain in his leg finally awoke him. Bruised and bleeding, he now sat up and gazed about him. He had landed in the branches of a tree that jutted out from the slope of the mountain. Down below on the sand he could see the form of his horse, dead as a stone.

The first thing Warren did was to swear. Then he looked to his leg. It had been broken just below the knee. As he started to wrap his handkerchief about it he heard a sound from above. Over the rim of the precipice a bushy head was peering.

"Hello!" it called. "Kin ye manage if I send down a rope?"

"Sure," Warren yelled back.

A minute later the end of a lariat came whirling down through space. Warren caught it, made it fast about his body, and then, clinging to it with both hands, ordered the man above to hoist away. A few moments later he crawled up over the ledge and lay panting for breath at old Jem Patterson's feet.

"I seen the hull thing, Bill," began the latter as he undid the rope about the man's body. "Henderson will swing for this or I'll shoot him on sight. I was comin' along a mile behind him an' I seen him jab the buckskin and then sprint." But Warren was unconscious before the man finished speaking, and Patterson lifted him up on his pony after great difficulty and started down the trail for home.

When Warren next regained consciousness he was lying on a bed in a dimly lighted room. Soft hands were bandaging his head and soothing words fell from the lips of their owner. Warren opened his eyes and took in the situation at a glance.

"Sue," he demanded fiercely, "has that skunk been here?"

"Sh!" she murmured, touching a finger to his lips. "He has not been here. Evidently he has skipped the country. Father has told me all about it—the honorable way in which you acted and Henderson's treachery. You have indeed behaved splendidly."

"Sue!" cried the man eagerly, starting up.

"Be quiet," she admonished smilingly. Then she added, "Your probation is over, and you have come through it nobly."

And then Warren claimed his own.

Builder of the Great Wall of China.

To superstitious notions Chin added the lust of luxury, his life being a blaze of oriental magnificence. He built a wonderful palace, which has been described in the Imperial History as having certain gorgeous annexes attached at intervals, the whole extending over a distance of a hundred miles. In consequence of his life of luxury perhaps he became more and more a prey to superstition, and it may be that because of this he completed the Great wall. At any rate, history records that he was informed by prophecy that in time he would be overwhelmed and destroyed by outside enemies. So he mobilized an army of 300,000 men to work on the Great wall and if necessary to fight in its behalf. Chin's design evidently was to inclose his massive empire in a rampart which should have the shape of a horseshoe, with the heel calks at the ocean shore. He did not plan to parallel the coast with a wall, doubtless considering that seaside an ample protection to a country vast and densely populated. The wall is not for modern use. It is an ancient fossil, the largest fossil on the earth. But fossils are useful and truthful. It is a dividing line between two civilizations and between two eras. In space it cut off the herdsmen of the north from the tillers of the south.—William Edgar Geil in Harper's.

Why She Was Glad.

A young Louisville man who was out west not long ago has returned, telling a yarn which he admits is not at his own expense, but which he declares to be about one of the most interesting experiences of even his checkered career.

"I was walking along the street in a western town," he said, "when suddenly across the way I saw a Louisville girl whom I recognized immediately. She saw me, too, and I expected her to bow rather coolly and distantly, as had been her wont back home. I was considerably astonished, therefore, when she dashed across the street, seized me with both hands and fairly bubbled over in her delight. I was so surprised, in fact, that I commented on it.

"'I'm glad to see you, too,' I said when I had managed to extricate myself from her exuberant greeting; 'but, to tell you the truth, I hadn't expected to see you so excited over my appearance. You always treated me rather a la iceberg at home, you know. What has caused your change of heart?'

"She was nonplused for only a moment and then explained, 'Mr. Smith, I've been away from home so long that I'd be glad to see even a dog if he came from Kentucky!'

FEELS LIKE A NEW WOMAN

As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Dispelled Backache, Headache and Dizziness.

Piqua, Ohio.—"I would be very ungrateful if I failed to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound the praise it deserves. For I have taken it at different times and it always relieved me when other medicines failed, and when I had a woman complain I always recommend it. Last winter I was attacked with a severe case of organic weakness. I had backache, pains in my hips and over my kidneys, headaches, dizziness, heartache, had no energy, limbs ached and I was always tired. I was hardly able to do my housework. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on one other occasion, and it had helped me so I took it again and it has built me up, until now I feel like a new woman. You have my hearty consent to use my name and testimonial in any way and I hope it will benefit suffering women."—Mrs. Cozma Tussen, 431 S. Wayne St., Piqua, Ohio.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

MY TERRIBLE HACKING AND SPLITTING COUGH

WAS ENTIRELY CURED BY DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

Mrs. Clara Jackson, Huntsville, Ont., writes us under date of January 12th, 1915. "I take great pleasure in writing you concerning Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Last winter I contracted a very bad cough which troubled me all through the summer. This winter I started to take Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after taking three bottles I can truthfully say that I fell like another woman. The terrible hacking and splitting cough, and the dry sensation in my throat is entirely cured. I would certainly recommend it to anyone troubled with bronchitis or lung trouble. I have not words too grateful to give you."

All obstinate coughs and colds yield quickly to the action of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, combining as it does all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree, and the soothing, healing and expectorant properties of other excellent herbs, roots and barks.

"Dr. Wood's" has been on the market for the past twenty-five years, and we claim that it is the best cure for a cough or cold that you can possibly procure. The thousands of testimonials we have received prove that our claim is right.

All we ask you is to see that you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it, and don't accept some no-account substitute.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

PAYING HENS

By C. S. Anderson.

PAYING hens must have their morning dust bath if they are to lay the maximum number of eggs through the winter. It is a necessary luxury for them. By its use they are enabled to rid themselves of mites and to remove all scales and dirt from the skin.

Lice and mites do their greatest injury to the fowls at night while on the roost. Instinctively they look for a place to dust in the morning. Do not force your hens to dust in the dropping or feed litter. During the summer they will usually find their own dusting place such as the road or in the shade of trees and shrubbery, but in the winter it must be provided for them. Nail an old grocery box in one corner of the house. Elevate it above the floor so that it will not get filled with straw or litter, and put in six or eight inches of dusting material. During moderate weather their box may be placed out in the pen.

To be effective the dusting material must be very light and dry, and fine enough to fill the breathing pores of the mites and lice. The finer the better.

A good dusting material is composed of equal parts of fine sand, road dust, and sifted coal ashes. A cupful of kerosene and a handful of sulphur thoroughly mixed with the dust will make the dust bath still more effective.

USE OF SIGNALS IN FOOTBALL NOT MANY YEARS OLD

Numbers Were First Used in 1888—Pennsy Military College Originates Scheme

"Signals seem to be an absolutely essential part of football, and yet it was not until 1888 that they were invented," says the New York Press. "From the November day in 1869, when Rutgers and Princetown played the first game of football until 1888 the colleges got along by using systems which varied with every eleven, letters being frequently used. It was left to Pennsylvania Military college to originate the present system of numbers.

"It was on a chill November afternoon in 1888 that Pennsylvania Military college flashed the number system on the football world, and incidentally used the single signals as the means of a coup whereby Princeton was whipped at Chester by 6 to 0. The numbers not only mystified Princeton, but they so speeded up Penn Military's play that it was able to outrush the Tigers at every stage of the game, which was witnessed by more than a thousand persons, a great football gathering for those days. From that day the use of numbers for signals spread rapidly.

Revolutionized Football.

"This revolutionized the game. It made speedy play possible and also made football more popular. Before this game the teams would line up on the field and before a play was run off the players would gather behind the line and talk it over. When a decision was reached they would line up again and the ball would be trapped. Then they would hold another conference and another play would be run off.

"Some teams used letters for different formations, but this was not satisfactory. The letter "A" might mean an end run with Jones carrying the ball and "B" a line plunge with some one else taking the pigskin. It took only a short time for the opponents to solve the signals, however, and the old conferences again were restored to.

"The Pennsylvania Military players stumbled on the numerical system by accident. All of the students receive a number when they matriculate, and this number is used as long as they remain in college. They answer to it in the classrooms, in drill and in the mess hall. Sometimes they use the number instead of the name of the student when in ordinary conversation.

New System Discovered.

"On this day the team was playing together poorly and nothing seemed to go off properly. There was a mixup in the backfield and the ball was fumbled.

"'Number 39,' replied the quarterback.

"'Where was it going?' asked the captain.

"'Through the line, and Number 47 was to make the hole,' was the answer.

"'All right,' the leader said. 'Now 39, see that you get the ball,' and you, 47, get out of the way. All read, 39—47.'

"The play worked beautifully. It was tried again, and once more everything went off without a hitch. Then the captain ordered the quarterback to use the numbers of the men on all plays, and the practice was a huge success. It took just half as long to get the plays off, and soon the football men were playing faster than ever before.

"Thus came the football signals, and Pennsylvania Military college must be given the honor of discovering them."

German Losses Are Appalling

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The appalling extent of the German losses is revealed by a perusal of the official casualty list issued daily by the Government for the information of families, although newspapers are prohibited from reproducing it.

The outstanding facts in these lists are the enormous gaps in certain regiments, and the frequency with which entire battalions are wiped out, the remarkable small proportion of officers lost and the great number of volunteers killed.

The latest lists available cover the losses for October. For Prussia, Wuerttemburg, Bavaria and Saxony there are over 300,000 names, 631 pages, and 1,953 columns. It will be recalled that at the beginning of November the Prussian losses alone were estimated at slightly over two million.

The list for October 23rd alone gives 10,000 casualties. The Prussian list include, nine regiments of the Guard, eighty regiments of Grenadiers and Fusiliers of the regular infantry, 31 regiments of reserves and 21 of the Landwehr, and many from the field artillery.

The second battalion of a Guards regiment lost 437 and only three officers. An example of the terrific losses of certain regiments is furnished by the 84th Prussian Infantry, whose third battalion lost 532 out of a full complement of 1,000. A battalion of the Prussian 157 Infantry lost the following numbers in four companies of 250 each: 1st, 176; 2nd, 188; 3rd, 171; 4th, 158.

In a similar manner companies of the 224th Reserve Infantry lost men as follows: 203, 205, 215, 114, 111, 195, 157, 162, 142, 164, 152, 216. The full complement of each company is 250.

The 7th Reserve Infantry lost 1,077 men out of 3,000. These losses were probably suffered at Loos and Tahure. The Landsturm generally kept behind the firing line; yet they show heavy losses caused by illness. In the 4th companies of the 224th reserve, 819 men and five officers were lost. The 153rd Saxon Infantry lost 597 men and seven officers.

Brain Amputation

One of the wonders of surgical science has been performed in a French military hospital where a wounded soldier had a sixth of his brain amputated without missing it. The patient was carried in with a penetrating wound in the occipital region of the cranium. Splinters of bone had caused an abscess to form in the left cerebral hemisphere. These were removed by Dr. A. Quepin, surgeon-in-chief to the hospital, but a fresh abscess formed, and Dr Quepin was obliged on two occasions to amputate portions of the brain which protruded from the wound. The patient thus lost at least a third of the left hemisphere, but shows no special signs of trouble, either of motivity, sensibility, or ideation.

Shooing Geese

It is interesting to note that at Villa geese are shod. The district around this town is celebrated for producing geese too numerous for profitable sale locally. To prevent the birds getting footsore on the long journey they are made during the late autumn to practise the now notorious German "goose-step," first in air and then through fine sand. The geese are thus provided with perfectly fitting pairs of boots, in which they can comfortably perform the two-hundred-mile march to the goose fair at Warsaw without having to cackle for a chiropodist.

WON AFTER TWO DAYS' HARD FIGHTING

PARIS, Nov. 20.—(French Official Communique).—Furious artillery and grenade fighting at many points on the Franco-German front is reported to-day in the War Office communique. No development is mentioned, however, indicating the opening of the fresh German drive for which Copenhagen reports say the Kaiser is transferring immense numbers of troops from the Eastern to the Western war zone.

The fighting referred to in the official communique was fiercest in the vicinity of the Labyrinth. In the Artois district, about Court Es Chausses and Vauquois, in the Argonne, and in the neighbourhood of Reillon in Lorraine.

LONDON, Nov. 20 —That the Allies have served an ultimatum to Greece is not confirmed. The report also comes from Germany. Lord Kitchener was to see King Constantine to-day, unless the Queen prevailed on her husband to refuse His Lordship an audience. She failed in the case of Denys Cochin, the French Emissary.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—A semi-official statement from Germany declares that seventy heavily laden British transports have passed through the Straits of Gibraltar during the last few days, heavily laden with men and munitions and supplies, and apparently destined for Greek waters. The German statement says that German submarine commanders declare these vessels are using Red Cross flags, but this is vigorously denied by the Admiralty officials, who say the British Navy can and does furnish adequate protection, without resource to the fraudulent use of a Red Cross. Athens reports that two more Germanic submarines were captured or destroyed in the Mediterranean by French Italian flotillas since yesterday.

It is believed here that Kitchener will personally command the Allies' Balkan campaign, and have from half a million to a million French and British troops under him.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—The capture by Italians, after a desperate fight, of the Austrian position between Monte San Michele's third summit and the Isonzo is reported officially from Rome to-day. During all of Thursday, Thursday night and into Friday the lines wavered to and fro, but finally the Italians were the important gainers.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—The destruction of the Italian steamship Verona by a submarine is feared to-day, from the report of the wireless from the vessel saying she is being pursued off the Mediterranean coast of Spain. The Verona is of 8,261 tons, and the sister ship of the ill fated Ancona.

QUEBEC, Nov. 20.—Seventy-five per cent. of the soldiers who return to Canada from the front will require convalescent treatment for indefinite periods, ranging anywhere from three months to twelve months or more. This is the finding of the board of medical officers who have examined six hundred Canadian wounded who came over on the steamer Metagama.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Charges that the German officers kicked drowning men from their submarine after torpedoing the French troop ship Calvados, near Gibraltar recently, are contained in a report received today from Officer H. Bacon, of the British steamship Lady Plymouth, who saved 53 of these on the lost vessel. There were 800 on the transport at the time of the attack, and many swam to the U boat. The gold-laced officers of the undersea craft are declared to have trampled on their clinging fingers until they let go and drowned. Bacon sent this report from Algiers.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 20.—The Canadian branch of the Ford Motor Co. has subscribed one million dollars toward Canada's fifty million dollar domestic war loan, it was announced here to-day.

Dear Folks at Home:—Your welcome letters of October 10th and 11th arrived yesterday. You say my letters take two weeks to arrive, but yours always take at least sixteen days. However this is pretty good time, all things considered. Glad to hear that you liked the little Belgian souvenir I sent you, mother. I intend to send you some Belgian lace some of these days. Hope you received the big letter I sent you a week ago. Let me know if you did. We are still in the same place as when I last wrote, but things have not been so agreeable just now, as it has been raining steadily for the last two days and don't look like clearing yet. When it rains over here the roads become quagmires, on account of the heavy traffic over them. Horses and vehicles are coated with mud, and the men are plastered to the knees.

The 2nd Battalion, 1st contingent, came out of the trenches last night, but as yet have not seen any Peterborough boys. Peter and Earl going over to see them in a day or so and learn how they are faring. Their billet is only about one mile from ours. Have just had a chat with Sergt. Portsmouth, formerly of the 45th, of Lindsay, via Peterborough, who left with the 8th C.M.R.'s as rule boy our post, with Jay Train—you will remember him. Dad.

HOTELS OUT OF BOUNDS

Order Restricting Sale of Liquor to Soldiers Has Been Issued to all License Holders in Peterboro' --Order is Backed up by the License Board

COPY OF NOTICE

The following notice refers to an order originating with the Commanding Officer of the 3rd Military Division and later confirmed by the License Board of Ontario. A copy of the notice has been served to all license-holders in Peterborough by License Inspector Stewart.

The order follows:

THE LIQUOR LICENSE ACT.

Notice to the Hoders of Tavern and Shop Licenses in Ontario.

"Take notice, that the military authorities have declared 'out of bounds' all licensed liquor shops within the 3rd Military Division of the Province of Ontario.

"The effect of the said order is to prohibit any soldier, whether in uniform or not, entering any shop in which liquor is sold, at any hour of the day.

"The said order also places 'out of bounds' to all soldiers, whether in uniform or not, all barrooms in licensed taverns within the said division except between the hours of 6 o'clock and 8 o'clock in the afternoon and on Saturdays between the hours of 6 o'clock and 7 o'clock, the object being to prevent soldiers being supplied with liquor between the hours aforesaid in any part of the licensed premises.

"It is the policy of the Board of License Commissioners to support the military authorities in the enforcement of any orders respecting the sale of liquor to soldiers, and any holder of a liquor license who permits any violation of the said order will be liable to have his license suspended or cancelled, according to the gravity of the offence, of which all persons interested are required to take notice and govern themselves accordingly."

Dated at Toronto, the 17th day of November, 1915.

CLARK E. JARVIS,
Secretary to the Board of License Commissioners for Ontario.

Civic Welcome Tendered 400 Boy Delegates by Alderman Dobbin

Boys' Work Conference Opened in Murray Street Baptist Church Last Night—Splendid Speeches Made by Delegates in Acknowledging Peterboro's Greeting.

"PREPAREDNESS" FOR BOYS

In the absence of Mayor Buller, who was attending a Patriotic League meeting in Toronto, Alderman Dobbin extended a civic welcome to the four hundred boys assembled at the first session of the tenth annual Boys' Work Conference in the Murray Street Baptist Church last night.

He bore the greetings of the city to the visitors, and incidentally contributed a sympathetic message of encouragement in connection with the work in which they are engaging themselves. Alderman Dobbin spoke as one who had been actively interested in Sunday School and Church work through a long span of years. He expressed the hope that the boys would not only carry away rich fruits from their conference, but also a kindly regard for Peterborough and its citizens.

The civic welcome was acknowledged on behalf of the conference by Ross Eastwood of Belleview, speaking for rural boys, Mr. Wilson of Brockville representing town delegations, and F. Harold Horton of Toronto, who spoke for the city boys. If the intellectual standard of the efficiency tests were applied to these boys, all three of them would grade high, and the rural representative would be a close contender for the highest credit mark. Mr Eastwood said that he belonged to an organized Sunday School class of whose members 33 1-3 per cent. had enlisted for overseas service. "We love the rural life" he observed, "and are eager to better its conditions. We feel we are giving leaders in all classes of Canadian activities, who have risen through sheer force of their characters and in spite of the rural deficiencies. I feel I am voicing the sentiment of all the rural delegates in saying that we will have pleasant memories of Peterborough and its hospitality."

Mr Horton expressed his appreciation of the generous civic welcome and stated that to be a city boy means, first to realize its opportunities for education, for employment, and, coupled with these, for success.

Referring to the conference he spoke of the emphasis placed placed upon service and was confident that its results would be reflected in the life of the city and province, and even throughout the whole Dominion.

Mr. Arthur L. Paterson

To Mr. Arthur L. Paterson of Montreal, has been assigned the duty of conveying the opening message at each session. His remarks last night and this morning have been brief but pointed, with inspirational weight. One of Montreal's bank managers while on his way to the Westmount High School to address an assembly of boys, said to Mr. Paterson: "Those fellows have had put upon them now a responsibility and opportunity they must measure up to. Because of our voluntary system of enlistment many of our best young men have gone and many of them are not coming back. This will leave a great gap in our manhood, and unless our boys rise up to fill their places it will be a very serious matter when things get straightened out again."

Mr. Paterson reminded the boys that they must make sacrifices in order to prepare themselves for their futures. He held up the life of David Livingstone who at the age of ten was a boy working in a cotton factory from 6 a.m. until 8 p.m. Every night he studied Latin from 8 o'clock until midnight. In his 20th year he forced himself through a medical and theological education with the result that Livingstone was one of the great men of his world. Mr. Paterson also drew an illustration of sacrifice for preparedness from the thirty years of the life of Jesus. Thousands of young men are sacrificing themselves for their country to-day and anything the present youth may do measures paltry and small in comparison. To reach the goal of development Jesus Christ is the one above all who can help. If there is any weakness in your life that is where Jesus Christ steps in. Where you are weak, He makes you strong. Mr. Patterson urged the fellows to make the most of the conference, not alone, but in keeping close to Jesus who said "I will never leave thee, or forsake thee."

MANY PROMOTIONS ANNOUNCED IN THE 93rd BATTALION

To-day's Orders Give a Step Up the Ladder to a Number of Peterborough's Soldiers—Board Will Investigate the Condition of the Boots Issued to the 93rd—Funeral of Private Fred Sawyer Will Take Place Monday—To-day's Military News.

A long list of promotions was the feature of the orders read at the parade of the 93rd Battalion. The orders were in part as follows:

Headquarters,
Peterborough, Nov. 20.

1 Orderly officer for to-day, Lieut. W. G. Worth.

Orderly officer for to-morrow, Lieut. L. J. Staurt.

Parades

A firing party consisting of one N.C.O. of the rank of sergeant and thirteen rank and file will parade in the armourires at 2 p.m. this date for the purpose of preparing for the funeral of the late No. 1000001 Pte. H. F. Sawyer.

3. All parade slates and other returns will be handed into the orderly room not later than 9.30 a.m. daily, Sundays and holidays excepted.

The commanding officer is pleased to make the following provisional promotions:

A Company—

To be sergeant—Lance-Sergt. R. Willshaw.

To be sergeant—Corp. F. Traynor.
To be lance sergeant—Corp. Brown.
To be corporal—Lance-Corp. Tobin.
To be corporal—Lance-Corp. Rutter.
To be lance corps—Pte. White, Pte. Spargo, Pte. McIntyre, Pte. S. Marshood.

B Company—

To be sergeant—Lance-Corp. O'Herron.

To be sergeant—Corp. Lewington.
To be lance sergeant—Corp. W. Leader.
To be corporal—Lance Corp. Vollans.
To be corporal—Pte. Burrows.
To be corporal—Pte. Clappison.
To be lance corporals—Pte. P. Smith, Pte. G. Lockie.
To be stretcher bearer sergeant—Lance-Sergt. Naples.
To be signaller sergeant—Pte. Ecclestone.

A board of officers will assemble at the armouries to-day at an hour to be named by the president to inquire into and report upon the death of Pte. H. F. Sawyer, 93rd Overseas Battalion.

President—Major R. T. Hounsell, 57th Regiment.
Members—Capt. K. C. Locke, Capt. J. E. R. Munro, 93rd Battalion.

A board of medical officers will assemble at a place and date to be named by the president for the purpose of reporting on the cause of death of Pte. H. F. Sawyer.

President—Major Eastwood, A.M.C.
Member—Major G. S. Cameron, A.M.C.

A Board of Officers will assemble at the quartermaster's store at the armouries at 2:30 the 24th instant to inquire into and report upon the condition of the boots issued to the 93rd overseas battalion.

President—W. G. Hall.
Members—Lieut. Widdifield, Lieut. Deputy.

The proceeding will be forward in quadruplicate to the adjutant.

All witnesses required will attend.

The funeral of Pte. Fred Sawyer of the 93rd Battalion will take place on Monday afternoon under military auspices with a service at the armouries at 3 o'clock. Owing to the arrival of a new supply of rifles it will be possible to carry out the proper details of a military funeral more closely than on the last occasion of the kind, and a firing party will be provided from No. 1 platoon.

Another pair was added to the long list of brothers in the 93rd Battalion yesterday, when Walter ("Jiddy") Miller, son of Mr Finch Miller, and brother of Sergt.-Major T. Miller, joined the local battalion. Pte. Miller who has been a member of the Peterborough Fire Department for some time, was formerly a well-known professional hockey player, playing with the Montreal Wanderers and Ottawa in the National Hockey Association, and with several clubs in the Maritime Professional League.

At yesterday afternoon's parade Lt.-Col. Johnston explained to the men of the 93rd Battalion that the regimental canteen was conducted for the benefit of the whole battalion, and that all profits went into the regimental fund, out of which all members of the 93rd profitted equally. The canteen has done splendid business all week.

No. 1 Patoon, 93rd Battalion, of which the late Pte. Fred Sawyer was a member, sent a wreath to Mrs. Sawyer to-day as a mark of the respect they felt for their comrade. The firing party for the funeral, on Monday will be chosen from No. 1 Platoon.

The Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club are having a social evening for the boys of the 93rd Battalion, at the S. A. Temple, Simcoe Street, to-night, beginning at 8 o'clock. A short programme will be given, after which refreshments will be served by the ladies.

A cordial invitation is extended to all returned soldiers to attend.

A very pleasing ceremony took place on Thursday evening in the drawing room of the Bonner Worth Company, Limited, Mr. Walter Worth who has heard the call for duty, and has a commission in the 93rd Regiment, was presented with a wrist watch, a gold-mounted Malacca walking stick, and a dressing case, by the employees of the Company.

An address was read by Miss F. Wood and the presentation was made by Miss D. Mongour. Lieutenant Worth replied very suitably, and said he hoped to be with them again very soon.

The Lindsay Post says: Lt.-Col. J. J. H. Fee, formerly Commander of Fort Henry at Kingston, Ont., arrived in town this afternoon in his Overland touring car, and has already taken up his quarters at the local Armouries, where he will be in command. Col. Fee will at once assume control of the organization work in connection with the 109th Battalion and it is his intention to bring the Battalion up to strength as soon as possible.

Next week Col. Fee's staff of efficient officers will arrive in Lindsay, as well as some 60 men, whom the Colonel was successful in recruiting in the Limestone City.

At Kingston Lt.-Col. Fee has a host of friends and he was given a hearty send-off. Lindsay citizens will be pleased to welcome him back to town once more.

The Lindsay Post has the following: A deserter named Clarke or Kelley from the 59th Batt., C.E.F., Kingston was taken by the police last night and placed in the cells. He will come before Lieut.-Col. Anderson to-day for sentence. Another deserter named Griffin is wanted, he having escaped about the same time as Pte. Clarke did. The men signed up in Lindsay last winter, but it is not known whether they belong to Victoria County or are two of the bunch that came from Toronto.

Lt.-Col. Johnston, Capt. Widdifield and Lieutenant Clipsham Bayles of the 93rd Battalion are in Warkworth this afternoon for the purpose of swearing in thirteen recruits for the 93rd Battalion. It is expected that Warkworth district will contribute at least double that number for the 93rd. They will drill at Warkworth for the time being but will eventually be transferred to Peterborough.

No. 6 Platoon of the 93rd Battalion is now in process of organization. Sergt. E. P. Clarke is acting as Platoon.

SATURDAY, NOV. 20, 1915

WHAT WILL BE DONE?

The United States, may congratulate itself upon its freedom from war at home or abroad, and immunity from its terrible consequences of human suffering and loss of life. But it has been, and is in one sense, in a state of war. Germany has made war and committed murder upon its citizens compassing the death of women and children. And there is evidence that for months Germany and Austria-Hungary, have been plotting war, and waging one form of war, right in United States territory, spending millions under official direction to outrage the laws, and outrage the neutrality of the United States, upon which it plumes itself so much. Plots to provoke strikes in munition factories, plots to burn or blow up munition factories, and plots to blow up steamers carrying munitions, have been widely engineered. United States people and the authorities may fittingly ask Boss Tweed's cynical question: "What are you going to do about it?" Uncle Sam talked, sent notes, and made weak protest, in terms of diplomatic and apologetic mildness, over the slaughter of his defenceless citizens. We may expect now, however, that property is endangered, profits threatened, and money-making menaced, to have some action taken. Official investigation, pending, if not actually in operation, is to be made into charges of the expenditure of as much as forty million dollars by the governments of Germany and Austria-Hungary to make war on the United States to make war on United States factories and the industrial integrity of the country. There is abundant prima facie evidence that these charges are true, apart from the consideration that such expedients are quite in line with the Teutonic way of waging war — plotting, spying, lying, incitation to rebellion. The work done by the Teutons outside of its monstrous military strength shows anew the necessity of combatting to collapse their diabolical enginery of world disturbance. In South Africa, in Egypt, in India, and in Persia, German money has been spent lavishly in the employment of spies and agents to stir up sedition and revolt. And now in the United States, the greatest and most powerful neutral country, the same system is being pursued. Will the United States stand this; will it confine its protests to polite and meekly worded verbal remonstrances, or will it proceed to more vigorous protest against the outrage upon its government, against its peaceful territory being made a base of attack against the allied powers, against the conversion of its territory into a theatre of virtual war? Not only is the integrity of United States institutions attacked and outraged, but the very liberty which the United States boasts is its peculiar protege, is threatened; for world domination, involving the destruction of personal liberty, and the liberty of the United States, is among the plans of the German apotheosis of militarism.

CIVIC REPRESENTATION.

No one will deny that there is a growing popular feeling of dissatisfaction with the way we are municipally governed, especially in view of unsatisfactory results. This dissatisfaction not only finds expression in sotto voce, muttered protests, but in demands for commission government as a relief. So strong is the feeling of dissatisfaction that even members of the Council elected under our present system favour so radical a change as government by commission, and the City Council has even appointed a committee to consider and report upon the subject. When men, among whom many make extraordinary efforts to obtain seats in the Council, are willing, in order to remedy conditions, to efface themselves, there must have been developed a strong sense of the impossibility of securing effective and satisfactory municipal government under the present prevailing system.

It is evident that we must have something in the way of improvement, for under the present system there is too much lack of system, too many loose ends dangling from year to year. One does not know whether it could have been avoided or not; but there has been slow work in connection with solving the sewage disposal problem which the city is compelled to solve. The city had notice of the necessity of obligation to action in this regard three years ago, and the question seems to be dead except when it is resurrected by the threatening letters of the solicitors of some municipality. The people know that money is being spent upon an expensive out-fall sewer, which when completed, will not be allowed to be used to pour sewage into the river, but on the whole subject of sewage disposal the people are in the dark. We don't know why a form of pavement was adopted and laid down at large expense, that was condemned after investigation by a committee of the Council. We have not had explained why there is still chaos in our Hydro-Electric undertaking, and are apparently no nearer a clarified situation than we had five years ago when the people voted strongly for the Hydro-Electric principle for Peterborough.

These things which are a type of many others, are not mentioned in a spirit of censure, but as evidences of the inefficiency of our present system. We do not know who is to blame individually or officially, if anybody is to blame. But we can be pretty certain that all civic problems that have failed of solution; that have dragged on indefinitely, would have been much more promptly and satisfactorily settled and disposed of by any ordinary business corporation.

If a commission form of government is the remedy we shall have a long time to wait before we can try the effects of it, if we depend upon the report of a Council committee. In default of that it seems that some immediate improvement can be made in the manner of electing our representatives by abolishing the vicious ward system. In electing civic representatives by this means we simply make them heirs of the defects of the municipal system of representation from which we suffer. If this cannot be radically changed it can be improved by the election of better qualified men—men better qualified to make the best of a bad system. Peterborough made a decidedly retrograde step when it abolished the election of alderman by general vote, and reverted to the vicious ward system. By so doing we opened the way to the possibility or certainty of electing inferior men; men who by personal influence or local favouritism could not have been elected if the whole body of electors had passed upon their choice. By adopting the ward system we destroyed the sense of responsibility of the aldermanic body. They did not represent the city as a whole, but a section of it; they therefore had sectional feelings a sectional outlook, and no real sense of their responsibility to the whole city.

By retrograding to the ward system, eight-tenths of the electors were disfranchised—have a chance to vote only for two out of the ten members that, with the Mayor, compose the Council. They have no voice in selecting the majority of those elected to do their business—to spend their money. It would be just as logical in principle to elect a mayor by the vote of the ward in which he lives. The ward system in addition to making easy the election of men of inferior qualifications, through local or personal influence, lessens the interest the citizens take in the composition of the body of aldermen.

If candidates as in the case of the mayor had to pass under the judgment of the whole body of electors, they would have to measure up to a higher standard. They would have to depend, not upon local favour, but upon the favour arising from their prominence in the community—upon their known capacity in business, or for their public spirit, which if they were worth while, would be known to the whole community.

There is no doubt that thersby we should get a more capable class of aldermen; and if the general body of electors had such an inspiration they would take an interest in the selection and election of aldermanic candidates, that at present, thanks to the ward system, they do not take. This indifference on the part of the electorate is one of the causes why we fail to secure as good and representative body of aldermen as would be possible and probable if the people had an opportunity by the adoption of the general vote system, to have a voice in the selection of all their civic representatives.

CONVENIENTLY FORGETS.

Whenever The Toronto News has anything to say about the unwillingness of the French-Canadians to enlist it does its best to ignore the way in which Sir Robert Borden, Mr. Frank Cochrane, and the other Conservative statesmen encouraged Mr. Bourassa and Mr. Lavergne in Drummond and Arthabaska in 1910, and all over Ontario and Quebec in 1911, even to the extent of using Mr. Bourassa in Northern Ontario as a campaign speaker. It will take more than Lady Macbeth's quarter of an hour of washing to make their hands clean.—The Globe

GETTING AN EDUCATION.

In this war we have for the first time very large masses of Englishmen who are not "gentlemen" living working and fighting in a foreign land, and forced to some kind of familiarity with its language, its food, its climate and its religion. And this is producing what half a hundred lumbering Education Acts have entirely failed to produce — a comparatively educated common people What peasants are like, what priests are like, what frontiers are like — there were the three things which English people pre-eminently did not know. And they are things which some million or two of them cannot now defend their own country without knowing.—G. K Chesterton in Illustrated London News.

WITH THE NAVY.

I went North—very far North—with the sailors. They had been South—my particular group of them—on a few days' leave to visit their wives in Devonport or London. Some of them had been in battle; most of them had not been off their ships for eight months. In five-and-twenty years of navy life, one man calculated, he had spent only two years at home. They were men to compel your admiration for the Navy—sober, cheerful, quiet, well-mannered, kindly of nature, unGrumbling, and gallant, and they knew the North of Scotland much better than I did, though they were Englishmen. It was odd to see their familiar recognition of very little railway station, to notice their quite correct pronunciation of Gaelic place-names with which they might pardonably have blundered. They had been home, and all was well with them, and they were happy. What a spirit of endurance, what a marvel of content and resignation was theirs, I realized in full only when I saw them to their journey's end, with the pinnaces waiting at the quays, and the grey iron homes of their exile waiting their return. A bitter wind was blowing in the roadstead, that marvellous fleet was tugging at its chains on a sea tumultuous; a sailor's life seemed then and there the very last that rational man should chose for himself. Yet those men went to their several boats with jollity.—Glasgow News.

A LONG WAIT FOR DISCHARGE

Returned Soldiers Are Held Up by Leisurely Boards, Which Might Do Their Work on Voyage Over.

This statement by a Toronto man at Quebec illustrates the view the returning soldiers take of their detention in the discharge depot in the Quebec immigration sheds while medical boards examine them, discuss their cases, determine what is to be done with the men, and pass them.

"We've been messing round for a week," said one of the five Toronto men who arrived two weeks ago and who were still waiting for their discharge last Saturday.

The 73 Toronto men who came over on the Metagama arriving last Sunday might have been in their homes or among friends in Toronto by last Monday morning if business methods were used on the distribution of returning soldiers. Instead of this they may, if their luck is good, arrive in Toronto on Sunday morning next.

Boards Upon Boards.

"I have passed three boards — three Canadian boards already," said one Toronto man, while waiting for examination at Quebec. "What the purpose of going through another board here is, I don't know, unless it is to provide someone with a job. All our papers from the other boards are before the authorities now. All the disabilities and conditions of the men are shown on them."

But the men are compelled to idle about Quebec, itching to be off to their homes, while the medical officers in khaki, wearing the badge of their rank, solemnly and deliberately deal with their cases. Some of the men are said to have been under examination for four hours.

Waiting and Waiting.

The ordinary civilian who has been privileged to look upon the workings of the Board from the outside cannot help thinking that even from that aspect there is room for improvement. Throughout the whole 620 men there is urgent anxiety to pass the Board and get away. Outside the boardroom twenty or thirty men who have been warned to be ready, wait and wait and wait as one by one they are summoned inside. They are waiting there long before the members of the Boards have sauntered down from the Chateau Frontenac in leisurely fashion to take on the burden. The officers stroll in to the boardroom, returning from supper at perhaps nine o'clock at night. They pass between the waiting ranks and the door is closed behind them. After a while the door opens and an officer comes out with a hand full of medical histories of the men and calls off the names of the men who are wanted. Those who are "next" enter the room. The door is closed again, and those who are left outside may have another hour or so to wait till it is announced from within that no more men will be taken to-day and the men come back to renew their waiting to-morrow morning.

Too Much Cushion.

There is a saying that a man sits much closer to his work if there is no cushion on his chair. It would probably aid the work of the medical boards a whole lot if the cushions were taken from their chairs. If the Medical Board were to be provided with quarters in the immigration sheds, as officers in barracks, instead of being entertained at a luxurious hotel where the menu alone is about an hour long, the work of handling the men would probably be much expedited.

The Toronto officers on the board are: Lieut.-Col. Marlow, Maj. C. J. Currie, Capt. Munn, and Lieut. F. N. Hughes. There are three boards at work, and if all the loose ends and waste of time were gathered up and utilized it might be much appreciated by the men and by their relatives and friends.

Work on Shipboard.

If it is necessary to have another examination of the men it should be possible to have travelling boards to deal with the men on shipboard during the passage so that on arrival in port every man would have his ticket and his directions as to what was to become of him. The men who have done service for their country are entitled to consideration and to prompt disposal of their cases. They should not be kept dancing attendance in a strange city on the pleasure and convenience of any military board while red tape is unrolled and adjusted to a nicety pleasing to the official mind.

Father: "Glad to see you safe back, Donald. They say London's an awful wicked place. Did you notice anything of that?" Son: "Ay, I had some awfu' adventures! One night I found myself in a terrible place. Why, noon, the whusky was so bad, I verra nearly

THE CAPACITY OF CANADA TO MEET DOMESTIC WAR LOAN

A Show-Down at Last.

The much advertised; the much lauded Dominion of Canada has approached a season when a demonstration of her great wealth and her splendid financial strength may be made before the whole world. Let us show them what we have in money as well as what we have in men.

The Domestic Loan will be issued in denominations to suit all pockets. It will be available for the worker as well as the capitalist. Working men merchants, professional men, manufacturers and financial institutions should ask for all they can conveniently absorb. The investment yield will be liberal and, of course, the security of the highest grade.

As Good As Hard Cash.

The scrip of the Domestic War Loan will be excellent collateral, probably having a borrowing value approximating 95 per cent. of the par value. So that, to all intent and purposes, the War Loan will be almost as liquid as money.

It is up to the Canadian People to respond nobly and spontaneously to this first Domestic War Loan. It will be good business as well as good sentiment.

Let London see that our patriotism is pocket-deep; let New York see that Canada is rich in material resource, despite her past extravagances; and let Berlin see that the whole of Canada is united in a resolve to fight to the absolute limit.

During the past sixteen months, Canada's manhood has made a splendid response to the call of the Mother Country in her desperate need. Canada, from a military point of view is doing, voluntarily, as is Great Britain, more than was expected by the continental Allies, but not more than was needed for the cause of civilization and freedom. Canada does not unduly boast of her share in the terrible struggle, but she takes justifiable pride in the page she is writing into history. And well she may!

But Canada has yet more to do, and this additional work is not confined to bomb throwing from trench to trench, nor to the manufacture of shrapnel or great guns, but to the accumulation of Silver Bullets.

Canada's immediate duty is to concentrate some $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 of these silver bullets in the coffers at Ottawa, and the opportunity to do so will be offered the Canadian public next week, when the great Domestic War Loan will be issued.

This Domestic War Loan in many respects will be the acid test of Canada's patriotism, and of Canada's financial capabilities. Those abroad, friend and foe alike, will say that it is all very well to show our patriotism by sending our young men to fight for us, but if this nation puts its hands deep down into its pockets and subscribes for two or three or four times the full extent of the Loan, there will ensure a respect for the Dominion which will ring throughout the world.—T. Kelly Dickenson, in Financial Times.

Plain Horse Sense.

If a merchant or a manufacturer is willing to spend good money for advertising, to ask you to try his store or his product, it stands to reason that he must have something worth offering. Otherwise you would not go back, or you would not again purchase the product, and the first sale would be the last. In that case advertising would NOT pay. It only pays when it brings continuous patronage, and to do that there must be real value given. That is the reason advertised stores or products are almost invariably good. It will pay you to patronize the advertisers.

Ladies Will Be Welcome At This Lecture

A number of enquiries have been made as to whether ladies are expected to attend the lecture of H. S. Rogon "The Church of Christ and the Single Tax" at Murray Street Church on Tuesday evening next. The answer is "Yes." While the gathering is under the auspices of the Men's Association, it is the intention of the men to use the auditorium to make accommodation for all. There will be opportunity given for those who desire to ask questions of one who is a specialist on the subject.

The offering will be used for local Red Cross work and will be taken by young ladies in the uniform of the Order.

HOW TO MAKE HAIR GROW

NEW YORK CHEMIST GIVES SIMPLE FORMULA.

"To destroy dandruff, cleanse and invigorate the scalp, ward off premature grayness and baldness, and to stimulate hair growth, I recommend this formula in preference to anything else: 6 ounces bay rum, 2 ounces lavona de composee, and 1 drachm menthol crystals. You can buy these ingredients from any druggist and mix them yourself at home or the druggist will mix them for you. If you choose, add a teaspoonful of your favorite perfume to the above ingredients. Apply to the scalp night and morning, and rub in thoroughly with the finger tips.

HER REPLY.

As the happy couple were leaving the church the husband said to the partner of his married life—"Marriage must seem a terrible thing to you, why you were all of a tremble, and one could hardly hear you say 'I will'." "I will have more courage and say it louder next time," said the blushing bride.

KEEP IN TUNE

COMMUNITIES are like people. They are apt to get "OUT OF TUNE." HARMONY is any community's most valuable asset. Without it little can be accomplished. When the town is OFF KEY it is on the down grade. Something should be done ALL of the time to keep our community in TUNE. We are apt to overlook this, and only TUNE UP spasmodically. In the INTERVALS we are apt to forget we are part of a COMMUNITY. We lapse into mere individuals and lose our COMMUNITY sense. We can't go too far in an effort to preserve community Harmony. Let's all work in order to keep ON THE KEY.

Doctor Refused to Operate On Defective Baby; Death Arouses Storm of Protest

Infant Was Born Deformed, Chicago Doctor Says He Did Not Feel Justified in Saving Its Life —Big Ethical Question Involved

JUDGE CALLS IT MURDER

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.— John Bollinger, the boy baby condemned as a hopeless defective and therefore not operated on, died last evening in the German-American Hospital. The child was five days old. The mother was not informed to-night of the death of the child.

Its life, Dr. H. J. Haiselden, the attending physician, said, might have been saved by an operation, but this he did not feel justified in performing. The partial paralysis and the malformations, he said, were so great a bar to happiness or attainment that he did not feel justified in saving the baby from the death which nature ordained.

The public, aroused by the case, may force an investigation by the authorities, Coroner Hoffman said.

"I do not believe there will be an inquest. The case is not different from many others. If the physician knows the cause of death, that covers the situation. But I shall talk with him in the morning. I believe a scientific body of physicians should pass on the case.

Dr. George J. Lipschultz, a member of the Legislature, announced that he would appear before the State Board of Health and ask that Dr. Haiselden's license to practice medicine be taken from him.

Dr. Haiselden in discussing his action said to-night:

"I rest with my conscience. There was no chance that life would bring this child anything better than an animal existence and imbecility. I had no right to condemn it to that. The Power which sent it here doomed to die has taken it back. I believe I have done the child, its parents, who agree with me, and the race a favor in taking the course I did."

Guard at Child's Bedside.

A guard stood at the baby's side at the end, for the steady jangle of the telephone bell had brought threats as well as appeals to the surgeon. It was feared an attempt would be made to kidnap the child. Many persons had asked permission to take the baby to their homes and have it cared for by other surgeons. Women pleaded, and at least one vented her wrath in epithets of bitterest nature. One woman adviser bade Dr. Haiselden to stand firm. She said:

"Would that another physician had the courage to do as you are doing. My boy is deformed and imbecilic. I watch over him constantly and pray for him nightly, but what shall become of him when I am gone? He may fall into the hands of those who will allow him to do great harm to himself and society."

Prior to the death of the child a storm of protest arose not alone in Chicago, but in remote parts of the United States. Many persons, including clergy of all denominations, took the ground that the child's life should be saved at all hazards, although a vast majority of those protesting were unaware that the child lacked one ear, while the other was malformed, its stomach misplaced, and the brain subnormal.

Jane Addams's View.

"That baby's life should be protected as long as possible," said Miss Jane Adams. "Under no circumstances has any human being the right to pass judgment of death for unfitness or any other human being. Only one thing will justify such presumption, the course of the law in punishing a murderer."

Bishop Samuel Fallows said:

"I am divided between sentiment and science. All my Christianity repels the thought of the child's death. I don't want to be dogmatic. While the church says the baby should at all hazards, the physicians think it should be allowed to die. Detectives have reached great heights. Note Helen Keller, the blind, deaf, and dumb girl; Pope, the poet, and many geniuses."

The Rev. Father Fitzsimmons, Secretary of the Roman Catholic Diocese said:

"The thought is against Catholic faith and all the laws of the Catholic Church. No man has the right to efface a life put here by God. Doctors make mistakes. This is one of them."

Augustine J. Bowe, proffessor of criminal law and author of a treatise on "Crimes Against Persons," said, in discussing the case:

"No one has the legal right to further the child's life. While humane laws and religion urge the baby's preservation, and legal questions involved are whether a physician who believes a patient should not be operated on is to be held responsible if he permits the patient to die in furtherance of his judgment. I doubt if a conviction of any crime could be had on those circumstances. It is done every day all over the world where doctors decide the fate of patients."

Dr. Harold N. Moyer, a noted biologist said:

"No general rule can be laid down in cases like this. The ethics of our profession are to prolong life and relieve suffering. This case is not an exception, but like countless others that are decided by doctors every day. The public will be educated by this discussion. Those questions must sooner or later come to the attention of the masses."

Some Opinions.

The consensus was that whatever the ethics involved, no one physician should be permitted to decide on his own responsibility either as to the fate of the child or on the correctness of the diagnosis.

Dr. Virgil P. Gibney of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University differs materially with Dr. H. J. Haiselden, the surgeon in charge of the defective Chicago child, in the conception of duty under the circumstances. He condemned the Chicago physician for refusing to operate on the infant, saying that it is the duty of a doctor to relieve the suffering of humanity and to prolong life, regardless of what he individually may deem may be the outcome of such service.

A similar view was expressed at Columbia yesterday by Professor Munro Smith of the School of Law. He declined to express a view as to the legal problems involved if the child died when an opration would save it.

"To establish a precedent in this case," said Professor Smith, "might be dangerous. It is putting into the power of an individual the right to decide whether or not a man shall live, and this, I think, is giving the individual too much power."

An entirely different view of the matter was taken by sociologists of Columbia University and by Professor Charles A. Beard of the Department of Politics. Professor Franklin H. Giddings, head of the Department of Sociology, dictated his views as follow:

"If the facts are as reported," he said, "the child should be permitted to die. If more such children had been permitted to die, there would be fewer molasses-minded men and women in the community who object to letting such children die."

Professor Samuel McCune Lindsay of the faculty of Political Science, Philosophy, and Pure Science said that he was willing to subscribe to Professor Gidding's statement.

SAYS SURGEON WAS RIGHT.

The Medico-Legal Society of America at its fall meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria passed resolutions indorsing the action of Dr. H. J. Haiselden. The resolution read:

"Resolved, That the Chicago physician is to be commended for his humane action in refusing to perform an operation to prolong the life of an imbecile child."

The society based its action on the ground that the physician was not taking human life, but that his action was merely the result of his decision to withhold professional action in a case where he believes he was aiding society by withholding it. The resolution was introduced by Oscar J. Smith, who said he believed if the child could have an instant of sanity and could not speak it would ask for death rather than a helpless life.

Secretary Clark Bell said there was nothing new in the problem that in his fifty years of practice of law he had known of many cases when physicians exercised their own discretion to the extent of taking a life that did not have a promising beginning.

President T. D. Crothers said that it was an unwritten law that a physician had a right to exercise his own discretion in many cases of birth, and that Dr. Haiselden was to be commended.

Says It's Murder.

Judge Raymond MacNeille of the Philadelphia Juvenile Court said that in his opinion the Chicago physician who decided not to perform an operation that would have saved the life of the defective child was committing murder. So, too, he said, were physicians who administered drugs they knew may kill their patients.

"I am convinced," Judge MacNeille said, "that if such things happened in this State the doctor would be convicted at least of manslaughter. If such physicians were brought before me I would hold them for court without bail and they would have to stand trial for murder.

"If I knew you were about to be run down and killed by an automobile and I did nothing to prevent it, wouldn't I be your murderer? The Chicago case is murder, simply murder. God gives life and He is the only one who may take it. It is out business to preserve life.

"With the rapid advances being made in science, how do we know that what is defective may not be overcome, perhaps, in a very short time? Then, too, you are normal and healthy in this generation, but three generations hence your family may be defective. There hardly is a family that, traced back, will not show defective members. God treats these matters in His own good way and time. It is not our business to interfere with his plan."

IN GREAT DISTRESS FROM ECZEMA

Suffered Over Two Years. Grew Thin and Lost Appetite, Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.

223 George St., Sarnia, Ont.—"I suffered for over two years with eczema which first appeared in small pimples and broke into red, inflamed sores. They were very itching and when my clothing rubbed against them I was in great distress. I lost my rest at night and was much disfigured by the eruption. The eczema was so bad that I grew thin and lost my appetite. My hands, arms, face and various parts of my body were covered with an itching, burning eruption of sores and though I took many common and much recommended remedies they failed to do any good.

"I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after about three weeks I was healed." (Signed) Miss Bertha Allan, May 23, 1914.

The Minister of Agriculture has estimated that 400,000 tons of oil of the former and 100,000 tons of fats will go to waste unless some definite steps are taken to gather them. From the components of the nuts, it has been found, a very acceptable fabric can be prepared.

Lure of the Movies.

Every "movie fan" will readily believe this story.

HEADACHE?

Thousands of persons who have never known a day's sickness in any other form are subject to frequent attacks of Headache that almost drive them mad.

Whatever the nature may be and the cause, the immediate condition that produces the pain is a congestion or filling up of the blood vessels of the brain with blood, thus causing a pressure on the brain cells and nerve filaments.

In treating all forms of Headache the first thing to do is to relieve the congestion of the blood vessels of the brain. Abbey's Effervescent Salt in laxative doses does this promptly.

Sold everywhere at 25c. and 60c.

Full blooded people who are subject to frequent attacks of Headache can be entirely relieved by taking laxative doses of the Salt every morning. Headaches from Indigestion and Biliousness are also entirely banished by continuing the use of the Salt until the normal action of the liver and stomach is restored.

HOW TO CURE RHEUMATISM

The Disease is in the Blood and Must Be Treated Through the Blood

There are almost as many ways of treating rheumatism as there are doctors. Most of these treatments are directed at the symptoms and are considered successful if they relieve the pain and stiffness. But the pain and the stiffness return particularly if the patient has been exposed to dampness. This shows that the poison was not driven from the system by the treatment employed. Rheumatism can be relieved in a number of ways, but there is only one way to cure it, and that is through the blood expelling the poisonous acid that causes the aches and pains and stiffness. To renew and enrich the blood there is no medicine can equal Dr Williams' Pink Pills which go right to the root of the trouble and cure rheumatism to stay cured. The following is an example of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can do in cases of this kind. Mr. Henry Smith, St. Jerome, Que., says: "For upwards of a year I was a victim of rheumatism in a most painful form. The trouble was located in my legs and for a long time was so bad that I could not walk. The suffering which I endured can only be imagined by those who have been similarly afflicted. Doctors treatment did not help me and then I began trying other remedies but with no better results. Finally I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and although I had begun to lose faith in medicine, I finally decided to give the pills a trial. I am very grateful now that I did so, for after taking eight boxes of the pills the trouble completely disappeared, I was free from pain and could walk as well as ever I did in my life. I have since taken the pills occasionally as a precautionary measure and I cannot speak too highly in their favour.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Voice of The People

Editor of The Examiner.

Sir, What good can be accomplished when so many writers are giving their reasons why the Allies will win the great conflict, seeing that is almost the universal opinion of those belonging to the Allied nations? On the contrary will it not have a tendency to do harm, inasmuch as it will cause possible recruits to say, "Well, what is the use of enlisting, we shall win anyway."

Others, again take for a subject to write upon, "Is War very Right?" or to that effect. Any novice can answer that in the negative, but how is it to be avoided when an aggressive nation wantonly overruns the territory of a peace loving nation, carrying destruction in its wake? It is more humane to offer resistance than to submit to the distastes of a despot. Such writers would advance the cause of justice and humanity to a greater degree by donning the khaki and wielding the sword than by wielding the pen upon such subjects.

Another, and still greater mistake, is made by well meaning people in following the foolish custom of giving Christmas presents, at times, far beyond their means, which at all times is folly, but in the present great world's conflict, when our liberties are at stake, it is unpatriotic as well. Anyone who spends money unnecessarily and does not apply it to war purposes is not a true citizen.

Yours truly,
Humanity.

ST. EDMUND, KING AND MARTYR

Is Commemorated This Day—One of the Early English Kings, Who Reigned Upwards of a Thousand Years Ago

Written for the Examiner by Frank Russell

To-day, we commemorate the death of St. Edmund, the martyr, one of the early of the English Kings, who reigned over one of the seven portions of Anglo-land, later England and after its day soon into the Heptarchy, or seven states or provinces, each being a separate kingdom.

History of St. Edmund.

Edmund, who was king of East Anglia—one of those seven provinces of the Heptarchy, and who reigned from A.D. 855–870—succeeded to the East Anglian throne in A.D. 855. He was yet a boy on his accession, being out fifteen years of age.

According to Abbo de Fleury he was of foreign origin, probably belonging to the Old Saxons of the continent of Europe. There is a legend which speaks at some length of his old Saxon parentage, the son of King Alkmund of Saxony his birth place being recorded as Nuremberg, of his nomination as successor to Offa, king of the East Anglia and of his landing at Hunstanton on that part of the Coast of Norfolk, which borders on the gulf known as The Wash. His coronation took place the next year at, what is known as, Bures St. Mary, in the county of Suffolk.

Contemporaneous History

throws little or no light on his 15 years' life as king. But in the year A.D. 870 the Danes, England's then greatest foes, who had been making their winterquarters at York, marched through the province of Mercia, another of the seven provinces, into East Anglia and pitched their camp at Thetford. They were fiercely engaged by Edward, in battle, but under their leaders, Ingwar and Ubba, the foe was victorious, remaining in possession of the field of battle. There is a widely which makes Edmund fall as a martyr to the Danish arrows when he had refused to renounce his Christian faith, or to hold his kingdom as a vassal from over-lords who were heathen.

This story is a very old one, and is probably correct, it having been told to Abbo de Fleury on a reliable authority who had heard of the Kings' tragic ending from the lips of Edmund's own standard bearer.

Another Account of King Edmund's Martyrdom

A raid by these Danes into the land of East Anglia is notable for the gruesome martyrdom of King Edmund in A.D. 870. St. Edmund, as he came to be at a later period, refused to divide his treasure with the Danish chieftain, or to renounce his religion or to become a vassal. Forthwith, he was tied to a tree, scourged, then shot through with arrows and afterwards beheaded.

Great misfortunes seemed to follow the path of these pillaging, marauding freebooters. The Anglo-Saxon Chronicle, records with simple pathetic eloquence:— "The ravaging of the heathen men lamentably destroyed God's Church at Lindisfarne through rapine and slaughter.

This year dire forewarnings came over the land of the North Cumbrians and miserably terrified the people; there were excessive whirlwinds and lightnings, and fiery dragons were flying through the air. A great famine soon followed these tokens."

The Last East Anglian King.

St. Edmund was the last king of the Angles, as the English were then termed, at least so far as his own kingdom was concerned, for the country became over-run by the Danes, who held sway on and off for nearly two hundred years until the Norman conquest in A.D. 1066.

The Cult of St. Edmund.

Ultimately King Edmund's body was interred in the East Anglian town now known as Bury-St.-Edmunds. His shrine became one of the most popular in England, and the saint's reputation was famed all over the continent of Europe. The date of his canonization is not recorded, but all over England are to be found churches dedicated to his memory.

The Vikings.

The Northmen or Danes as they well called by the Anglo-Saxons, are often known as the "Vikings." They dwelt in the peninsulas of Denmark, Norway and Sweden, and in many respects resembled the north German tribes, who had harassed the shores of Britain from the third to the fifth centuries. They were heathens, sea rovers and pirates and passed their time mainly in fighting and plundering. Organized in small bands under petty chiefs, their headquarters were in the innumerable fiords and inlets which indent the Scandanavian coats.

Their Navy.

In small open boats, high at the bow and stern, usually propelled by oars—fifteen on each side, some of the larger ones capable of carrying a hundred men—sometimes bearing a single mast and a square sail to assist the oarsmen, they followed two routes; one by way of the north of Scotland to Ireland and thence to the extreme south of England; the other by way of the coasts of what is known as Holland, and Flanders. These latter also spread out to the East coast of Britain as well as to France and Spain. At first they conducted merely disconnected plundering expeditions, then they made settlements, and finally, kingdoms. They penetrated England, and even took London.

Personal Characteristics of the Northmen.

Very striking in their appearance were these old Germans, with their stern-blue eyes, their ruddy hair, and their huge bodies, capable of great exertions in war or hunting, but "impatient of toil or labour." In the intervals of war they passed their time in hunting, feasting, or in "sluggish repose," leaving all work to the women or the bondmen. Their excesses in eating and drinking were enormous. As a matter of fact their orgies were prolonged for days, and they were not ashamed; deadly quarrels were frequent and their passion for gambling was intense.

The Prussians of To-day.

Such were the ancient Germans, and very similar to them are the Prussians of the present day; pirates, murderers of women and children, slayers of old men and infants, ravishers of womankind—animals unworthy the name of man, yet covered with the thinnest possible veneer of, what they coolly call, "Kultur." Even amongst the Germans of old were those of an hereditary nobility claiming descents from the gods. How history repeats itself when a certain monomaniac ruler claims to be in partnership with the Almighty —"Ich und Gott."!

Has Been Doing Good Work Among The Soldiers

Rev. Thomas Joplin of the Shanty men's Christian Association, who is in the city for a few days, has not been able, on account of a sore foot, to make as many assists as he would like. He hopes to do so early in the week. Mr. Joplin informed the Examiner that the Association has been doing special work for the soldiers in England and France, but this will have to be given up unless funds are provided. This is one of the things that the country needs all the time—the preaching of the Gospel of good news to all men. Mr. Joplin appeals to all Christians to help him. His address is 176 Brock Street.

Standard of Efficiency in British Fleet Higher Than Ever

The standard of efficiency of the British naval officer has ever been high, but it is almost a truism to declare after fifteen months of eminently successful warfare that the standard of to-day is higher than that of the past.

Nothing really more striking is to be met with on the deck of the modern battleship than its youthful officers, from the captain downwards. The lieutenants are themselves products of the new system of training which was inaugurated at Osborne and Dartmouth Naval Colleges, and most completely do they vindicate all the highest claims of the founders of that system. Self-reliance, initiative, the power to command men, the chief attributes of the young naval officers are inculcated at the preparatory school age, later is imparted the highest level of training in the technique of his profession. At maturity, with the service he has seen at sea as a midshipman, the young officer stands forth as the man the navy needed and has made, the old head upon young shoulders, combining the responsibility of a leader of men with the dash and vitality of his years. There is something grim in the tense set of the jaws and features of these young men. Many were in the actions of the Falkland Islands and the Dogger Bank. They have seen the relentless spectre of death stalking the vanquished in modern naval warfare. Yet they long for more. They scent the exhilaration of battle from afar and bite their lips with disappointment that there are no foes to meet in their own waters.

ESTATE OF LATE SENATOR COX

Estate of the Late E. W. Cox Was Advanced from $499,929.72 to $1,596,223.

TORONTO, Nov. 20—Mr. Justice Middleton at Osgoode Hall concluded his examination on behalf of the Provincial Treasury into the estate of the late Senator Cox, and of his son, E. W. Cox. As a result of the enquiry, and the declaration that certain things thought not to be dutiable have been declared dutiable, the estate has been advanced from the stated value in the neighbourhood of $870,000 to the sum of $1,836,847 18.

The estate of the late E. W. Cox, probated at $499,929.72, has been advanced to $1,596,223.

Mr. Justice Middleton stated that his duty was now to report to the Government in accordance with the figures placed in his hands. He congratulated the counsel representing the estate on the facilities given to the Government to prosecute the enquiry.

Jas. Bain, K.C., represented the Government, and E. T. Malone, K.C., and Leighton McCarthy, K.C., the estate.

NOVEL CHRISTMAS CLUB OPENS TO EXAMINER READERS ON MONDAY

Club of 50 to Secure Victrolas with Unusual Privileges---Membership only $1

AN Innovation that Emanates from The Cressman Victrola Parlor

On Monday morning a unique Christmas Club will be opened to Examiner readers, based on the power of co-operative buying.

It is a Victrola Club with a limited membership of 50, the members of which will enjoy attractive privileges and advantages not possible at any other time or to anyone but a member.

When a large number of people buy the same thing, at the same time, from the same source, they profit by co-operation. So it is with this Club. This Club is an actual form of co-operative buying, through which attractive privileges and advantages are made possible in the purchase of the world famous Victrolas. Any responsible person may apply for membership, the membership fee being $1.00, but this fee is refunded to you if you do not buy, or if your application is rejected, and is credited to your account if you do buy.

Anyone paying the $1.00 fee, and joining the Club, has the privilege of selecting his instrument before December 11th, 1915. After making his selection he commences the small Club payments, and the Victrola is delivered to him a few days before Christmas.

Members do not have to make a cash payment, excepting the membership fee; they have the complete variety of Victrolas carried by The Cressman Co. Limited, to choose from.

Members secure their Victrolas at the cash price, but with time payment privileges. The payments are arranged from $1.00 to $3.00 weekly, and the amount members pay weekly depends upon the Victrola which they select. These terms are, in most cases, lower than the regular terms. The Club member does not have to pay the usual interest charged for time payments.

If a Club member is taken sick or is temporarily unemployed, the privilege of half payments is granted for as many months as he has previously paid in full. If at any time within ten days after the Victrola is delivered a member becomes dissatisfied with it he can return it and get back every cent he has paid, less carriage charges or necessary repair costs.

Every instrument is guaranteed to give entire satisfaction, but if at any time within three months a member desires a better Victrola he can exchange his for any new Victrola or other make of greater value Records are usually sold for cash, but the Club members get six, for which they pay in the regular Club payments.

All anyone has to do is to join this Club is to phone or call at the "Christmas Club" Headquarters, and they will supply you with membership blank and illustrated catalogue. By signing the membership blank and returning it to them with the Club membership fee of $1.00, you will be entitled to all the Club privileges, provided you select your instrument before December 11th.

Although you may possibly have until December 11th to join the Club, the Club will be closed immediately 50 members enroll, so the wisest plan is to call early in the week and get full particulars and membership blank for the Club.

STANDARD EFFICIENCY TESTS AN UNIQUE SCHEME TO HELP BOYS DEVELOP THEIR CHARACTER

Practical Plan Outlined by Mr. Taylor Statten at Opening Session of Boys' Work Conference—Designed to Create Complete Development Under Intellectual, Religious, Physical and Service Standards.

The object of the Boys' Work Conference is the practical consideration of all that pertains to the complete and ideal development of boys. In that respect it may be termed the most important convention that has been held in Peterborough in a long time. There have been conventions of doctors, teachers and ministers, some of whose aims, to a certain extent, coincided with the purposes of the conference in session over the present week end. But regarded from the standpoint of its direct objective and its potential results, this conference is in a class by itself, for it is concerned with the problem of developing boyhood into virile and Christian manhood. It aims to hold before youth the mirror of the future, its opportunities, its obligations and its responsibilities with particular emphasis upon the latter.

The programme of the conference embraces discussions of the four essential and closely associated branches of development, mental or intellectual, physical, religious, and social. And to such an extent have past conferences been successful that a detailed standard has been evolved, known as the Canadian Standard efficiency tests for boys, which, in short, provides a practical grading of character. The idea may appear vague to the uninitiated, but it has been reduced to a basis of effective simplicity.

The "Teen" Age.

At last night's opening session of the conference in the Murray Street Baptist Church, after the usual incidental preliminaries, Mr. Taylor Statten, Boys' Work Secretary of the National Council of the Y.M.C.A., discussed minutely the application of the efficiency tests in his address on "The All-Canadian Programme of Work for Boys." Mr. Statten first explained that the tests are applied to the "teen" age of youth, the years from 13 or 14, to 18 or 19, the impressionable and formative period of a boy's life. Investigations have positively shown this to be the critical period in character building. It had been found that in those years men had decided for Christ and had gone on and up to a broader and nobler life, while others had made their first missteps, and gone down and down, and sometimes out. It is the time when life habits are formed that will bind and become a drag on a man as they become imbedded in his nervous system or strengthen and guide him to his highest expression in the opposite direction. It is also the time of the development of the altruistic spirit when there flashes the first spark of a desire to help the other fellow. There is a longing to be of service to others without prospect of reward. If a boy is not trained at this stage, when the pinch comes he will show selfishness. This spark is too often starved because the Church or the folks at home did not present the opportunity for its expression. If it is fanned and fed it is the most natural thing in the world that the boy will develop into a noble hearted, generous, philanthropic man, ready and eager to help his fellow men.

Best Influences Must be Effective.

Mr. Statten pointed out that the best influences which should impress a boy between fourteen and eighteen are the home, the school, and the Church. But many of them drift out of school and Sunday School at fourteen and outside influences weaken those of home. These influences are not functioning with at least fifty per cent of boy life.

"We believe in the home, the school and the Church," Mr. Statten said, "but we want to know how they can be brought back to a place of influence in the life of the boy."

Mr. Statten bespeaks an intimate knowledge of boys and their psychology. He dealt with the "gang" tendency and how it should be directed into right channels; also the age of hero worship and its opportunity for wise leadership by boys such as those attending the conference.

Applying the Test.

Most interesting was his explanation of the application of the Standard Efficiency Tests. As already pointed out, they cover a four-fold development, giving the "four-square" or fully developed man, the ideal of whom is found in Jesus Christ, who according to St. Luke 2.52, "Increased in wisdom, and in stature, and in favour with God and man." Mr. Statten outlined the four standards, viz., the intellectual standard, physical standard, religious and service standard. Each standard embraces a distinct program of work with a total of 1,000 credit points. Considering the service standard for example, the programme is as follows:

Member Boys' organizations	100
Ability to entertain	50
Training for service	200
Personal service	140
Good citizenship	130
Clean speech, etc.	100
Choosing life work	140
Heroes of Service	140
Total credits obtainable	1,000

Or the Intellectual Standard.

School or college	400
Sex education	120
Public speaking	120
Home reading	70
Educational lectures	50
Educational trips	70
Craftsmanship	100
Collections	70
Total	1,000

Religious Standard.

Church and Sunday School	400
Mid-week Bible discussion	200
Morning watch	150
History of religion	50
Music	50
Poetry	50
Art	50
Nature	50
Total	1,000

Physical Standard.

And to complete the chart the physical standard has the following programme:

Health education	200
Camp craft	150
Team games	170
Group games	50
Swimming	130
Running	100
Jumping	100
Throwing	100
Total	1,000

An Incentive to Boys.

The Efficiency Tests are applied to boys in the "teen" age. Thus the mentor endeavors by examining a boy to get his standing in each standard. A boy may register low credits in the intellectual group, but may have a good standing in the physical group, and so on. The mentor finally secures the boy's registration, as it were, according to this test. Thus, the boy may be lead to balance up his life according to this standard. Groups of boys may take up the idea, and by filling the records and taking new ones from time to time, the boys' development may be closely followed and an ambition to develop into a "four-square" man implanted in him.

Mr. Statten stated that the Protestant Churches of Canada, the Young Men's Christian Associations and the Sunday Schools have now a unified programme of boys' work and are all together on a solid front in this "All Canadian Programme of work for Boys."

Rev. Father Kehoe of the Carmelite Friars, professor in St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto, will preach at all masses and also at Pontifical Vespers.

Trades and Labour Notes

Peterborough's Trades and Labour Council held its usual bi-monthly session this week. President J. J. Hartley occupied the chair.

David Moore Resigns

Representative David Moore, of Peterborough Typographical Union, sent a letter resigning his seat in the Council as he was about to leave the city. Mr. Moore has occupied the presidential chair with distinction. The resignation was received with regret.

Mr. T. F. Matthews Explains.

A letter from the chairman of the Utilities Commission gave notice that the complaint raised about the delay in payments to its employees would be examined and the fault, if possible, removed. Mr. Fiske and Mr. Anderson would look into their respective departments, and although delays were occasionally unavoidable, Mr. Matthews was nevertheless thankful the facts had been brought to his attention.

Our Disabled Heroes.

What are we going to do with the gallant lads who were ready to die for their country, and have returned more or less "chipped?" Mr. Marks, of the Trades Industrial Association, has tackled this question and offers employment to disabled warriors in the manufacture of toys. Samples are expected next week, and a local committee is going to deal with them. Now here's a chance for a double-cross, good people, ask for these toys, which will please the kiddies, also help our brave crippled lads who find that to live they must augment their pension.

Private Phipps Again in Place.

The welcome to Representative Phipps of the Textile Workers was the feature of the evening. To personal enquirers as to his welfare he had a lot to say: eight wounds to describe and two days and nights in the open, lying in an almost incredible position so near the German trenches. Still, like most heroes, he is of few words, for when called on by President Hartley to address the Council, he was brief: "I am glad to have done my bit, glad to be back again." We stay-at-homes hear a lot of the nerve-destroying effects of modern gunfire, and yet Mr. Phipps does not substantiate this by his manner. He relates his experiences with as much complacency as a young lover describing a Sunday evening supper with his best girl.

Here's a Good One.

Private Phipps was asked what he thought of the good souls who would cut out the rum served to our gallant defenders by practical Earl Kitchener. The reply was that when a man was forced to stand waist deep in water for he never knew how long, what sane person would deny him a few drops of rum to warm his vitals, especially when the punk trees around which these brilliant ideas formulate are held so very far away. Again the sickening sights, almost unfit for publication even during this Christian era, would cause many temperate souls used to snug parlours, to sigh for something stronger than tea as a revitalizer.

Well Done, Labourers.

Delegates from the Hod Carriers and General Labourers' Union reported that out of a membership of 80 they had 45 members on the job decoding the winners in the great war. Their charter was draped on Wednesday in memory of the late Wm. Tryon.

WILL NOT HAVE A NEGRO REGIMENT

But Coloured Men Are Welcome in the Other Battalions.

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—"Most assuredly coloured men are eligible for the Canadian army," said Gen. Hughes. "We have scores of them in regiments throughout the Dominion. In Toronto there are a great many, and one of the best sergeants we have there is a coloured man. But you may say the Minister of Militia will not yield to the fad to give the coloured men a regiment to their own any more than he will consent to the formation of a regiment of one-eyed men, yellow-moustached men, or red-headed men."

DON'T SCOLD, MOTHER! THE CROSS CHILD IS BILIOUS, FEVERISH

Look at Tongue! If Coated, Clean Little Stomach, Liver, Bowels

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish full of cold, bad breath, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomachache, indigestion, diarrhoea give a tablespoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

were everywhere, and we had the great pleasure of seeing a German 'plane brought down by one of ours. We were all by with our morning's ablutions, when some one shouted "Here's a Taube," and everyone beat it to see what would happen. He was heavily shelled by our anti-air craft guns. They fired about 100 shells, but failed to bring him down. Then a British plane appeared, and Mr. Hun started for his own lines, but it was no go. Our 'plane succeeded in gaining the higher position, and then, after hovering for a time directly over the German, he swooped down till he appeared to rest right upon him. Then there floated down to us the ripple of machine guns, and shortly the Hun started sliding down toward terra firma, while the British 'plane circled above him. However, the German regained control of his machine, and began vol planing toward his own lines, at a long angle. They say he would have succeeded in this, had not our infantry fired upon him, as he neared the earth. A dispatch rider told us he had fallen into a tree, but later we heard he came to earth in "no man's land."

Have Good Meals.

You should see our cook house and stove. It sure is some kitchen. We got a grate from the ruins of a near by village and with this, some bricks, mud, tin cans, etc., we constructed our kitchen range. We can make anything from toast, to puddings; we have roasts, with mushrooms on the side. Mushrooms were an every-day dish with us while they lasted; they are getting scarce now that the weather is cooler. We also enjoyed great feeds of blackberries while the warm weather lasted. We stewed them nearly every day—the natives here will not eat them at all, although every hedgerow is full of them; nor will they drink buttermilk, nor eat green corn. Received the box you sent for my birthday O.K., and every thing was fine. The boys say you can repeat the macaroons, and fudge, any time you like—the beechnuts, tobacco etc. were all A 1. That Horlick's Milk did go fine in the twelve (midnight) to 4 a.m. guard. Perce and I are together, so we enjoy all of it; also the Oxo. The box containing the "turf crown" has not come to hand yet. Yes, all English money goes at par over here. We get English, Belgian, French, Italian, Helvetian, and even Indian coins.

Glad to hear that Crosier has been exchanged, and is now safely out of Germany. Hope Charlie Ackerman is out of hospital by this time. Have you heard anything from Jim Applegate lately? If any of the boys around town are not in khaki yet, tell them to get in line—don't see how they can stick around in "civies."

Jerry and Gray are in the best of health and spirits and wish to be remembered to you.

With love to all. Your loving son,

ALAN.

ARE SOCKS FOR SOLDIERS IN THE TRENCHES, OR FOR HOSPITAL PATIENTS ONLY?

Editor, Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I wish you would advise me through the columns of your valuable paper if the knitted articles, socks particularly, given to the Red Cross Society here, are for the boys in the trenches or for hospital use only. There appears to be some misunderstanding about this; and, as I particularly want those I knit to go to the trenches, if the Red Cross is not the proper channel for them to go through, please advise me with whom to communicate. And also please tell me if Christmas parcels are sent free of cost for carriage, through the Red Cross, as I understand other parcels are sent.

Yours truly,

A KNITTER.

Note.—Inquiry from an official of the local branch of the Red Cross brings the information that socks and other knitted articles turned in to the Red Cross Society here are for the soldiers in hospital only. No Christmas parcels are sent by the Red Cross.

We Cannot Be Better Than Our Foods.

If our foods are trash, and rich, refined foods always are, our bodies must be trash. The amount of human sickness proves the trashy nature of our foods. Our greatest error is that we eat for our eye and palate and not with common sense. Our digestive anatomy makes it absolutely necessary that we have coarse grain foods unrefined. Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is a wholegrain food, with tasteless flax meal and bran. It nourishes better than meat, prevents indigestion, and positively relieves constipation or money refunded. Ask your doctor. Do not stir Roman Meal porridge. All grocers' 10 and 25 cents.

"The Organized Boys' Class"

Instructive Address by Mr. Taylor Statten at This Morning's Session of the Boys' Work Conference

This morning's session of the Boys' Work Conference was held in St. Paul's church. Wm Caldwell of Ottawa, who was elected president of the conference, presided, with Mr. Frank Yeigh of Toronto, director. Mr. Paterson of Montreal lead the devotional message at the opening.

Rev. S. D. Dinnick, secretary of the Canadian Pocket Testament League, said in regard to the claims of the Pocket Testament movement that the slogan was the reading of the Testament as regularly as the daily papers. One of its principal aims was to bring decision for Christ. If we would win in race of life we must eliminate everything that tends to lessen the richness of the blood of life. There is the boy who has held on to his job who has made good. Why? Because his inspirational activity springs from the word of God. Urging the necessity of a pledge for this movement, Rev. Mr. Dinnick remarked that pledges were behind every activity in life. To organize the Pocket League all that is needed is the appointment of a local secretary back home and the sending of his name to the Toronto office. Rolls, sheets, etc., will be forwarded from League headquarters. As a diary reminder for clean living, clean language, the pocket testament has a great influence even an objective influence, by its mere presence as a reminder.

Organizing a Boys Class.

Mr Taylor Statten in his address on "The Organized Boys' Class" provided further inspirational food for the boys. With a blackboard design of an oval picture frame he asked the boys to form a mental picture of themselves five years hence, in their early twenties, in order that by a vision of themselves that period they would be more susceptible to the helpful spirit of the conference. With blackboard illustrations, Mr. Statten represented an embryonic Sunday school, and prepared to consider the steps for its organization. He first separated the girls from the boys and paid special attention to the latter. Mr. Statten for the most part conducted a discussion, drawing a host of ideas from the boys present. It was brought out that boys in the "teen" age naturally break up into groups. This natural tendency was under-scored as an asset in the training of the boys in Mr. Statten's supposed class. The preferable and generally natural limit of a gang's number is about ten. One gang thus forming itself, should select a president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer and teacher. The boys should go after the teacher they want.

Mr. Frank Yeigh M.A., of Toronto, related an episodic story in this connection. A boy's group in St. Thomas wanted a certain business man for their leader, but he refused to act. However, they went up to his home one night and remained there until he gave his consent. Mr. Yeigh advised the boys that in future organization work they should consult and work through the Sunday school superintendent. Another important step is the inception of the efficiency tests in the group and the appointment of a committee to handle each of the four standards. The selection of a man who would have the duty of supervising the efficiency tests programmes. In conclusion, Mr. Statten observed that the Sunday school would naturally divide into a number of "gangs," each of which should be guided along the above general lines.

FLEISCHMAN CONCERT WAS A GREAT SUCCESS

The recital by Max Fleischman, the wonderful young Russian violinist, at the Conservatory of Music, was a most thorough artistic success, the playing of the talented visitor proving a revelation to the audience. All his numbers were given with a masterly skill that delighted his hearers, and he was most generous in his encores, playing half a dozen extra numbers, each of them equally good. The artist was assisted by Mrs. Corrigal, a most talented reader, and by the Conservatory Children's Orchestra, the whole making a most enjoyable programme. The numbers were as follows:

Sacred Selection—Conservatory Children's Orchestra.

Violin selection—"Fauste Fantasie" ..... Alard
Max Fleischman

Reading—"Billy Smith and the World's Greatest" ..... Kenyon
Mrs. Corrigal

Orchestra—"Andante" ..... Himmel

Violin—(a) "Chanson Polonaise" ..... Wieniawski

(b) Traumerei ..... Schumann

Orchestra—"March of the Brownies" ..... Sutton

Reading—"Among the Hills," Whittier

Violin—"Legende" ..... Wieniawski

Orchestra—March, "Old Glory" ..... Weber

Miss Dean, accompanist.

President Wilson took a leaf from Colonel Roosevelt's peace propaganda on Monday, when in a letter to Seth Low, ex Mayor of New York, he quoted Scriptures in support of his plans for preparedness.

Formerly Resided in Peterborough

Former Ledger-keeper of the Dominion Bank Here is Dead From Wounds

The casualty list contains the name of George Johnston, who is officially reported dead as a result of wounds. Deceased was a member of the 42nd Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force. His home is in Scotland.

The late George Johnston was well known in Peterborough, where he resided for upwards of a year. He was ledger keeper in the Dominion Bank up until the first of the year.

CONFERENCE NOTES

The officers of the Conference elected last night were:

President—Wm Caldwell, Ottawa.

Secretary — Walter Stewart, Kingston.

Capt Forgie of the 3rd Brigade, 1st Canadian contingent, has been warmly received by the delegates. He was at the front and in the firing line about a year as Y.M.C.A. representative. Previously he was Boys' Work Secretary for Ontario and Quebec.

Mr. A. E. Roberts, of New York will attend the Ohio State Conference on Friday of next week.

Mr. Sam Lilley, Boys' Work Secretary, Kingston, is doing and generally "mothering" the Kingston deputation. He is the leader of a club or "gang" of forty boys in Kingston.

The visitors are earnest, serious, ambitious boys, but they are not of the mollycoddle species.

The Harboard Collegiate, Toronto, rugby team came down at midnight and are playing the local Collegiate this afternoon.

Mr. A. E. Roberts is probably the foremost boys' worker on the continent. He has that natural kindly smile you read about.

Ed. D. Otter is the busy programme secretary and apparently overlooked nothing.

Don't blame us, boys, for the weather.

Mr. Adams of the Harbord Collegiate staff, who was on the Peterborough Collegiate staff several years ago, was the guest of Mr. C. E. Sisson at lunch to-day.

Harold Ettinger of Kingston, who presided at Belleville last year, was on the Nominating committee last night.

The senior leaders lunched at noon to-day at the Oriental Hotel. The High school boys dined at Coleman's grill.

The Billeting committee desires to thank the people of the city for their generous hospitality extended to the boys visiting our city. In billeting a large number of boys some mistakes are liable to occur and for any of these the committee is very sorry. Some boys did not come to claim the billets provided so that there may still be further billeting to do. We are sorry indeed that some people who so kindly extended this hospitality would be disappointed last evening in not receiving any boys. An effort was made to inform all such persons that their homes would not probably be needed, but it was found impossible to reach all of them at a reasonable hour. We sincerely hope that our inability to do so did not put any family to serious inconvenience.—Com.

THE NEED OF DAILY PRAYER

This afternoon's session of the Boys' Work Conference dealt with the practical preparation for and application of the efficiency tests. W. J. Lamb of Bloor Street Presbyterian Church, Toronto, told in a practical address how a group of from fifteen to twenyt-five fellows made use of the Mid-Week programme of activities. He advocated a full use of this mid-week programme and pointed out that it offered the time and the ideal conditions for preparing the teen-age boys for the efficiency tests. If they are to be successful there must be instruction in the four departments. How is a boy to learn public speaking, good citizenship, the history of religion, personal service, etc., if there is no sufficient time allotted. And this is obtained by the mid-week programme. Mr. Lamb stated that the best men of the city will co-operate will address the boys if they are shown the possibilities for good effective results. He urged the adoption of the mid-week programme and named other specific instances of the work accomplished by groups, especially one class in Calgary. In short, his address was an enlargement of Mr. Statten's speech last night, and indicated how the details of the work could be handled.

Mr. Paterson's opening appeal this afternoon was a beautiful effort. He dealt with the power of prayer. "The greatest thing you can do for your country to-day is to pray," said Mr. Paterson, "and I don't minimize the service any may render by donning the khaki. We need to pray to-day more than we ever did, and to pray for our Empire." Mr. Paterson said of every problem and difficulty that prayer could solve it. His subject was the morning watch, the day after day first moments spent in prayer with God and time with His word. The tendency of the world is pull man away from Christ. The morning watch tends to keep you in close contact with God and forms an insulator against the influences and temptations of the world.

BREACH OF THE TRAFFIC BY-LAW

Cost One Man Five Dollars and Another Man Ten—The Latter Pleaded Not Guilty

Michael Murphy will sojourn in the Ontario Reformatory for the next six months. He appeared before Police Magistrate Dumble this morning on a charge of vagrancy.

Breach of Traffic By-law.

A couple of local men were charged with a breach of the traffiv by-law. One pleaded guilty and was fined $5. The other entered a plea of not guilty and was fined ten dollars. Constable Lawrence gave evidence to the effect that the two men exceeded the speed limit on George Street, between Elmburgh and Dublin Streets. He claimed they covered the length of a block in about ten seconds and for a part of the time they were racing, side by side.

"When you drive a machine that runs over people and flattens them out you have got to exercise caution," remarked Magistrate Dumble.

Exports of war materials alone from the United States now average more than $1,000,000 a day.

"BILLY" SUNDAY.

Special trains are going both by C.P.R. and G.T.R. with those from this city and district who are attending the opening of the new Temperance campaign in Toronto, on Monday in the arena. Meetings to be addressed by "Billy" Sunday, the baseball evangelist. These meetings which are attracting the present attention of the entire province, have been arranged by the Committee of One Hundred, whose aim is make Ontario dry by Dominion Day, 1916. The new movement is interpolitical and inter-denominational. It has already succeeded during its brief existence of allying the temperance people of all complexions, thousands of whom will be brought together on Monday to fire the first big gun in the new campaign. Billy Sunday will preach two of his famous sermons against the liquor traffic. At the 3 p.m. meeting his subject will be "The Trail of the Serpent" and in the evening "Climbing on the Water Waggon."

Woman Will Appear Before The Magistrate

Wife of Man Who Died In County Gaol May Be Released

ILL TREATMENT ALLEGED

The remains of Alexander Oliver, whose death occurred in the County Gaol following his arrest, are as yet unclaimed. Unless they are claimed before Monday, the Salvation Army will in all probability see that deceased is given a decent burial. This will offset the possibility of the remains being sent to the medical school. Mrs. Alice Oliver, wife of the deceased, who is also confined in the County Gaol, will appear before County Police Magistrate Langley at nine o'clock on Monday morning in answer to a charge of vagrancy. Adjutant McElhiney is making an effort to have her released. If this is done she may be placed in the Home. The couple were arrested in North Monaghan on Thursday evening, it being alleged that they had no visible means of support. Next morning the husband was found dead in his cell. Some severe criticism is directed at the officials for the manner in which the couple were handled. It is claimed that the woman was not given a chance to procure sufficient clothing in which to make the automobile trip to the city, and that the deceased was roughly handled following an attempt to resist arrest.

Disclaims Relationship.

The police are endeavouring to locate a number of relatives, but so far have failed. Mrs. Oliver directed their attention to an Oliver who resides on Yonge street, Toronto, and who she claimed was a nephew. Chief Thompson received a telegram from Chief Grassett, of Toronto this morning in which the said Oliver disclaims all relationship. An attempt will be made to locate a brother, who is said to reside in or around Orillia.

One citizen in particular has taken steps to supply the woman with warm clothing and such other necessities as the case might require.

TO TRIFLE WITH CATARRH IS TO RISK CONSUMPTION

Usually it comes with a cold. Being slight it is neglected—but the seed is sown for a dangerous harvest, perhaps consumption. To cure at once, inhale Catarrhozone. It destroys the germs of catarrh, clears away mucous, cleanses the passage of the nose and throat. The hacking cough and sneezing cold soon disappear, and health is yours again. Nothing known for colds, catarrh and throat trouble, that is so curative as Catarrhozone. It cures by a new method that never yet failed. The one dollar outfit includes the inhaler and is guaranteed to cure. Smaller sizes 25c and 50c, sold everywhere.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

Propose Point System Instead Of Counting Goals In Hockey

Some startling changes may be made in the scoring of games in the National Hockey Association this winter, if the plans which have been drawn up by one of the magnates is accepted at the next meeting of the league.

League officials and club owners have for years past been endeavouring to fall upon a penalty system which the players will not be able to beat and one which will remove some of the roughness from the game.

In the old days when the only penalty was a period in the timers box it was not unusual for a manager to send a poor player out to "get" the star of an opposing team, and allow him to be ruled off and then spring a good man in to replace him. Then times were introduced and individual players fined for roughness, but in many cases fines have been paid by the clubs and now it is found that there is the same objection to this as to the original penalty system.

New Penalty System.

What is proposed now is a penalty system something along the lines of the polo system and for every foul committed a reduction would be made from the score. This would mean that the game would be scored on points instead of goals, every goal counting to one or two points, as it is found to work out best.

For each foul committed, a quarter of a point, a half, or a point would be deducted from the total points and the office of penalty timer would be turned into that of a scorer and there would be no such thing as being ruled off for roughness.

Not Taking Chances.

Close games are, as a rule, the roughest and it is argued in support of the above scheme that a player would not be likely to take the chance of losing a point already gained for the sake of evening up an old score with an opponent, whereas he might welcome the opportunity of a few minutes in the penalty box which would serve the double purpose of settling an old grudge and giving him a chance to get his wind. He would also figure that his team mates could play on the defensive while he was resting up.

It has been pointed out that one of the chief draw backs to this scheme would be the difficulty in keeping the public informed regarding penalties and what was taking place on the ice but the supporters of the new method maintain that with a more elaborate score board the public could be very easily taken care of.

Failed to Give Sufficient Evidence

At a meeting of the North Monaghan Township Council at the Court House, Wednesday, Andrew Hogg asked that the culvert on the 9th concession, east of the quarter line, be filled in to stop the overflow of water on his property. On motion of Messrs. Forster and Rye, the Commissioner of Road Division 5 will be instructed to fill in the culvert.

As Dan Mahoney and Robt. Byers, who had a disagreement over a matter regarding the gravel pits and an account for hauling gravel, failed to give sufficient evidence, action was postponed by the Council till Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mahoney claimed that Byers drew gravel from a township pit and sold it.

Tax Collector

By-law No. 716 which provides for a grant to the Red Cross Society, received its first reading on motion of Messrs. Forster and Rye and was passed. The levying of one mill on the dollar on all rateable property in the township is authorized by the by-law, and the Reeve and Treasurer will borrow $900, at 6 per cent., this amount being approximately one mill and transmit same to the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario.

A communication regarding the forthcoming campaign for the patriotic Fund was received from the City Committee.

On motion of Messrs. Rye and Bell County Constable Archie Moore was authorized to take charge of Alex Oliver at the Kincaid farm.

toon Sergeant and it is hoped to have the platoon up to strength in a short time.

The name of Trevor Cuffe was inadvertently omitted from the list of St. John's "Old Boys" members of the choir now on active service, given in yesterday's issue.

Sergt.-Major Sucee of the headquarters staff of the 3rd Division, is home for the week-end. Sergt.-Major Sucee has put in a busy summer at Barriefield Camp.

An important order-in-council is announced, by which authority is given for recruits of the C.E.F. to be attested by an officer appointed to command a battalion or other similar unit of the force, provided that he at the time holds a rank not lower than that of field officer. This is an important announcement, inasmuch as it provides an alternative to the former method, whereby only justices of the peace could swear in men for overseas service. It is expected that the order will greatly facilitate attestation work and simplify the task of those who are engaged in raising men for the battalions recently authorized. On the question of military etiquette in courts of justice, the latest camp orders state: "In a civil court an officer or soldier will remove his headdress while the judge or magistrate is present, except when the officer or soldier is on duty under arms with a party or escort inside the court." This official statement settles once and for all the controversy on this subject.

The orders also contain the following: "Officers commanding units will facilitate the transferring of any men in their unit who were born in the United States and who desire to transfer to the 97th Overseas Battalion. Applications for transfer to be forwarded to the A.A.G., 2nd Division."

Cobourg Sentinel-Star: On Tuesday officers from the headquarters staff of the 93rd Battalion at Peterborough, of which Cobourg is to form "D" Company, paid an official visit here. They state that the original order as to recruiting and billeting men now stands. Peterborough is to recruit two companies, Lindsay and Cobourg one each, and that each town will keep until spring the men that are recruited by each place, and that no soldiers will be sent in. The report that men would be sent in they state, was never in orders, so the men first will be kept here will have to be recruited, and when a sufficient number of recruits are obtained they will be accommodated in the Armouries here.

As a result of their visit here a recruiting committee was formed, with J. K. Fraser as secretary, and steps are being taken to start an active and effective recruiting campaign in this county. Lt.-Col. Johnston, officer commanding the 93rd Battalion, will as times have the fine battalion band of thirty-seven pieces, sent in here as an aid to recruiting. A number of recruiting meetings are being planned, for which good speakers will be obtained.

In answer to a query to the Adjutant General's department at Ottawa Mrs. John Butcher, 301 Burnham Street, has received a reply that no word has reached there of the serious wounding of Pte. G. R. Butcher, 1st C.M.R.

Was Alexander Oliver's Death Accelerated By Ill-treatment?

Sir,—Like many of your readers I was shocked at reading of the death of an old man named Alexander Oliver in the county jail, while under remand on a charge of vagrancy.

From the reports of the evidence at the inquest given by both the evening newspapers it would appear that the most that could be charged against the old man and his wife was that terrible charge of being "very old and very poor," and that in spite of the best efforts that the old man made to support himself and his old wife that it was necessary to ask assistance from time to time from kind hearted neighbours.

Thursday afternoon the old man was living, Friday morning he is dead. In the meantime what had happened? His wife tells me that Thursday afternoon the constables came to her poor little home and compelled her to get into an automobile, and then drove to Mr. Andrew Hogg's where her husband was engaged chopping wood and there attempted to place the old man under arrest. The constables claim that the old man objected and raised an axe to enforce his objections, but the wife claims that the old man protested he had committed no crime or used no violence. In any event his wife claims that the old man was tied with ropes like some wild animal and driven through the streets of Peterborough to the County Magistrate's office, and thus was the majesty of the law vindicated.

Then the starved, exhausted old man is remanded to the jail, and there after this terrible experience for both of them his wife is shut in one corridor and he in another—given "bread and water" as one paper puts it, or "bread and tea" as reported by the other paper—nourishing and sustaining food for a starving man was it not? For any aged man, exhausted with the struggle, cold with exposure in the open automobile, excited over his arrest, possibly injured in the struggle as well, and starving in addition, what sort of food was it?

We are not surprised to learn that "some time" before morning he died in his cell—what time is not exactly known, for he died all alone. It is true a faithful, "trusty" i.e., a prisoner did what he could, but while the old man was dying all alone, his aged wife was locked up in another part of the jail unable to help and even unaware that her husband was dying.

The jury at the inquest returned a verdict, "death from heart failure induced by previous exposure, exposure and lack of proper care before he was brought to the jail."

The outstanding facts are that on Thursday afternoon he was very poor, very old, very starved, but still alive and at work. Friday he was still very poor, very cold, very dead, and ready for burial. Thursday he was a free man and alive, and Friday a dead man and in a prison cell, and in the meantime much had happened.

For the protection of the public and more particularly the poor and aged, several questions await a clear answer and explanation.

1. Did the facts warrant a vagrancy charge?
2. Would a summons to court have not served as well as an arrest under a warrant?
3. Would not a previous visit by some clergyman made it clear to the old people that nothing to hurt them would take place?
4. If an arrest was necessary at that particular time and place could it have been done with less force?
5. Was the old man tied both hands and feet and hands to feet?
6. Were proper precautions taken to see that the old people had sufficient clothing to speed several miles in an open automobile?
7. Should real nourishment have been provided to the old man "starving and exhausted"?
8. Should medical attendance have been furnished?
9. Is the jail to be the place for the poor?

I make no charges. I am well aware that conclusions derived from the statements of one person may be quite wrong conclusions, and I would ask the public to suspend judgment. But I do say that for the sake of the poor and aged of this community that a deep, searching and thorough inquiry into all the facts and circumstances should be had by the authorities and the public should ascertain whether the blame rests on any persons, or whether it rests on our system of dealing with the aged and the poor, and in either case to consider what steps should be taken to prevent in the future a similar tragedy in our midst.

Will the public let this matter drop or is it satisfied that it's not their concern what happens to the poor and aged of the community?

What has happened may be "within the law," and it may be justice, but surely not "justice with mercy."

WHAT IT COST HIM

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 19.—It cost Jess Willard $3,352 in actual cash to win his title from Jack Johnson, according to Manning Vaughn, secretary of the Wisconsin Boxing commission. Vaughn says he received the information from Tom Jones. According to Vaughan, Jones piped it this way:

"Just before Jess went into the ring for his battle with Johnson I informed him that the house was small, and that his end would not amount to a dime.

"But it was worse than that. Before we had finished paying our expenses we were out $3,352."

A BRAVE PEASANT NATION.

For between twelve and thirteen centuries the brave Serbian people have kept the spirit, if too often unable to maintain the form, of independence. To Byzantines, Bulgarians, Hungarians, Turks, they have submitted insubmissively and shaken off as they could. Assassination has been a too frequent incident of their dynasties. The people, simple, heroic, indomitable, no matter how often conquered, have always been admirable for valour and resolution: such they showed when, in the seventh century, they came down from north of the Carpathians and drove the Avars out of that old and barbarian-wasted Thracian country that was to be Serbia. Unnumbered woes they have seen in their secular adventurous history, the captivity of hundreds of thousands, the extermination of multitudes, famine, fire and sword, the Turk; and now something like a culmination of disasters at the hand of the allies of the Turk.

A country with no noble class, a country of free peasants, each tilling his little freehold farm. A country without great towns. Belgrade has, or had, only some 80,000 inhabitants. Nish less than 25,000. A country where, before the free hand was given to Austria by the Hohenzollern, poorhouses and paupers were unknown.

To these plucky peasants, making their last stand, goes, without violation of neutrality, the respect and sympathy due to brave men bound to be free, men "that know how to die."

Great Wastage in German Army Lines Are Growing Thin

PETROGRAD, Nov. 20 — "We have mastered the situation, and the action will develop according to our initiative," is the report sent by Gen. Ruszky, the Russian commander who leads the army on the Dvinisk front against Field Marshal von Hindenburg. "The enemy is demoralized, and its backbone broken," Gen. Ruszky adds.

These words apparently are confirmed by the German casualty lists published recently, which show that the enemy has lost 85,000 men in the last few weeks on the Russian front

Lines Growing Thin

Russian military observers are finding frequent indications that the German lines on this front are growing increasingly thin. These are furnished by reports from the fighting lines, notably from the sector north east of Riga. As an instance, it is stated that in capturing the passage between two marshes, the Russians found the sole defenders of the positions to be two Germans with machine guns

Drilling of the recruits with which the Russians expect to strengthen their own lines on various fronts is proceeding rapidly on all sides. Drill masters report that excellent progress is being made in the drill work because of the willing spirit of the new men, and the admirable relations declared to exist between them and their officers.

Russia intends to place millions of additional troops in the field, according to an announcement by Premier Goremykin to the Russian press. The Premier intimated that necessity of redoubled exertions by the nation to provide the needful equipment and munitions.

Many Bulgarian officers are now attached to the German staff on the Russian front, according to the Bourse Gazette. These officers have been sent from Bulgaria to study German methods of warfare.

River Divides Them.

The Germans continue their attempt to cross the Dvina River, but without effect, the Russian artillery compelling the enemy's retirement everywhere.

There has been much fighting on the Styr River. Near the village of Czarkovsk the Petrograd official report admits that the Russians had to retire to the right bank of the Styr, but the retirement was well covered by the Russian guns, and the Germans were prevented from making an attack. Further up on the Styr, near the village of Nova Sielki, the Germans several times opened fire on the bank of the river held by the Czar's forces.

Fire In A Local Hotel

Kindling Wood Caught Fire in the Basement of the Empress Hotel

Box 24 summoned the Fire Department to the Empress Hotel, shortly after eight o'clock this morning when fire was discovered in the basement. A quantity of kindling wood had ignited in the cellar, and when the firemen arrived, a number of wooden partitions were on fire. Two lines of hose were laid and the fire easily extinguished. There will be no damage water as the fire was confined to basement. The building was filled with smoke

Services at the George St. Church

In connection with the Sunday services of the Boys' Conference, Mr. Taylor Statten, boys' work secretary of the National Council of the Y. M. C. A., will speak in George Street Methodist Church on Sunday morning, and Mr. A. E. Roberts, boys' secretary, of New York, will speak at the evening service.

These are two Christian leaders of international reputation in connection with the training of the young manhood of the present generation

Had His Wish.

"All right," replied the judge; "how will ten years suit you?"—Baltimore American.

WAR HAS MADE NEW DISEASES

Aeroplane Pilots Treated For Air Sickness Among Other Things

During the war several military aviators have been suffering from air sickness. This new malady is liable to attack any aeroplane pilot who flies for a length of time without descending. The aviator thus attacked is affected with a sickly nausea accompanied with severe headache and a violent desire to sleep. Swift descents through the air will bring on these symptoms which medical men say are caused by the blood circulation of an aviator being unable to at once adapt itself to the rapid change of atmospheric pressure caused by sudden drops in the air

Telegraphist's spasm is another malady which has afflicted many telegraph and wireless operators in the war. The complaint is caused by the continual operation of the little handle used in connection with telegraphic apparatus. Few people realize the strain entailed by tapping for hours at a stretch with one hand the instrument which sends code messages across the wire. Most letters consist of more than one dot or dash and it has been estimated that a telegraphist makes about 5,000 movements of the fingers and wrist in the course of an hour's operating.

This strain only results in the hand becoming stiff and uncontrollable as it does in the case of writer's cramp. Many telegraphists now learn to operate with both hands in order to avoid this complaint.

A malady prevalent amongst the drivers of the military motor cars and transport wagons is chaffeur's fracture. When swinging the starting handle of powerful motor cars, the driver often has his right hand forced backwards by the engine backfiring. Sometimes the wrist is broken in this way, but more often the muscles of the wrist are strained or the ligaments torn. As a result the hand becomes almost useless for any purpose demanding strain, and rest is absolutely necessary

A LARGE MARKET DESPITE THE WEATHER

Eggs Few and Far Between —Fowl Plentiful, Prices Remain Firm--Large Quantities of Butter

The threatening condition of the weather and muddy roads did not prevent a large number of farmers and their "better halves" from coming to the Saturday's market

The attendance in the "hall" was quite large, but the outside section showed a slight falling off

Fowl were very numerous, with geese and turkeys becoming more in evidence as the Christmas season approaches

Butter glutted the market, and as one lady from the farm remarked: "It was pretty slow." The prevailing price was 30 cents a pound, though one lot was offered at 28 cents, but by the number of buyers surrounding the basket it was "pretty fast."

Eggs were like the teeth of the one who laid them: "Few and far between," and brought 40 cents a doz

One consignment of horse radish was quoted at 15c a glass

Fowl quotations were as follows: Chickens, 50c, 55c and 60c each, or 90c to $1.20 a pair, according to size Geese, 10½ lbs. $1.40, 10 lbs. $1.25, 11 lbs. $1.50, the average being close to 13 cents a pound. Turkeys: 9 lbs. $1.40, 8 lbs. $1.50, 11 lbs $1.75, 12 lbs. $2.25, 13 lbs. $2.00, 19 lbs $3.40, or an average of 18 to 19 cents a pound Outside Section.

Beet made its first appearance this morning, and was quoted at 10 cents for the front quarters and 11 cents for the hind.

Pork ranged from 14 to 16 cents, and lamb brought the same price.

One load of hay was quoted at $19 a ton

Live hens (to say nothing of the roosters) were bringing from 50c to $1.00 each.

Vegetables are becoming more scarce each market day. Potatoes brought $1.50 a bag, and onions $1 a bag.

Apples were somewhat plentiful, but of an interior quality, with a few exceptions. They were quoted as follows: Culls, by the bag, $1 to $1.25. Snows, $3 to $3.25 a barrel. Baxters, $3.50; Russets, $3.50; Northern Spies, $4.25 to $5; and Bellflowers, $4 a barrel.

Home-Made Cooking.

The ladies of the Kitchener Club had a table of home-made cooking, the proceeds to be devoted to the funds of the Red Cross Society

Other Features.

Bananas were quoted at 25 cents a dozen. Fish was sold at 11 cents a pound. Two lots of knitted goods occupied a place on the market. One table contained a variety of fancy goods, ranging from patriotic pictures to hand-painted neckties

A new variety of bird made its appearance to-day. A city buyer put his fingers on a rather doubtful looking species of fowl and queried "What is this?" To which the farmer's wife replied "It's a HEN"

WOMEN USURPED MEN'S JOBS IN BIBLICAL TIMES

University of Pennsylvania Museum of 2000 B.C. Proves Her Rights.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov 20.— Proof that woman's economic independence her property rights and ability to make contracts in her own name and her own right, in many respects are advanced no further to-day than they were approximately 4,000 years ago, is to be found in the translation of several small tablets in University of Pennsylvania Museum.

These tablets belong to the Nippur collection and were presented to the museum by the Babylonian Exploration Fund.

One tablet contains a description of the payment of temple stipends, in corn and other commodities, as well as money. The part most significant points out that a woman was able to take the place of a man and at the same salary. After stating the terms of taxes, the translation of the inscription reads that "meanwhile, one man had died, the salary of another had been reduced, that of a third had been raised, while a woman had taken the position of another man with the same salary." The approximate date of this tablet is 2,000 B.C'

Received Same Salary.

It is probably the earliest record, according to the translators, of a woman in public service, and certainly the earliest record of a woman displacing a man at a similar salary.

Evidence that women held property is found in another record, which describes the rent of tribute which a woman owner of an estate received from her tenants. An additional fact brought out by this record is that pork was an important article of diet in Babylonia 4,000 years ago. The description applies to Rhibatum, a priestess of the sun god in Sippar, who leases her house with a special stipulation that, in addition to an annual rental of three shekels of silver, her tenant "shall provide her with three portions of pork, and thirty 'ga' of beer at three festals of the sun god." It is thought that a "ga" of beer has reference to a cask probably resembling the barrel in use to-day.

An interesting marriage contract which, in all probability, was entered into freely and thoroughly understood by both parties, though severe in its terms, provided that either in the event of his or her infidelity to the other, shall pay certain penalties and forfeits. "Belshu and Ama-lubs," it reads, "agreeing to return her dowry and to pay damages if he dismiss her. She forfeits dowry and pays the same fine in case of desertion."

Dowries Common Then.

Giving of dowries by the fathers of brides was one of the earliest sacred customs of Babylonia about the year 1875 B C, from which time the earliest record is preserved. The manuscript which contains the particulars of the marriage dowry, is the largest early Babylonian record of the kind known. No evidence is to be found that the custom was practised except by the nobility and priests and priestesses. Enumeration of the servants and animals given as part of the marriage portion are found on it, together with the amount of gold and silver set apart for jewelry, the dresses, precious stones, furniture, vessels and other objects given as dowry by Awil-sin to his daughter about to be married to the son of a priest.

Slaves were dealt in freely and in some cases gained their independence either through their own services or by the beneficence of their masters.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES.

My daughter suffered from inflamed eyelids and eczema on her head," writes Mr H W Lear, Port Planford, Nfld. "The child was in a bad state and suffered greatly. The doctor failed to help her and on recommendation of a friend used Dr. Chase's Ointment, which made complete cure. With a grateful heart write you this letter."

Didn't Favour Proxies.

Mrs. Morton (angrily)—"Tommy Horton, what made you hit my little Johnny?"

Tommy Horton—"He struck me with a brick."

Mrs. Morton (more angry)—"Well, never let me hear of your hitting him again. If he hits you, you come and tell me."

Tommy Horton (sheepishly)—"Yes and what would you do?"

Mrs. Morton—"Why, I'd whip him."

Tommy Horton (in disgust)—"What! He hits me with a brick, and you have the fun of licking him for it? Not much."

LOOKING FOR WORK

Everywhere men complain about work, even boys and girls in school or business find work tedious and irksome, but it isn't the work half so much as their own lack of physical strength that makes it hard.

Rich blood, strong lungs and healthful digestion make work pleasurable in business, in school or even house work, and if those who are easily tired who are not sick, but weak and nervous—would just take Scott's Emulsion for one month and let its pure concentrated food create richer blood to pulsate through every artery and vein—let it build a structure of healthy tissue and give you vigorous strength—you would find work easy and would look for more. Insist on Scott's.

BRITISH STEAMSHIPS HAVE BEEN SUNK BY GERMAN SUBMARINES

LONDON, Nov. 22, — The British steamships Merganzer and Hallamshire have been sunk by German submarines. The crews were saved, it was announced to-day. The Merganzer, 1905 tons, was owned by the Cork Steamship Co., and sailed from Cork, Ireland. The Hallamshire was of 4,420 tons, and its home port was Glasgow.

ONTARIO MEN'S GOOD RECORD

MONTREAL, Nov 20.—W. D. Robb, superintendent of motive power, announces that two of the annual fire brigade competitions for employees of the Grand Trunk System have been won this year by the men of the car shops at London, Ontario.

Employees' fire brigades at the various main repair shops, round house terminals and other large buildings have long been an institution on the Grand Trunk.

The organization comprises hose and hook and ladder companies, the members of which are supplied with coats, helmets, rubber boots, etc. The men are regularly drilled and reside within easy distance of the shops in order that they can respond promptly to an alarm.

The company recognizes the work of the men composing these fire brigades in many ways, granting additional free transportation to themselves and families and awards prizes in the annual competitions amounting to $250.

The "city" race was won this year by No 2 Company, of the Car Shops at London, and they were also winners in the "wet" race, while the hook and ladder race was won by a Montreal team from the Car Department.

Monastir Was Serbia's Most Prized Acquisition In the War With Turkey

Second City of Turkish Macedonia—Important Strategic Point in Mountain District—It Had a Population of 60,000 and a Thriving Trade in Normal Times.

LONDON, Nov 22 "Monastir, where the Bulgarians were never expected to arrive, is the last place in Serbia, hard upon the Greek frontier, and defended by dessest mountains on every hand," the National Geographic Society says in a bulletin. "It was one of the most prized acquisitions made by the Serbians after the war in 1912 of the Balkan League with the Ottoman Empire. By means of schools, propaganda, Serbian committees and Serbian priests the people of all this southern territory were long carefully prepared for an ultimate union with the little kingdom. The Serbians pursued the same tactics here that the Bulgarians and Greeks pursued for years in their endeavours to win the upper hand in the Turkish province of Macedonia. Monastir was to the Serbian ambitions what the port of Salonica was to the Greeks and the Bulgarians.

"Monastir was the second city of Turkish Macedonia. It did a thriving business, even under Turkish rule, and the Serbians entertained great hopes for its future. Moreover, the mountain city is one of the important strategic points in the Balkans and when under Turkish rule it was made a base of military defence and offence of the same rank as Adrianople. Here were located the headquarters' offices of a Turkish army corps, for the roads from the port of Salonica on the Aegean Sea; from the port of Durazzo, on the Adriatic Sea; from Nish, the ancient capital of Serbia, and from the important fortress of Adrianople met and crossed here. The Serbians have strengthened the defensive works of the city since their occupation, and it is to-day an important factor in the keeping of ways open between Serbia and Greece and Serbia and Albania.

"The city nestles in a bowl scooped in the mountain clusters at an altitude of 2,019 feet. To the west the mountains rise to a height of more than 8,000 feet. All the mountain country around is heavily wooded, while the broad valley is carpeted with fruitful fields. The port of Salonica, where the Allied troops landed, is 85 miles distant to the southeast. Constantinople is 400 miles to the east. Belgrade is 200 miles to the north and Nish 155 miles. The nearest point of the Bulgarian frontier, at Strumitza, is only 65 miles away.

"A railway line connects Monastir and Salonica, with which city most of the Serbian town's trade is done. The export products of all Southern Serbia are assembled at this place and sent to the Grecian port, while the imports are distributed from the same centre and from Uskup. The city has a population of 60,000, and an annual trade of the value of $2,000,000 during normal times. Considerable gold and silver work for export is done here, but the staples of Monastir's commerce are flour, grain, cloth skins, tobacco and carpets. The town has large barracks, a military hospital and a number of progressive educational institutions."

Conviction Recorded By Police Magistrate Dumble Was Upheld

The Appeal of Harold Sanderson Who Was Convicted of Selling Deteriorated Milk Was Dismissed With Costs by His Honour Judge Huycke—Fine Was Reduced From Fifty to Twenty Dollars—Vendor is Held Responsible for the Condition of the Milk.

Judgment in the appeal of Harold Sanderson against the decision of Police Magistrate Dumble respecting a conviction that was registered against defendant for selling deteriorated milk, was handed down this morning by His Honour Judge Huycke. City Solicitor G. N. Gordon appeared for Sanitary Inspector Spence, while Mr. F. D. Kerr acted for Harold Sanderson.

The judgment is as follows:

Sanderson vs. Spence.

An appeal by Harold Sanderson, from a conviction by D. W. Dumble, Esq., K.C., Police Magistrate, for selling deteriorated milk. In this case water milk, without giving notice of such deterioration to the purchaser contrary to R. S. O. Chap. 221, S. 5, S. 2. The penalty imposed was $50 and costs.

The case was gone into de novo before me and thoroughly tried out, ably conducted on both sides. I said at the close of the case I was satisfied the milk had been watered, also that Mr. Sanderson did not do nor authorize the contemptible as well as illegal act. After mature consideration I am satisfied those findings of fact are correct on the evidence. The only question then remaining is can the conviction stand, no mens rea or guilty knowledge being shown on the part of the accused appellant. It was strongly urged he should and could not be convicted unless it was shown he either did or knew of the unlawful act. I have concluded the statute is an absolute prohibition that knowledge or lack of knowledge are not material elements of the case. A milk vender must sell pure milk. The consequences are too serious if he does not he cannot take refuge under lack of knowledge or guilty mind.

The Statute states and I must assume the Legislature meant what it said in the enactment. This view is strengthened by the interpretation of such or similar statutes in England by the Courts there.

This is especially true under the adulteration Acts and the sales of articles of food, drugs, etc., etc. No knowledge of the deterioration is not a defence, even a wrongful intent is not necessary to support a conviction. Such provisions should be and are especially applicable to sales of milk. The lives of young children are too precious to be trifled with, and the milk sold to or for them must be pure and the vendor must see that it is pure or take the consequences. The sooner and more widely this is known the better for all parties.

I would refer Counsel to the following cases all English:

Dyke v. Gower (1892, 1 Q.B. 220.
Baker v. Tolcon (1895, 1 Q.B. 467.
Lamb v. Benell (1895, 1 K.B. 130.

The appeal must therefore be dismissed with costs, but in view of the facts as found and the possible misunderstanding of the law I place the fine at $20.00.

Time should be given to the defendant for the future in such cases.

E. C. S. Huycke,
Judge.

Peterborough, Nov. 18, 1915.

Italian Attacks Increasing in Violence

VIENNA, via Berlin, Nov. 22. — Italian attacks on the Austrian front are increasing in violence all along the line. The loss of an Austrian position in the Oslavia district is admitted in to-day's official statement. The Italians penetrated the Austrian line at this point by a tremendous charge. A counter-attack drove them back at many points. The Italians' Isonzo forces have been strengthened by drafts from the Tyrol and the bombardment of the Goritz bridgehead, in particular, is being bombarded with ever growing intensity. The town is largely wrecked and fresh fires are springing up from the persistent shelling. Alternate shelling and infantry charges are in progress, some times with one side and again the other attempting an offensive, at Poema, Podgora and Monte San Michele.

TURKISH TRANSPORT SUNK BY A MINE IN THE SEA OF MARMORA

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The Turkish transport carrying 500 Ottoman soldiers was sunk by a mine in the Sea of Marmora, according to a Central News despatch to-day from Zurich. Nearly all on board were drowned.

BUCHAREST, via Paris, Nov. 22. —An unofficial statement last night says Roumania will permit Russian troops to cross to the defence of Serbia.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. — An official statement says the Norwegian steamer Ulriken was torpedoed by the Germans without warning, and four lives were lost. They may be Americans.

ATHENS, Nov. 22.—Lord Kitchener has arrived here and was last night in audience with King Constantine. The Grecian people received Kitchener with great cheers, and many members of Parliament escorted him to the palace.

WASHINGTON, Nov 22.—The United States steamer Martin struck a German mine in the North Sea and is badly damaged. Two of the crew were injured.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Seven hundred lives were lost when a French transport was sunk in the Mediterranean.

ATHENS, Nov. 22.—After a long conference between King Constantine and Lord Kitchener it was semi-officiall announced that the situation was "satisfactory."

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—It is stated that the Kaiser had decided not to go to Turkey, owing to the activity of the Allies' forces in Greece.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 22. — The British fleet shelled German forts at Ostend and other places along the Belgian coast doing much damage.

HALF MILLION POUNDS OF HALIBUT

A New Fishery Record Established at Prince Rupert

PRINCE RUPERT B.C., Nov. 20. A new fishery record for the Port has just been made over half a million pounds of fresh halibut being landed here in two days. Just as fast as the fish can be packed in ice and placed in refrigerator cars it is being sent to the Eastern markets. Seventeen carloads of halibut the greatest single shipment ever made left on two trains over the Grand Trunk Pacific. The big catches have followed a period of rough weather on the fishing banks. With better conditions prevailing the water front here presents an active appearance both day and night, many of the ships bringing in over 100,000 pounds of halibut. There is little difficulty in disposing of even these enormous catches as the markets in Chicago, New York and Montreal, Toronto and other large cities now look forward to consignments of Prince Rupert halibut, the method of transportation via Canadian Express refrigerator cars ensuring perfect condition.

THE VALUE OF FIRST AID IS DEMONSTRATED

BATTLE CREEK, Nov 20. The value of first aid instruction in big industrial plants has been demonstrated in a striking manner. An accident in the Grand Trunk shops at here in one of the men having his right leg broken in two places. The case was handled by the Grand Trunk Railway first aid crew and to the patient reaching the hospital the surgeon called in the whole matter and evident stuff of the manner in which the splints and bandages had been applied. The doctors stated that if the man had been moved without the first aid care there would have been a very serious chance of his losing the limb or being lame for life. He stated that this was the first case of a fracture of this nature coming to the hospital from an industrial plant that had not been helped in aid.

Gordon Craig

Copyright, 1912, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

"Yes, only you must have retained something to substantiate your word."

"Precisely. I was coming to that. I have letters from my father which should be sufficient. You have seen Judge Henley's writing?" and he handed me a half dozen missives. They were without envelopes, each beginning simply, "My Dear Son," relating principally to local conditions on the plantation, and occasionally expressing a desire for the wanderer to return and assume the burden of management. That they were in the crabbed and peculiar handwriting of the old judge was beyond all question, and the dates covered several years. I read them through carefully, puzzled by their contents.

"There are no envelopes?"

"No. I never keep them—why?"

"Only that no name is mentioned, they begin all alike, 'My Dear Son.'"

"I never thought of that," he admitted, simulating surprise, "but can supplement my showing you this picture. Taken three years ago at Mobile. Of course you will recognize myself, but may never have seen a photograph of Judge Henley."

"I never have."

"Well, that is his likeness, and there are those on board who will identify it. Does this satisfy you that I am what I claim to be?"

In truth it did not, for I would have believed nothing in opposition to the positive statement of the woman that he was not Philip Henley. Yet under other conditions—divorced from what I knew—the letters would be conclusive. Were they really addressed to him or had he stolen them? If the latter, then how had he succeeded in getting his picture on the same plate with Judge Henley's? Aware that even the slightest hesitancy might awaken suspicion, I answered quickly:

"It would seem to be unanswerable. What hurts my pride is to have been made such a fool of."

"That's nothing, Craig. We have all had that experience. I stand ready to give you a chance now on the winning side. There will be more money in it for us both. What do you say?"

"I should prefer to know more about your proposition."

"It has nothing whatever to do with the Henley matter. That is practically settled already, so you will not be further involved with the girl."

"You would oblige me by leaving her name out of the discussion then," I exposed coldly.

He chuckled, well satisfied with his diplomacy.

"We cannot obliterate her entirely. Pretty enough to be useful, too, I imagine, if she can ever be brought to view this affair from the right angle."

I gazed directly into his eyes, barely able to keep from throttling him.

"Drop it," I said sternly. "The girl is to be left alone if I have any part in your scheme. Now I want to know what is expected of me. May I ask questions?"

"Certainly. Fire away."

"Where are we bound?"

"Spanish Honduras," lazily, but spreading out a map and tapping it with his finger. "Puerto Cortez, if we can make that port safely; if not, then somewhere along the coast between there and Trupillo. There will be signals."

I leaned forward, startled out of my self restraint.

"Honduras! Good Lord! What are you—a filibuster?"

"Hardly," with a short laugh. "That is too dangerous a job and not money enough in it. I prefer to do my revolting through others and cop the swag. That's the safe end of the game. It happens to be Honduras just now; I have been equally interested in other downtrodden countries. In truth, friend, I am a patriot for revenue only."

"You mean you furnish arms?"

"For a suitable consideration, yes. In strict confidence I will state that securely packed away in the hold of the Sea Gull, largely in boxes labeled machinery, are 20,000 rifles, six rapid fire guns and a sufficiency of ammunition for a small army. Once safely landed, the profits of the voyage will total $150,000 gold."

"You mean to retain the lady on board?"

"Unless she prefers to jump overboard."

"And what have I to do with all this? You said you had use for me—what use?"

CHAPTER XII.

I Join the Sea Gull.

"YOU chance to be the very sort of man I need. The devil could not have sent me a better," he said, with some enthusiasm. "You are an American soldier, the best drilled men in the world for irregular service. You can understand that the longer I can keep those fellows down there fighting, the more I will sell. Good! that is part of my business. And the better they are drilled the longer they will keep it up. That is what I want you for—to help make that mob of rags into an army. You can do it, and I am willing to pay the price."

"I perceive your point," I said at last, facing him. "But what is there in it for me?"

"I perceive your point," I said at last.

"A good round sum," he replied. "More than you ever made before, I warrant, not excepting the promises made you in this Henley will case. We'll talk the details over later."

"Who is responsible for my pay?"

"See here, Craig, the case stands like this. The revolutionists down there asked me to find them a competent drill master, and they will pay royally. They've got the money, too, scads of it. There will be no trouble on that score. Besides, I need a reliable man ashore to look after shipments. We have to land our goods in a hurry, you understand, at night, without checking up. I can answer to name you something pretty nice on the side to assure myself a square deal."

"It looks good," I confessed, but still hesitating. "Only I shall have to have it in writing and more in detail."

"We'll talk that over in the morning; it's late now. Take the third stateroom, starboard; it's all ready for you."

"Then I am no longer to consider myself a prisoner on board?"

"Certainly not. Practically, you are one of us."

"And I have the freedom of the deck?"

He smiled grimly, gazing intently at me.

"That is safe enough, I reckon, even if I questioned your interest in this adventure. There must be ten miles of water already between us and the coast. There are no limits on your liberty, but I wouldn't advise your going forward at present, not until the men understand the situation. They're a hard lot."

"Revolutionists?"

"No; plain New Orleans wharf rats, the scouring of the seven seas."

"Who is first mate—the German?"

"Yes; Herman; a fine sailor. Was with the Hamburg people until he had a wreck. The creole Broussard is second, and two of them together could tame a cargo of wildcats."

I took his hand, feeling the sinewy grip of his lean, brown fingers, and turned to the door. The single lamp in the main cabin was turned low, only faintly illuminating the interior. In the quiet I could feel the movement of the vessel and realized there was some sea on, although the engines were being operated only at half speed. This seemed odd if speed was desirable, as I supposed it must be on a voyage of this nature. I was not in the least sleepy and sank down in the first chair to think, my eyes on the captain's door.

What Henley meant to do with the girl was problematical—I had not thought to ask—but he either intended putting her ashore in Honduras or else holding her prisoner on board until the Sea Gull returned north. Either contingency was bad enough, and the suspicion flashed suddenly across me that the final decision would depend on how kindly she might receive the attentions of the captain. Nor did I question the result. I had not known the lady long, but in that brief time our relations had been sufficiently intimate to yield me a good insight into her womanly character. There would be no yielding, no compromise.

I felt my teeth lock, my hands clinch in sudden anger.

I may have remained there for a quarter of an hour, motionless, thinking over every incident. No one disturbed me. The captain was still in his stateroom, where once or twice I fancied I heard him pacing the floor. The steward had apparently retired for the night, although it was not late, as a glance at my watch proved. My eyes traced the doors on either side, ten altogether, each plainly numbered, and I opened the one assigned to me and glanced within. Except that it was more commodious and contained a washstand at one corner, it did not differ greatly from the other forward where I had been held prisoner.

I wondered which of these others might be here and passed silently from door to door, vaguely hoping for some sign of guidance. They were all tightly closed, and I dare not try the locks, as I was certain one, at least, of the under officers would be sleeping below. My round had brought me to the second door on the port side when in the dim light I perceived something lying at my feet and stooped down to better determine its character. It was the end of a very narrow light blue ribbon, apparently caught beneath the door. The door was numbered "5." Whether by accident or design, she had left the one clew I most needed. I thrust it into my pocket, but the soft touch of the silk seemed to bring back to me a sense of caution. I knew the door was locked and assured myself there was no space beneath. If I was to communicate with her other means must be employed. What? This was the second stateroom on the port side. Judging from my own, the width of each room would be about six feet. There ought to be no difficulty in locating her porthole from the deck above nor in attracting her attention.

The one thing I desired now was to re-establish myself fully in her confidence, assure her I was at liberty on board, able and willing to be of service. This necessity overshadowed everything else. If I could discover means of communication we could plan hopefully, assured of co-operation. This seemed possible, the way to its accomplishment open. Shadowed from observation by the thick butt of the after mast, I wrote a few lines hastily on the back of an envelope, thrust it into my pocket and ventured up the companion stairs.

A glance sufficed to convince that I was alone and unobserved. The deck was unobstructed aft, except for a small boat swung to davits astern and the cabin transoms. These last were elevated some three feet, but considerable space separated from the rail. I slipped into this opening on the port side, crouching in the dense shadow until again assured I was alone. My position afforded as good a view forward as the darkness would permit and likewise enabled me to see into the dimly lit cabin below. I was not watched or spied upon. For the first time I began to feel free.

With a glance below at the unoccupied cabin I stepped back and paced off the distance until convinced that I had safely located where the porthole of No. 5 should be. I leaned over, seeking to trace its outline by some reflection of light from within, but the receding side of the vessel baffled me. Yet, assured that I must be correct in my measurements, I marked the spot on the rail and began search for some means by which I could open communication with the girl below.

IS IT A COUGH?

Ontario Women's Advice.

Hamilton, Ont.—"I am a great believer in Dr. Pierce's medicines. I am speaking from the actual use of them and the great benefit I have derived therefrom. Shortly after my marriage I began ailing, had a very bad cough as I got very thin and was run down. My people thought I was going into a decline. They got 'Golden Medical Discovery' and this medicine completely cured me."—Mrs. Amelia Hibbard, 26 Cheever St., Hamilton, Ont.

Kilbride, Ont.—"When I was only eleven months old my mother procured 'Golden Medical Discovery' for me, which cured me of congestion of lungs and whooping cough. I have taken it several times myself since and about one year ago I gave it to my two children for whooping cough. They recovered very quickly with no bad results, after taking one bottle. I have recommended it to quite a number of late."—Mrs. W. J. Rimmer, Kilbride, Ont.

The best time to cure a cough is when it starts. Ordinarily, a few doses of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure a cough at the beginning. But even when the cough is deep-seated and the body is wasted by emaciation, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will in most cases effect a permanent cure.

Get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to-day from any medicine dealer; it is a powerful blood purifier, so penetrating that it even gets at the impure deposits in the joints and carries them out of the system.

Depend upon this grand remedy to give you the kind of blood that makes the skin clear, the mind alert, the vision keener, and puts ambition and energy into the entire body. You will not be disappointed. For free advice, write Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

A FOUNDERED NATION

The Nation Armenia is clearly a foundered nation. The Young Turk has deliberately sunk it. Where Abdul Hamid slew his thousands Enver Pasha if the names of Lord Bryce is accepted, has slain millions. The main facts of the story which Lord Cromer told to the Lords were admitted by Lord Crewe, and Lord Bryce's appalling details were merely supplementary. The whole Armenian country has been swept of inhabitants. Shiploads were deliberately drowned in the Black Sea, great droves of men and women have been transplanted to uninhabitable regions, dying by the way, the women stripped naked and throwing away their children in despair of feeding or carrying them. Only a remnant of this intelligent and industrious nation is now left. Germany's responsibility for the crime is direct. She is admittedly indifferent, it is charged against her in the United States that some of her consuls have aided individual massacres. In her Pagan mood she dissociates herself from Christian humanity; nevertheless, she stands today under a load of guilt unexampled in modern history.

An Irishman in London was holding forth to some companions on the good points of his native country. "It is the cheapest country in the world to live in, said he: "You will buy a fine salmon for sixpence and about a dozen mackerels for twopence." "And, Paddy, why did you leave that blessed and cheap country?" "I left it because I didn't happen to have either the twopence or the sixpence about me," replied Paddy.

Comfort and Cure For Baby's Skin Troubles

Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured When Baby's Body Was Covered With Distressing Eczema

If every mother could try Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing, skin irritation and resulting eczema which tortures so many babies, what a blessing it would be for the little ones.

This letter will give you an idea of what a wonderful work this Ointment is doing in the way of bringing comfort to children who are so unfortunate as to contract eczema. It is so easy for this trouble to develop from chafing or irritation caused by the clothing, and so difficult to get it cured, that Dr. Chase's Ointment is appreciated when once its healing qualities are known.

Mr. M. L. Duschos, Postmaster, Dugnayville, N.B., writes: "I believe it my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema. My baby was seized with eczema and his face and arms were covered with this terrible disease. After trying all sorts of ointments the disease continued to spread until it covered the entire body. When the itching became bad he would scratch himself and was sometimes found in his cradle covered with blood. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Ointment I bought two boxes and before this was all used the child was cured. That was a year ago, and there has been no trace of eczema since. I recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from eczema as being the best treatment in the world for itching skin diseases."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is for sale by all dealers at 60 cents a box. It is a good idea to keep it at hand along with the bath soap to be used for roughness of the skin, chafing or irritation. Prevention is so much better than cure. Powders clog the pores, but Dr. Chase's Ointment cleanses the pores and thereby keeps the skin soft and smooth. Sample box free if you mention this paper. How Sickly Women May Get Health

If they could only be made to see that half their ills are caused by impure blood, it wouldn't take long to cure them with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Truly a wonderful medicine that invigorates, strengthens, renews. Every tired, worn-out, woman that tries Dr. Hamilton's Pills will improve rapidly, will have better colour, increased appetite and better digestion.

No better rebuilding tonic can be found than Dr. Hamilton's Pills which are safe, mild and health giving. For forty years Dr. Hamilton's Pills have been America's most valued family medicine, 25c. per box at all dealers.

Mark Twain Story.

He was lunching one day with a friend in a cafe. Two over-dressed young men entered, and the first said, in a loud voice:

"Waiter, bring me some lobster, a bottle of white wine, and a chop. Just mention my name to the chef, too, so that everything will be done to my liking."

The second said: "Bring me some sole with peas; and tell the chef who it's for."

Mr. Twain gave his order a moment later. He said, with a wink at his companion: "Bring me a half-dozen oysters, and mention my name to each of them."

THE PENALTY OF UNTHANKFULNESS

Gratitude For Mercies Enhance Their Value.

Unthankfulness Breeds Discontent and Undermines Happiness—True Christians Accept Their Life's Experiences Cheerfully, Knowing the Lord's Measures to Be Just—They Alone Can Give Thanks in the Full Sense of the Word.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Montreal, Que., Nov. 21.—Pastor Russell spoke here to-day on the subject of Thanksgiving. His text was, "Giving thanks always for all things unto God." (Ephesians 5:20.) He said in part:

Our experiences in life are to a considerable extent what we make them. Bible students should be philosophers—every one of them. Why? Because the Wisdom from Above is the noblest science and best instruction. As St. Paul declares, it tends to promote the spirit of a sound mind—and a sound mind is necessarily a philosophical one. Murmurers and complainers are not philosophers, but the reverse. A sound mind tells us to take things as they are, to make the best of them rather than to quarrel over them and find fault with Divine providence and make ourselves and everybody else in our environment miserable.

True Christian people in every land and under all conditions have found plenty of cause for thankfulness, even though they have had their share, or more, of life's difficulties. Nor was this thankfulness because they had mastered the Divine philosophy and understood the WHY and WHEREFORE of the present reign of Sin and Death. They accepted their portion of life's joys and sorrows by faith, believing that their portion was measured to them by the Lord, and that full obedience and submission, with cheerfulness, was their duty.

Excuses for Unthankfulness.

We are ready to concede that the world, awakening from the sleepy superstitions of the past, can readily find many excuses for declining to be thankful. If we mention some of these it will not be by way of endorsing them, rather to show the unthankful masses that we recognize their viewpoint but do not agree with it. We would point them to the better course of thankfulness and proportionate happiness.

To their complaint that they have fewer and smaller blessings than their more wealthy neighbors, we remind them that the poor of this favored land habitually waste more than would make very thankful some of the poor of other lands. We remind that under Divine blessing upon the soil and Divine blessing upon human skill conveniences and comforts have multiplied about us so that the "common people" of our land have home comforts and conveniences and educational facilities and parks and libraries, well paved and lighted streets, and cheap transportation such as were not dreamed of in our grandfathers' days, nor enjoyed even by the rich. Let us not greedily ask more along these lines until we have fully appreciated present privileges and blessings and returned thanks therefor.

"But," says one, "our forefathers were superstitiously thankful, and we must avoid that. They gave thanks to God for the sunshine and the rain. We have learned that these are provisions of nature; and we thank nobody for them. Our forefathers thanked God for escape from feudal slavery; but we see that they should have rebelled against feudalism and bought their freedom with their own courage. Our forefathers thanked God, if they were sick, that they did not die and go to eternal torture. We are coming to the rationalistic idea that they should have thanked their physician for recovery from sickness and should not have believed in an everlasting future of torture; for so far as we can see that teaching is all humbug.

"Intelligent people of the world have no more knowledge than ourselves respecting a future. We agree with the college professors that our race is progressing by an evolutionary law of nature; that God has nothing to do with it; and that there is no future life for us except in the sense that we, in the future, will be represented on a higher plane of living by our evolved children. You will perceive, therefore, why we consider Thanksgiving Day a piece of medieval superstition."

Replies to the Unthankful.

Our reply to this reasoning must be along two lines: first, philosophical; second, analytical:

(1) Are not these increasingly large numbers of pantheistic and atheistic evolutionists unphilosophical? They admit that they have blessings far beyond anything known to their forefathers, and they admit that their unhappiness has increased in proportion as these blessings and reasonings respecting them have been received. Would not a true philosophy tell them that if happiness is their aim and desire, their loss of happiness is not due to the increased blessings, but to the improper and unthankful manner in which they have received them? Would not philosophy alone, apart from the Bible or religion, have warned them that, even if their theories were true, it would be unwise to cultivate them in their own minds and in the minds of others?

(2) Let us now analyze the foregoing complaints. Who can prove to us that there is no living and true God—that there is merely a god of nature, a blind force? Who can explain to us the power which holds our earth in its orbit around the sun which has given us summer and winter, cold and heat; and which has given us mountains and valleys, hills and plains, in pleasing variety and loaded with minerals most useful to us and merely waiting our Heaven-directed genius to bring them forth for the blessing of our race, and to make of earth the Paradise of God?

What philosophy can prove to us that these things have happened by chance and that we are wrong in accepting the Scriptural suggestion "Day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night showeth knowledge and there is no place where their voice is not heard"—proclaiming an all-wise and beneficent Creator? We know that the wisdom and beneficence of our Creator were hidden from our mental view by our superstitions and irrational creeds of the past; but now, as the electric light has superseded the tallow candle, so God's Word to-day is shining forth to those who have eyes to see its beauty.

Let us not boast ourselves as possessed of so much greater courage than had some in feudal times. Let us note, on the contrary, that the patriotism which demanded and obtained the Magna Charta of our liberties was as noble and courageous as any that we have to-day, or more so. Our freedom from some of the superstitions of the past is the result of the spread of education; and we must thank neither ourselves nor our forefathers for this widespread education. We must thank the Lord for it. It came upon the world in spite of the opposition of the rich and the indifference of the poor. It came because God's due time for it had arrived.

The Scriptures fully assure us that this is a special mark or evidence that the New Era of Divine blessing prophesied in the Scriptures long ago, is now at hand. Compare St. Peter's words (Acts 3: 19-21) with the words of the Prophet Daniel (Daniel 12:1.) Rightly understood and appreciated, the very arguments used to oppose God are grounds for sincere praise and gratitude and hope for the future.

To Higher Critics and Evolutionists.

The law of sin and death is referred to in Scripture. We grant, as all thinking people must, that the teaching of the creeds formulated in the Dark Ages respecting the torture of the dead are absurd; and more than this, we hold that they are unscriptural, that they were conjured up under superstitious fears, and that certain symbolical pictures of the Bible were wrested to the support of those misconceptions of the Divine character and Plan.

But does the rejection of those absurd theories disprove an intelligent Creator and disprove the Bible declaration that He is a God of Love; and that there is a future life for the Suffered No End of Pain FROM BACKACHES.

If a pain attacks you in the back you should stop and think what it is and what causes it.

If the kidneys are at fault—and in nine cases out of every ten they are—you should attend to them at once, as it is impossible to have a well, strong back unless the kidneys are performing their functions in a proper manner.

Anyone with a bad back should appreciate how to get a good one. It is a very simple matter. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist.

Mrs. E. J. Graves, Oshawa, Ont., writes: "My complaint lies with my kidneys. I have suffered no end of pain with them, and with backaches. I had tried everything, so I thought, until a friend advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. I did try them, and one box helped me fine, so I got another, and now feel that I cannot recommend them too highly to anyone suffering with kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are the original kidney pills. Do not accept any substitutes put up under similar names. Always see that our trade mark "The Maple Leaf" appears on the lable and wrapper.

dawn of the present reign of Sin and Death, and a rational basis for hope for the resurrection of the dead under the glorious Reign of Emmanuel, the Prince of Life, and the blessings which His Kingdom will surely bring to every member of our race? That the human family is in a weak and depraved condition, mentally, morally, and physically, is beyond dispute; and evolutionists have not proven the Bible in error in its explanation that present mental, moral and physical weakness is proof of the degeneracy which came to our race as a result of sin. Consanguinity between the human and the ape has not been proven; but if it HAD BEEN there would be just as much ground for reasoning that a monkey or an ape is a degenerate human as for claiming that humanity are evoluted apes.

In opposition to this irrational theory we note that mankind in general, even those of humble birth have organs of the mind which they rarely use, and which cannot, therefore, be said to be evolved by them; and those organs are not the lower but the higher ones, the nobler ones. Those qualities of mind are present but dormant, merely waiting to be quickened into activity. This fact favors the Bible view that mankind are FALLEN, and that few are living up to even the best of the impaired organism which they possess.

The evolutionary theory, that we should live and die simply for the advancement of future generations may prove an incentive to some; but in our judgment these will be few. Of far greater interest is the Bible teaching that the present is the NIGHT TIME, in which our friends and neighbors and ourselves, one by one, fall asleep in death; and that God's Infinite Wisdom and Power and Love have provided a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust—the just to glory, honor, and everlasting life; the unjust to a glorious condition very different from the present reign of Sin and Death—under the Reign of the Prince of Life with glorious opportunities, for a thousand years, of uplifting blessedness. Then everlasting life will be the reward to the faithful and appreciative.

We have noted that unthankfulness means discontent, and that discontent means unhappiness and misery. Who then can afford to be unthankful, or to take the road of unbelief, which surely leads thereto? St. Paul draws our attention to the fact that much of the degradation of the heathen should be directly traced to unthankfulness. He declares that the Headship of the Almighty over all creation, and His unlimited power are clearly manifested in the things of nature.

He declares that the heathen "are without excuse, because when they knew God they glorified Him not as God, neither were thankful, but became vain in their imaginations and their foolish heart was darkened. Professing themselves to be wise, they became foolish and idolaters. "Wherefore God also gave them up to uncleanness, through the lusts of their own hearts, to dishonor their own bodies between themselves." (Romans 1:20-22.) Unthankfulness to God was not punished directly nor threatened with a future punishment. Acting automatically it separated the unthankful ones from their Creator; and their course became downward, degenerate.

The spirit of unthankfulness as a malady threatens our present civilization with death. Year by year this sentiment has been growing; and discontent, when fully hatched out, will be the viper of anarchy, for whose virus there is no human remedy.

We thank God that although this awful anarchy foretold is near at hand, and is beyond human ability to cope with, yet Divine Love has promised to intervene to save the unthankful world by the establishment of the Messianic Kingdom in power and great glory, for the blessing of all the families of the earth, for the making straight of all the crooked paths, for the opening of the eyes of understanding, that all may see the Truth.

The Thanksgiving of Christians.

St. Peter, addressing Christians says, "What manner of persons ought YE to be?" Similarly, we might say How earnest should be the thanksgiving of Christians! But alas! Thanksgiving Day with us has lost much of the religious import known to our forefathers. Notwithstanding false doctrines inculcated by man-made creeds, our forefathers believed the Bible record of man's original perfection, his fall into sin and condemnation, the redemption accomplished through Jesus, and a restoration to Divine favor thus made possible. These truths constituted the foundation for a living faith in God and led them to give thanks for the harvest of the year, accounting that if every good and perfect gift comes directly or indirectly from the hand of God it should be received accordingly and acknowledged.

To-day, however, we have the form of godliness without the power, because the precious faith has been well-nigh destroyed by the Higher Critics and Evolutionists, who for the past fifty years have been laboring constantly to this end, and with wonderful success. Well does God ask the question, "Who hath believed our report"—who believes the Divine Record, or Message, and who sees the Arm of Jehovah connected with the world's affairs?

Anyone having lost faith in the Bible and its God has therefore little left except a form of godliness, without its power. Nevertheless, here and there in all nations and all sects of Christendom are to be found loyal souls, bewildered by the present trend of affairs and crying out to God for further light, and appreciating and giving thanks for every blessing, even though they do not understand the philosophy of their own experience.

The Morning-Star Dawn.

St. Peter declares that the sun burst of the New Dispensation or Messiah's Kingdom will be preceded by the Morning Star, which will shine into the hearts of God's faithful people in the early dawn, to herald its approach. The Sun of Righteousness has not yet risen; but many of God's people are noting the clear light now shining upon the Divine Word, and are realizing that it comes from Him and that He is preparing them through a better understanding of the Bible, to appreciate the glorious sunlight of Divine mercy which will soon overspread the world and scatter the darkness of earth's superstition, sin, and death.

And so, as we get the matter right ly adjusted before our minds, we get the true understanding, the special enlightenment needed in our day; and we are enabled to rightly divide the Word better than did our fathers so that to-day we can see, as our fathers did not see, the teaching of God's Word respecting the "High Calling" and "Restitution" — the spiritual portion of blessing for the Church, and the human portion of blessing for the world. We also see something about the times and seasons—Which apply to the Church and which apply to the world.

We are not to forget that the Lord promised that He would guide His people in the way of the Truth and show them things to come. We are to "STUDY" to show ourselves approved—study the doctrine, and endeavor to have our course of conduct harmonize with it—study to perform faithfully the duties of a loyal soldier of the cross of Christ.—2 Timothy 2:15.

Such alone are able to give thanks in the highest sense of the term; for they, better than others, appreciate the Divine Program and can fully endorse the words of our text. I urge all of this class to be very thankful, singing and making melody in your hearts to the Lord in respect to all your affairs, and waiting patiently for the full development of the Divine Purpose, assured by faith it will prove exceedingly, abundantly more than we could have asked or thought. I urge the remainder of mankind to cultivate thankfulness to whatever extent they can see and appreciate the Divine character, and to exercise faith therein. There is a blessing in it, not only for the present life, but as a preparation for the life to come.

Let Christians give thanks that by the grace of God their eyes and ears of understanding are opening to a better knowledge of the Divine character. Let them give thanks, not only for redemption from the death sentence, but also for their Call to saintship and its consequent sufferings in this present time and its promise of reward of glory on the spirit plane by and by. Let the world give thanks also, in proportion as they are able to discern God's goodness and mercy toward the human family—that eventually through the channel of the glorified Christ—Jesus, the Head, and the Church, the Body—the Divine blessing will be extended to every member of Adam's race, giving opportunity to all to attain to life everlasting with full human perfection and a world-wide Eden upon this now sin-cursed earth. Whoever gets the proper view of the Heavenly Father's character will thereafter be able to celebrate Thanksgiving Day much more intelligently and happily than ever before.

IT WAS KINDNESS TO LET THE BABY DIE, SAYS DOCTOR

A Surgical Operation Would Save Life but Imbecility and Criminal Career Would be the Result

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—The Bollinger baby, a defective mite, whose mother, on professional advice, decided it should not undergo an operation which probably would save its life, died last night.

The principal physical deformities of the baby are the closure of the intestinal tract, paralysis of the nerves of the right side of the face, and absence of the right ear, blindness of one eye and malformation of the shoulders. Dr. Haiselden who officiated at the birth, noted the absence of a neck. The brain he found to be only slightly subnormal, but the cranial nerves were absent or undeveloped.

Nature blundered when Mrs. Bollinger's baby was born, D. Haiselden, chief of the hospital staff, told the mother that a surgical operation would save the baby. He also told her that the child would grow up to manhood malformed, mentally defective, and probably become a criminal.

Conscience Clear.

"I have no doubt I will be called a murderer," said Dr. Haiselden today, "but my conscience tells me it would be wrong to let the child live. I will do nothing to hasten the death of the baby, but nature will be permitted to complete its bungling job."

Mrs. Bollinger, the baby's mother said she was reconciled. "I love the child as much as I love my three healthy children," she said. "But I would rather it should die than be an imbicile or a criminal."

The baby, born after its mother had been seriously ill with typhoid fever, came into the world last Friday.

Some Other Views.

The question of whether the plan to permit death to take a baby under such circumstances was put to several prominent Chicagoans today and here are their answers:

Mrs. Gertrude Howe Britton, social worker—"If possible, the child should be saved. Every child, once it is born, has the right to live."

Dr. John B. Murphy, noted surgeon—"We have no right to form judgment on whether an infant should live or die. I would not feel should live or die. I would not feel

Peter Hoffman coroner of Cook County—"A life is a life, regardless of its condition or the future one might guess it would have."

Rev. A. H. W. Anderson, rector All Saint's Episcopal Church—"The terrible handicap under which this child was born makes it an act of mercy to let it die.

Dr. Isaac A. Abt authority on children's diseases—"If I were convinced the child was doomed to a life of misery and possibly imbicility. I would let nature take its course."

Dr. Charles B. Younger—"Physicians have no right to take life. It is their duty to prolong it."

Born for a Purpose.

Miss Harriet Vittum, of Northwestern University Settlement—"I cannot help but feel that the child was born for some purpose."

Louis E. Phillips, Christian Scientist: "I would do the kindliest thing by leaving the child alone for nature to fulfil its own destiny. None can say how the intelligence back of the phenomena of the universe will express itself."

WEAK, AILING CHILDREN

Made Well and Strong by Simple Remedy

Here is another letter that has just come to our attention, showing the power of Vinol to build up health and strength for weak, puny, ailing children.

W. A. Smith, of Shanesville, Ohio, says:—"My little child was puny, weak and ailing, could not rest at night and would not eat. I learned about Vinol and tried it, and within a week noticed an improvement. The child's appetite improved, it slept well, strength and health were soon built up. We think Vinol is excellent for weak, puny children."

Vinol is a delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, containing beef peptone, which creates an appetite, tones up the digestive organs, enriches the blood and creates strength, children love to take it.

We ask all parents of weak, sickly, delicate children in this vicinity to try Vinol with the understanding that we will return your money if it fails to benefit your little ones.

ODD SCENES AT SALONIKI WHERE ALL SORTS OF PEOPLE ARE

French and Greeks Exchange Salutes But the British Acknowledge Only Their Own Officers

SALONIKA, Greece, Nov. 20—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—The very approach to Saloniki foreshadows the presence of war. The long reach of the Gulf of Saloniki reveals a continuous procession of ships going and coming, and from their standards trail the most unexpected flags: Roumania, Belgian, Dutch, Russian, Egyptian—all engaged in some way in victualling the foreign troops concentrated on the doorstep of the Balkans.

Huge trans-Atlantic lines, French and British, laden with soldiers, glide toward the harbor, whose entrance is guarded by a common tug metamorphosed into a warship by armor and a mounted gun or two. The warship at the gate of Greece's second port flies the French, not the Greek flag. Each entering vessel is hailed and while not visited, is requested to give an account of itself before it is permitted to press the gateway in the steel net, whose presence across the narrows is marked by a line of floats.

Strange Animated Scene.

Within the harbor, whose safety is secured by this net, against submarines, the scene is even more animated. Not since the last Balkan war have so many ships gathered before Saloniki. Out in the roadstead lie French and British warships, and one Italian man o' war. To defend the interests of Greece a tiny Greece destroyer hugs the shore, a pigmy among giants of war.

If the harbor of Saloniki is a conglomeration of strange flags and of every class of ships, it is as nothing in comparison with the quays. Not Port Said nor Marseilles ever knew so polyglot a babel or saw such a kaleidoscope of costumes. There are French "poilue" in the sky-blue uniforms, French Alpine chasseurs, Tam O'Shanters on the side of the head; French colonial troops—Turcos, Senegalais, in baggy khaki bloomers and short gaiters; French marines with red pompons on their round caps; French dragoons, with horse tails in their helmets; French officers of every description; French sailors, and, commonest of all, calm red-trousered French territorials. Now and then these carts draw to one side to make room for a column of Greek mountain artillery. Again straggling lines of Greek infantry take the right of way.

Tommy There Too.

Afoot, bands of British Tommies push their way down the crowded streets. British officers, canes in hand, sweep the sidewalks from side to side, driving the countless itinerant vendors into the street. French salute Greek; Greeks salute French. But the British salute only the British.

Cosmopolitan as are the inhabitants of Saloniki at any time, they are more so than ever now, increased as the population has been by refugees from Siberia, Macedonia and Thrace. Among the permanent inhabitants, to judge from the streets, Turks seem to predominate.

When Night Falls.

Beside the Greeks, the Jews and the Turks, the quays of Saloniki are picturesque also with bearded hook-nosed Leventines of non-descript nationality. Porters that might have stepped from the Arabian Nights.

When night falls the lights at the mastheads and in the portholes of the assembled ships spring out. At the docks a huge French transport is unloading its cargo of human beings. The shouts of the men, the clank of cranes come across the water without ceasing the whole night through.

At midnight the cafes close. The lights in the harbor go out one by one. Patrols of soldiers with bayonets set—French, Greek, British—march up and down the pitch-black side streets in search of stragglers. Save these there are no signs of war.

Britain's Ceaseless Watching of Sea That Has Nullified All Threats of German Craft

The First Lord of the Admiralty has announced that the losses inflicted upon German submarines have been formidable. By doing so Mr. Balfour crystalized the stories told by the naval men who have come in from the North Sea to those who move amongst them in the anchorages on the eastern seashore. But very little has been said so far about the methods followed by the navy in tracking and destroying the latter day pirates of the seas, and not very much about the number of German submarines which have been accounted for by the fleet. A great deal might be said on both points. There are 2,300 trawlers, minesweepers and other auxiliaries on duty, outside the regular service, keeping the North Sea clear. We always believed there was about 3,000 ships at work round our coast, and what is this matchless armada searching for on the lone wastes?

So far as the smallest patrol vessels are concerned, they have their month so divided up that more than half of the 30 days is spent on actual patrol work, and for about one-third they lie at their moorings, ready at any moment to go out and reinforce a given unit. The remaining few days they are in the harbor and the men are on shore leave. Take the men who are patrolling given tracts. They do ten miles either way—back and forward, back and forward, no change, no variety—looking, watching, ever ready. Night and day there stands the gun layer, his own master as to when he should fire. To watch these vessels from land, even at long intervals, as they pass back and forward grows tiresome. What is it to those on board whose eyes must never relax and whose watchfulness must never waver? In fine weather life is passable, but take it on the dirty winter nights they pass through. Where is the sport in living under conditions which pile torpedo boats above high-water mark, a March gale tossing them ashore like corks—and the gales of the North Sea are as fierce and bitter as on any ocean, for the terrible northeastern laden with the ice of Norway comes cutting deep into the sailors who man even the ships that patrol the Scottish firths. The cruisers on patrol are not so unfortunate in going to an anchorage after a short service or in obtaining the benefits of recuperating by a few days' shore leave. Respite from active service are now happily more numerous than in the anxious days when we thought the German fleet might come out, but it was a melancholy experience to move slowly about the North Sea, day after day, week after week, and month after month—nothing in sight but water, and no one on board knowing where they were, except the captain. It was an intense vigil, with ever the danger that the fate that overtook the Hawke and the Pathfinder in broad daylight might overtake them at any moment.

Tracing the Submarine.

The losses inflicted on the German submarines have been formidable; they are more than formidable, they are irretrievable. When this war started we had still to acquire actual experience in fighting the underwater craft. We had to learn, but after the Hogue, the Cressy, and the Aboukir there was a lull to the losses of the Pathfinder and the Hawke, and there was then a long interval before the Germans sank the Formidable. But we have grappled with the difficulty, and we have means for tracing submarines immediately they enter given areas that are amongst the most carefully guarded secrets of the navy. But what is common knowledge amongst those acquainted with naval work is that we can trace a submarine travelling under water through a curious formation of the wave it creates on the surface.

Our sailors are now trained to pick out this wave. Even laymen in navigation will readily understand that if there is a large object under the water, approximating a thousand tons, even at a considerable depth it will cause a displacement on the surface. This wave is not easy to pick out on the tumultuous sea, but we can do it, and, moreover, once we get on this wave there is no difficulty in following it, for the submarine is constantly sending up little air bubbles. Once on this track the submarine is doomed. It has no escape. But there are not many German submarines now. We keep sinking them, towing them in, blowing them up.

Life in these submarines is on a razor's edge. The Germans know that the fearless, tireless British navy has swept from the sea the bulk of its submarines. It takes years to train the high-skilled men for submarine work. If they have many boats left—and the facts are against them having many—they cannot have capable men or skilled officers to work the most delicate machine in the whole service of the sea.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

The overblouse has established itself as a prime favorite for summer dresses. It takes many forms, but none prettier than that shown in the accompanying illustration. In this gown the overblouse is shaped like the lower half of an ordinary loose bodice, and is cut away in an ornamental line at the top. Straight straps pass over the shoulders and hold the material in place. Under this is worn an ordinary shirt waist, which is made in the regulation manner. It is plain in both front and back and has a wide collar at the open neck. The sleeves are inserted with the normal armhole and may be left with a loose edge or gathered in at the back of the arm just below the elbow.

The skirt has a deep, fitted yoke which may have raised or regulation line at the top. To this is joined the lower portion of the skirt with a seam in front and back and with the gores circular. There is a cuff facing for the lower edge, but this may be omitted if preferred.

There is quite a fancy for these dresses with a plain blouse of crepe de Chine, voile or organdie, while the outer portion of the frock is of wash silk, taffeta, gingham, linen, pongee and other materials.

This would be a pretty model for a travelling dress of serge or gabardine with a waist of thin silk or crepe de Chine.

The dress pattern, No. 7299, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires for dress with skirt facing 4½ yards of 36 inch material, with ⅞ yards of 36 inch width for the waist.

This pattern can be obtained by sending cents to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

MRS. WORTHINGTON

Sues for Divorce, Says He Confessed

NEW YORK, Nov 19.—A divorce action based on the alleged confession of Edward H. Worthington, son of Charles C. Worthington, a capitalist, of Shawnee on Delaware, was begun in the Supreme Court by Mrs. Janet B. Worthington. She accuses her husband of misconduct with several women and narrates instances of his alleged neglect. She is the daughter of United States District Attorney Barnett, of Stroudsburg, Pa.

Mr Worthington is said to possess wealth through inheritances from his mother and relatives. When the late Mrs. Julia H. Worthington, his mother, divorced her husband he set apart a trust fund of $250,000 for her benefit. She received the income until her death, June 8, 1913, and left a will distributing the principal among her children.

Charles C. Worthington objected that the fund was to revert to him at her death and succeeded in recovering it. He is said to have liberally provided for his son, who lives with him. Henry R. Worthington, another son, is president of the Worthington Steam Pump Company.

Gets $80 Monthly Alimony.

Although Mrs. Worthington explained to Justice Giegerich that her husband does not deny the charges of misconduct against him, the Justice said he could not allow her more than $80 a month in alimony at present. He asserted that the wealth of the father had nothing to do with the amount which he could award to the wife pending trial of her action. Until Edward H. Worthington has received his various inheritances and has again obtained a satisfactory position the wife will be denied any substantial increase, it is said. She received $750 in counsel fees.

When Mr. Worthington received papers in the action at Shawnee on Delaware, he said that his attorneys were endeavouring to adjust his difficulties with the attorneys of his wife. The action was in the nature of a surprise, he asserted. He now is employed by the Shawnee Mower Company at $100 a month, the concern being owned by his father. The husband declares that he may be forced to pay for his board at his father's home in the near future, and that he has only $5 in the bank. His other income consists at present in $50 a month from realty left to him by his mother.

Mrs. Worthington says she was married in Welland, Canada, in 1909, and that the misconduct of her husband with "various women" occurred during the last two years. There are two children of the marriage, Edward Hedden Worthington six, and John Norton Worthington, two years old, both living with their mother at No. 644 Riverside Drive.

From 1911 to 1915 Mr. Worthington was employed by the Power Specialty Company as a salesman, with a Western territory. In September, 1914, he told his wife that he was going to pass a few days at the home of his father. Mrs. Worthington says, and did not return at all. After a time he wrote to her, she says, his letter stating that he had $7,000 in insurance in the event that anything should happen to him. He reminded her that at the death of his father he would receive $40,000, and would receive another $40,000 under the will of Theodore Miller. He already held an interest valued at $24,785 in the estate of his mother.

Known as "Jack."

Mrs. Worthington was known familiarly as "Jack" to her husband. Last August he wrote to her suggesting that their differences be arranged. He was in Chicago at the time, and she telegraphed a reply that she would come on at once. In return he telegraphed that she must not come because he was about to leave for Kansas on business, the wife says. She went to the offices of the Power Specialty Company, at No. 111 Broadway, and found out that he had not told the truth, she declares.

Mrs. Worthington says she went to Chicago September 1 and stopped at the Congress Hotel, where her husband said to her: "Yes, 'Jack,' I have been unfaithful to you. It happened down at the end of my territory with a married woman. If you forgive everything and let me come back and live with you again I will make a complete confession."

The two returned to this city and then went to the home of his sister, Mr. Julia Sawtelle, wife of Edward Sawtelle, at Englewood, N. J. Mrs. Sawtelle received $120,000 by her mother's will. Mrs. Worthington says she was in distavour there because of a misunderstanding of the relations between herself and her husband. She says she said to her husband before Mr. and Mrs. Sawtelle: "I want you to tell both Julia and 'Ned' before me that I am blameless in this affair and that you had no reason for your treatment of me this summer." Mr. Worthington is said to have replied:

"That is true, 'Jack' is right. I have not any reason for doing as I did."

Demands He Confess.

The wife says that she told him he must tell all about his unfaithfulness unless he wanted her to do so. He replied that he would tell Mr. Sawtelle alone, it is said. The two men took a walk, the wife says, and when they returned Mr. Sawtelle was much more cordial to her than he had been before.

10 CENT "CASCARETS" BEST LAXATIVE FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Don't Stay Constipated, Headachy, Bilious, With Breath Bad or Stomach Sour

No odds how bad your liver, stomach or bowels; how much your head aches, how miserable and uncomfortable you are from a cold, constipation, indigestion, biliousness and sluggish bowels—you always get relief with Cascarets.

Don't let your stomach, liver and bowels make you miserable. Take Cascarets to-night, put an end to the headachy, biliousness, dizziness, nervousness, sick, sour gassy stomach, bad cold, offensive breath and all other distress; cleanse your inside organs of all the bile, gases and constipated matter which is producing the misery.

A 10-cent box means health, happiness and a clear head for months. All druggists sell Cascarets. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too.

Stomach Was Bad.

Could Eat Hardly Anything.

When the stomach gets out of order the whole system seems to become affected in one way or an other. The breath becomes foul, the tongue furred, the appetite becomes disturbed, nausea and vomiting occur, there is a rising and souring of food caused by the acidity of the stomach, and the stomach and bowels become distended causing flatulency. Unless these symptoms are met with immediately, dyspepsia or some other serious trouble is liable to follow as a consequence.

That grand old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that there is not another medicine on the market to-day that can compare with it for the cure of all disturbances of the stomach.

Miss Lillian E. Phillips, Plumweesoop, N.B., writes: "My stomach was so bad I was in pain and misery. I could eat hardly anything. I had been treated by skillful doctors for it, but they did me no good. I was giving up in despair when I happened to hear of Burdock Blood Bitters. You can't think how fast it helped me, for I had only taken two bottles before I was better. I will recommend your medicine very highly to all my friends and sufferers."

His Rivals.

In Turkey it often happens that marriages are arranged affairs—arranged by the parents of the man and the woman. Such was the case, says Demetra Vaka in Haremlik, with Halil Bey and his bride. They had never seen each other, and at first it did not look as if the match would be a good one, since the lady was buried deep in German philosophies, in which the gentleman had little interest.

By the time I had parted from Halil Bey's fiancee I was so filled up with high ideals that I kept thinking, "Poor Halil Bey!"

The next morning I found Halil Bey in the garden, very impatient to hear all about his fiancee.

"Tell me," he cried out as soon as we had shaken hands, "is she beautiful?"

"Very," I answered. "But, my poor boy, she is crazy over Kant and Schopenhauer."

"Who are they?" he bellowed, thunder in his voice and fire in his eyes. "Tell me quick, and I will draw every drop of blood from their veins!"

"I have no doubt," I said, "that in a fist to fist encounter you would have the best of them, but they are both dead and gone, and only their miserable books are left to fight against."

"Oh," he laughed, "is that all? I think I can take care of that."

As events turned out, he did.

The Restful Life.

"We must live rhythmically if we would live healthfully," writes Grace Dawson in "How to Rest and Be Rested." "To live rhythmically we must not always strain tense nerves and muscles. We must learn to relax, that we may know how to economize our nervous and muscular power, so that some part of us will always be resting while another is at work. This is living by the law of rhythm. It is the secret of working tirelessly, resting restfully, resisting disease, throwing off morbid feelings, of living healthfully and feeling zest and enjoyment in our lives."

We are living unrhythmically "when we lie awake in the night with harassed, with anxious, worrying thoughts; when we rush to the station in great anxiety and reach it in such good time that we catch the train before the one we went for; whenever we get a feeling of being 'rushed' or 'driven' or 'tied to time'."

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Lustre and Abundance

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur restores its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the tonic at home or get from any drug store a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully and removes dandruff, stops itching and falling hair, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, after another application or two, it becomes dark, glossy and abundant and you appear years younger.

Did His Bit.

There was once a rich but very mean old lady who paid her servants as little as possible and kept very few. One of her staff was a lumbering, rabbit-looking lad of twelve, who answered the door and the knives and the windows, waited at table, weeded the garden, washed the pootle and had the rest of the time to himself. One visitor asked him: "Well, my boy, and what do you do here?" "I'm a butler and a gardener out of a job," snapped the lad curtly.

A Tremendous Allied Offensive At The Dardanelles

A New Fleet Of British Submarines In The Balkans

ATTACKS ON THIS COUNTRY PLANNED BY U.S. GERMANS

British Embassy Receives Reports Specifying Cleveland, Buffalo and Other Lake Ports as Points From Which Attacks Were to Be Made---Reports of Serbian Victory Over the Bulgarians Has Been Confirmed---To-day's War Bulletins.

WASHINGTON, Cleveland, Nov. 22.—Buffalo, Toledo, Detroit, and other Great Lakes cities have been specified in the reports to the British Embassy as points from which an attack on Canada was to be launched by German reservists, the British Embassy said to-day. So far, however, nothing has been discovered to warrant a protest by this government, it was said.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The report of a big Serbian victory over the Bulgarians at Lekovats, on the Nish-Salonika railway, has been confirmed by messages from the Serbian Legations at Athens and Geneva.

ROTTERDAM, Nov. 22.—A tremendous offensive has been begun by the Allies at the Dardanelles, said a Constantinople despatch to the Koelnische Zeitung to-day. The Dardanelles offensive is regarded here as Lord Kitchener's negative answer to suggestions in England that the Gallipoli campaign be abandoned, following Sir Ian Hamilton's recall from the command of the expedition. General Munroe, who succeeded him, is understood to have recommended that the troops engaged in the Dardanelles land campaign be withdrawn, considering them engaged in a hopeless task. The London Cabinet War Council decided, however, not to take so important a step without further advice, and Kitchener visited the Peninsula in person a few days ago to look over the situation.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—In a hot attack with bombs, Australian and New Zealand troops at the Dardanelles have gained fresh ground on the west shore of the Gallipoli Peninsula. They occupied part of the Turkish underground works in the Anzac zone, killing many of the defenders.

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—By forcing an entrance into the Lab River Valley on Sunday the Kaiser's troops are now in a position to strike direct for the Serb centre, midway between Mitorvitza and Pristina, about 20 miles east of the Montenegrin frontier, an official statement announced to-day.

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—Great activity by the French artillery in the Western war zone was reported in to-day's War Office statement, between the Meuse and Moselle, in Champagne, and east of Dameville. On the Eastern front "a feeble Russian advance" against Illuxt Cemetery was repulsed north-west of Dvineburg, said the War Office.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 22.—Britain has added a big new fleet of submarines to its E boat forces in the Baltic. A British cruiser and a torpedo boat flotilla convoyed the undersea craft on their voyage from the English coast. It was learned to-day that this was an explanation of recent stories of naval activity in the Cattegat.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—"Grenade fighing is in progress in the Artois region," stated to-day's official communique. "In Lorraine there have been patrol encounters. Otherwise the situation is unchanged and comparatively quiet."

ROME, Nov. 22.—Advices from Athens to-day indicate that the King and the Government fear a revolutionary outbreak as the result of indefiniteness in the Grecian war policy.

Large bodies of troops are patrolling the streets and guarding the royal palace, and the King and Cabinet are in session continuously. The impression prevails in many quarters that King Constantine will be forced by his own people to submit to the British Allies' demands.

OTTAWA, Nov. 22.—H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General, this morning forwarded a big subscription to the Canadian Government War Loan.

Although the Canadian War Loan was only thrown open to subscribers this morning, its complete success is already assured. The chartered banks of Canada will alone take up 50 per cent. of the loan. They have notified the Minister of Finance that they will subscribe $25,000,000 of the loan. The life insurance companies will contribute about $10,000,000. When it comes to allotment, however, the private investors of small sums will be given the first consideration.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Greece's terms for entering the war on the side of the Allies are that her army be reinforced with 500,000 Anglo-French troops or that definite arrangements be concluded with Roumania for a joint Greek-Roumanian invasion of Bulgaria.

A source close to the Greek Legation making this statement today added that Greece would be forced to make her choice between the Entente and the Alliance within a few days.

Why He Could Win.

A keen golfer, but middling player, who, paying his annual visit to a certain seaside course, remarked to his caddie:

"By the way, I played a round with Tom McGregor the last time I was here. Grand player, McGregor!"

"Aye," said the caddie, "but ye could bate McGregor noo."

"Do you think so?" exclaimed the gratified visitor, well aware of McGregor's prowess.

"Aye," drawled the caddie, "McGregor's dead."

GERMAN LIE IS NAILED

LONDON, Nov. 22.—"Absolutely false" is the Admiralty's official answer today to the German charge that Great Britain is sending transports with troops and munitions to Salonica disguised as hospital ships. The British official denial was given in the newspapers, with the additional comment, "British hospital ships always have been and always will be used under the conditions prescribed by Geneva and The Hague conventions.

Former German Consul General at New York and Other Officials of the Hambourg American Line Are Now on Trial

A GIGANTIC PLOT

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The government began closing in to-day upon the men who have directed the bomb plots, fires in munition works and the fomenting of strike disorders in the interests of warring European powers.

Karl Buenz, former German Consul General at New York, and other officials and employees of the Hamburg American line, went on trial before Federal Judge Howe, charged with fraudulently conspiring to furnish supplies to German commerce raiders. Before another fortnight the government expects indictments to be returned against at least a half a dozen alleged ring leaders in bomb and munition plots, including one or two women prominent in American society. The Grand Jury will hear what a fund of at least forty million dollars was at the disposal of one man for the purpose of stopping shipment of munitions to the allies at any cost.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The name of Ambassador Von Bernstorff and Capt. Boyed and Von Papen of the German Embassy mentioned to-day at the opening of the trial of the four Hamburg-American officials charged with filing false manifests and violating neutrality of the United States Assistant U. S. Attorney Wood asked each German if he knew any of the German diplomats personally or had had any dealings with them. No jurors had been accepted when the court recessed for luncheon. One talesman after another was excused when he admitted personal feelings either for or against Austro-Germans.

HIS COMRADES PAID THEIR LAST RESPECTS TO PTE. FRED SAWYER

Military Funeral This Afternoon For Member of 93rd Battalion Who Died on Friday Afternoon—Many Orders Issued To-day—Eye-sight Test is to Be Modified—Another New Battalion in This District—To-day's Military News

After an impressive service in the armouries conducted by Hon. Major Davidson, chaplain of the 93rd Battalion, the body of Pte. Fred Sawyer, A company, 93rd Battalion, who passed away on Friday last, was escorted to its last resting place in the Little Lake cemetery this afternoon by sorrowing comrades of the 93rd. The body was escorted from the dead soldier's residence, Concession street, to the armouries by a firing squad from No. 1 platoon and the pall bearers. Inside the drill hall, Hon. Major Davidson conducted the solemn service, after which the funeral cortege was formed.

The firing party, in charge of Sergt. Wm Theobald and composed of members of No. 1 platoon marching with rifles reversed, led the impressive procession. Then came the band of the 93rd playing the Dead March in Saul, and then the hearse with the coffin draped in the Union Jack and with the pallbearers marching three on each side. The bearers were all members of No. 1 platoon, as follows: Lance Corp. P. Smith, Pte. Walton, Pte. S. McCabe, Pte. J. Bacon, Pte. Pear and Pte Sid Allen. The members of A and B companies followed the hearse with the officers of the battalion. The rank and file of the 93rd wore their great coats. The members of the Army Service Corps, who are in Peterborough, marched with their infantry comrades.

At the cemetery the impressive details of a military funeral were carried out with the firing of three volleys over the grave of the dead soldier and the sounding of "The Last Post."

The service at the armouries was conducted by Hon. Major Davidson, chaplain of the 93rd, assisted by Rev. W. H. White, rector of St. Luke's, Ashburnham.

The signalling section of the 93rd Battalion has been organized by Lieut. Gillham, with Sergt. Frobisher as signalling sergeant. The section had its first lectures this morning. The following have been placed in the signalling section so far: Pte. A. Edwards, Frank Crowell, M. Shaw, A. Barrows, C. Ferguson, E. Francis and A. Knox, while Signaller E. Watson, transferred from the 39th will join the section to-morrow.

The following recruits have passed the medical examination for the 93rd Battalion in the past two days:

Jos. Abrahams, 1st Perry street.
John Miller, Perth, Ont.
Stanley Root, 467 Charlotte street.
Thos. Downing, Bridgenorth.
Arthur W. Millgate, Bailieboro.
Laurence A. Megeson, 305 Stewart street.
Chas. Kelhele, Peterborough.

In the casualty list to-day appears the name of Pte. Leslie Jewell, of the 39th Battalion, who is given as seriously ill. This is undoubtedly Pte. Jewell of Peterborough, who left here with the 57th quota to the 39th Battalion. Pte. Jewell was a traveller for Hopwood's before he enlisted and resided on Water street. In the casualty list his next of kin is given as St. Catharines.

Easier Sight Test.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—The Militia Department is preparing a modified eye test for recruits, which will not be so stringent as that now in use. The test in use now is the same as that used for the South African war, where much of the rifle fire was at 200 yards and upwards. There is not the need of such keen eyesight for the fighting in France, and the test has been made much less difficult in England for this war, because the range of rifle shooting is comparatively short.

The modified test will allow a lot of men to join who have not been able to do so in the past. It is estimated that fully 25 per cent. of all the men who apply are turned down on account of their eyes.

Another new battalion will be raised in this district, to be known as the 130th of Northumberland with Lieut.-Col. Floyd as commanding officer. Lieut.-Col. Floyd is attached to the 9th Infantry Brigade.

Col. Henning received word of the above new battalion to-day, but has no idea who the officers will be until he confers with Lieut.-Col. Floyd who will come to headquarters next week.

Kingston, Nov. 22.—It will be welcome news to many men who have been refused the chance to serve their country because they were an inch or so under the regulation height, to know that the 59th Battalion is making arrangements to organize a bantam company.

The minor of the battalion officers should meet with general approval as there are many men physically fit for service who are just a slight fraction under the height of five feet two inches required by the regulations. It is proposed to accept men of five feet one inch or probably five feet. There should be little difficulty in raising the company.

The Kingston Standard says: Seven recruits, five of whom are Canadian born and two Englishmen born, arrived in the city yesterday afternoon from Peterborough to join the 43rd Battery. The men were recruited at Peterborough from Lang Hall, Smith Township. The men was Harry O. Winchelsea, who walked from the 8th to Coldwater, where he got a lift through the courtesy of a railroad man who carried him gratis to Peterborough. The men were Arthur Hershell, Kenneth McClelland, Fred Princeton, C. E. Hill, Kingston, Asa Downie, Deuro, Harry O. Winchelsea, England and Frank Godfrey, England.

With the arrival of the seven men yesterday, Peterborough's contribution to the 43rd Battery now totals 125 men and five officers.

The band of the 93rd Battalion is going out on a recruiting mission the latter end of this week, when they will play in Port Hope, Cobourg and Millbrook. The band will leave on the morning G.T.R. train on Friday for Port Hope, where they will give a programme. They will then march from

CHARGE OF VAGRANCY WAS NOT SUSTAINED

Mrs. Oliver Was Discharged in Court This Morning—County Constable Archie Moore Gives a Statement of His Connection With the Affair.

WANTS AN INQUIRY

In this morning's session of the County Police Court, a charge of vagrancy preferred against Mrs. Alice Oliver, was dismissed by Magistrate Lazzley, after considerable evidence had been heard. The information was amended by striking out the name of Alexander Oliver. The latter died in the County Jail, following his arrest by County Constable Moore.

The examination of the witnesses was confined to evidence bearing on the charge against Mrs. Oliver. Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the latter and on her behalf, entered a plea of not guilty. He later assigned the case to his partner Mr. McElderry.

County Constable Moore demanded that an investigation be held, as his reputation had been injured by a letter appearing in the public press, in which it was charged that the late Alexander Oliver had been improperly treated.

Questioned by County Constable Moore, Andrew Hogg, at whose home Alex. Oliver was arrested on Thursday evening, said this morning he visited for the first time the place where the Olivers lived. He saw a stove, a mattress, some quilts and two raw turnips. The mattress and quilts were dirty. Rolled up in paper was part of a loaf of bread.

Oliver Asked for Bread

Last Wednesday he has given them some bread. Oliver have asked for the bread.

"Did you complain to anybody about the couple?"

"I complained to Reeve McIntosh and Councillor Bell. I thought they were in need and considered them to be the poorest people I had ever seen." He had seen Mrs. Oliver hauling wood along the road.

On Thursday afternoon he saw Mrs. Oliver sitting beside the stove in the house. When the auto arrived at his yard, he heard County Constable Moore suggest that Mrs. Oliver leave the auto and go into the house and get warm.

At this point Magistrate Lazzley asked for evidence bearing on the charge of vagrancy.

Not Properly Clothed.

Witness did not think the woman was properly clothed. The constable asked for a coat, and on securing one placed it on Mrs. Oliver. She was also given a cup of tea by witness's daughter. Oliver was using abusive language toward the constable. He did not see the constable admonish Mrs. Oliver. "I thought he was using Mrs. Oliver right.

Several times on a previous Oliver had asked him for bread. He did not know of any trouble caused by the couple as he lay three miles distant. He had feared that something would happen the couple, and that they might be found dead. When he saw the woman on the road, she was not properly clothed and wore clothing she were apparent to-day.

Reeve McIntosh of North Monaghan said that the council had been made to believe regarding the destitute circumstances of the couple. One of the councillors had been sent to interview them and try to persuade them to go to some home.

Once again Mr. Kerr said that the evidence be confined to the charge and Magistrate Lazzley pointed out that he was not holding an investigation.

Constable Moore stated that the conditions in the Oliver home were not in a tidy condition.

Mr. Kerr submitted that the proper people and acting upon the circumstances.

Action by Council

We had a meeting here last Wednesday and took action on a motion that went through committee and witness who wished to see what took place. I called Mr. Moore on the telephone that night. We also had the advice of P. C. Chief Thompson. We wrote to the House of Refuge at Lindsay and as yet have had no reply.

FRAGMENTS OF A GERMAN TAUBE IS SENT TO PETERBORO'

Interesting Souvenir of the European Battlefields Sent to Peterborough Men—One Recalls an Incident Described Several Times in the Press

A GERMAN CAP BADGE

The Examiner was shown two very interesting souvenirs of the European battle field to-day. One was a fragment of a German "Taube" or aeroplane which was sent to Mr. Chas. Duggan of Peterborough by a relative, Pte. Patrick Duggan, formerly of this city who is at the front with the first Canadian contingent.

The souvenir, which consists of a piece of the cooling fan of the Taube, has an interesting history, inasmuch as it formed part of the German aircraft that was shot down in the Canadian lines a few weeks ago, an incident that was mentioned by Lieut. Matthews and other Peterborough boys in recent letters. Mounted on the Taube when it descended was a Canadian machine gun which had been captured in the second battle of Ypres.

Another souvenir displayed to-day was a cap badge taken from the helmet of a dead German officer and sent to Pioneer Sergt. E. Baumer of the 93rd Battalion by a relative in the French army.

MEETING OF THE GOLF CLUB

Board of Directors Re-elected — Money Donated for Patriotic Purposes

A meeting of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club was held on Saturday afternoon, when the following directors were re-elected: Messrs. P. Campbell, D. Mulholland, B. D. Hall, A. H. Stratton and E. G. Patterson.

The sum of twenty dollar was subscribed to each of the following: Patriotic Fund and the Overseas Tobacco Fund.

WOMAN FAINTED ON GEORGE STREET

A woman who gave her name as Mrs. Bloomsburg, 340 Aylmer street, fainted at the corner of George and Charlotte streets on Saturday evening shortly after six o'clock. She was carried into McDermid and Jury's drug store, after which she was removed to her home. She was accompanied by Police Constable McArthur.

Gospel Hall

There was a good attendance at the Gospel Hall last evening. The speaker, Mr. T. C. Yingst, took for his subject "Some familiar text. Dec. 17 Verses to be learned." He said that it was said of John Wesley that he preached one thousand sermons from that text. The speaker showed that man in his unregenerate state was at enmity with God, and quoted Rom. c. 7. The carnal mind is enmity against God, for it is not subject to the law of God neither indeed can be," so that if a person died without being born of the spirit and was admitted into heaven there would be an enemy of God, a rebel, a sinner in heaven, and what kind of a heaven would that become. He said there would be war very soon in heaven. Hence the Great Preacher and Teacher said "Verily, verily I say unto thee except a man be born again he cannot enter the Kingdom of God" Jno. 3 5 Con.

"If I were to die, you would never get another husband like me." "What makes you think I'd ever want another husband like you?"

ENLIST YOUR SAVINGS.

If we can't enlist to fight with a gun, perhaps we can enlist our spare money in the Canadian war loan, and in this way assist Canada very substantially in waging war. The Canadian war loan for fifty millions is now offered for public subscription, and is sure to be readily subscribed. Hardly had the lists been opened than His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, forwarded a subscription for a big slice of the loan. There are two or three reasons why this loan should speedily be fully subscribed, or even oversubscribed. One is that by doing this Canadians will show confidence in themselves, and in the financial resources of the country. We have always been borrowers from abroad; but if we can take up a loan of fifty millions it will show that we are more self-contained than we have shown ourselves to be in the past. Then we shall show the enemies of Canada and the Empire that we can stand the acid test of sincerity by loosening our purse strings in the greatest cause that has ever appealed to our people. We shall show in addition to what we have done, that we are as ready to embark our money as our men in the fight. Then not the least attraction of the loan is its gilt-edge character—undeniable security and good earning capacity. The bonds are offered at 97½, and the interest rate is 5 per cent., which will net considerably more. The denominations of the bonds will be from $100 to $5,000, so that the small capitalist will be able to invest savings that now only bring three per cent.

SIR WILFRID'S SEVENTY-FOURTH.

On Saturday, Nov. 20th, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Canada's grand old man, passed with alert and elastic step, the seventy-fourth milestone in the journey of life, "still," as he himself has put it, "clear of eye and sound of step," and still clear of mind and sound at heart, a Canadian of Canadians, a staunch imperialist and still a mighty factor in the public life of the Dominion, and in the politics of the Empire His birthday brought messages of congratulation from all parts of Canada, as from the chief countries of the Empire. Sir Wilfrid is a political knight sans peur et sans reproche and, in his personal and public life, sans tache. Few men have given greater, more devoted, more disinterested and fruitful service to Canada and the Empire than Sir Wilfrid Laurier has done in his forty or more years of public life; and at three score and fourteen he is still fit; still in the harness, beloved and trusted leader of a great party, and even in an ex-official capacity wielding a benign influence upon public affairs, unprecedented in the case of any other Canadian statesman. He has been a unifying force in confirming the fundamentals of Canadian nationality; and as highly as he is esteemed for the patent results of his services, history alone will give him the full credit for the steady way he has stood by Canada through all his public career, but never more steadily and staunchly than in the country's hour of test, through which she is now passing. Ad multos annos, Sir Wilfrid.

THREE-CENT STAMP DEMANDED.

It may not be timely, in one sense to worry the government just now when it is up to the eyes in war work, but it is timely in another sense to call attention to one little thing which is a fly in the ointment to a great many million persons many million times. Our government has many departments, and while some, like that of the Minister of War, are busy, other departments are not engaged in much more than the mechanical routine of administration. For instance, the Postmaster-General, is not so much occupied that he cannot give attention to the little matter of stamps. Everybody feels the inconvenience and annoyance of having to use two postage stamps when one would much better serve. We don't complain very much over having to spend an extra cent whenever we stamp a city or other letter; but we are annoyed at having to lick two stamps when one operation would answer. We have to put the value of three cents upon our letters now; and it would be an immense convenience to have a three-cent stamp. We have no longer penny postage. The exigencies of revenue demanded that we should practically revert to the old-time rate, three cents for every letter. The stamp question gives another illustration of how often we do things without thinking, or without thinking far enough. When Finance Minister White decreed the war stamp he felt that we should feel a patriotic glow of sacrifice in sticking a war stamp alongside the regular two-cent stamp. He found that the war stamp issue was ignored and very soon permission was given to pay the war tax by any equivalent of the war cent stamp. Now he must know that the public is somewhat disgusted over being compelled to use two stamps, not on account of the additional cost, but of the additional inconvenience. In demanding a three-cent stamp one is not guilty of thereby criticising the government. So warm a friend of the government as the Mail and Empire, whose loyalty to its party is never allowed to be forgotten, demands a three-cent stamp. The basis of such a demand, outside the party organ, is not criticism, but common sense and public convenience. It may seem a small matter to become concerned over the denomination of a stamp; but great things are made up of the small in bulk. The ten or twelve millions of yearly postal revenue comes from the sale of so small a thing as a one-cent or two-cent stamp. By all means give us a three-cent stamp, and thus eliminate the millions of pin-pricks the public receive every day over the necessity of using two stamps when one would do, not only as well, but much better. We should then have a warstamp we should be proud of instead of the washed-out and disreputable defaced, one-cent stamp that now passes current.

HOME NEWSPAPERS FOR THE FRONT.

For some time to come we need not expect to find an end of all the little, but effectively great, things we are called upon to do for our fighting Canadian soldiers. An infinity of local agencies, from the Red Cross to the Cent-a-Day Club, is in operation, furnishing an infinite variety of little things to cheer the soldiers in the hospitals or in the trenches. It seems there is need and opportunity for another little agency to bring the biggest little cheer to the fighting lads — home newspapers. We at home, with our comfortable, fireside, slippered, home-circle experience of the home newspaper, can form no conception of the wild welcome the home newspaper gets from the man in the battlefield bivouac. We, however, know how we fret and fume and prance, and, some few of the more degenerate of us, swear, if our daily newspaper is not delivered to the minute. If we do this among comfortable surroundings, with full easy lives and the happy course of living pursuing the even tenor of its way, we can sympathize with the newsless plight of the soldier boys, wet and weary, seeing every day the same sanguinary sights, hearing the same thunder of the big guns, and the same ripping air-split of rifle shots, etc., etc., and deprived of nearly all the commonest comforts we enjoy. How much more welcome would be the rare relief from trench work, if the boys were welcomed when they fell back with a home paper, which they would read all over, even to the patent medicine and skin-fit corset advertisments. How deep the interest they would take in reading of who enlisted, who is back, broken and bruised from the war zone, and how we welcome him; what we are doing from day to day in looking after our warriors at war to show our appreciation; of who's dead, of who's born, and who's married; whether or not the city money is still falling into the outfall sewer; how the incinerator sins; who got the snow ploughing contract; who are the candidates for the mayoralty and aldermanity; and a thousand and one things we interest ourselves in at home, and value more lightly than the warsick, homesick soldiers in the fighting line would do. How we could thus cheer them, is worth thinking about. Why can't we get some organized way of getting the home newspaper to the away-from-home soldier lads? It seems that the matter could be easily managed and managed. Could there not be some arrangement made with subscribers to carefully save their daily newspapers to be called for at regular intervals and sent regularly to the front. Isn't it worth trying? It may seem to us a small thing but, every little helps; every little comfort we can bring to the soldiers in the wallow and welter of the trenches in another bright spot in the fighting man's monotonous and strenuous life—every moment next door to death.

ARM-CHAIR CAMPAIGN CRITICS CO-OPERATE WITH OUR ENEMIES

The critics of the British campaign may be divided into two classes—those who know something about what they are talking about; and those who don't. Naturally the latter are in the great majority, and therefore make the most noise. It is interesting and instructive to note that those who have actually seen something of the military operations are generally optimistic; those who have not are apt to be pessimists. The latter class cannot do very much to help the nation and the one thing they could do they won't—that is to hold their silly tongues. They must talk about things they do not begin to understand, if only as a slight tribute to their own self-importance; as a delicate recognition of their own transcendent perspicacity.

Mr. Sydney A. Moseley, an official corre-pondent who labours under the disadvantage of knowing something through having seen a good deal of them under favourable conditions declares in an article in the Contemporary Review, that the situation in the Dardanelles has never been so bad as some of these washerwomanish experts have made out. He says: "I confess I have little patience when I think of these pseudo-patriots spouting on what should be done—minding everybody else's business but their own. I am at heart a pessimist; in war time I am an optimist, firstly because it is half the battle, and secondly because then the battle is never lost till it is won, and we are far from losing the battle in the Dardanelles. It will never be believed that the lowering of our morale has been caused—and is being caused—by idle gossipers in mess tents and wayside taverns."

He is convinced that the Dardanelles will be forced. It is just a question of sticking at it. At one time it was an axiom that however difficult a task we would stick at it. Now some of us begin to funk it instead. And the worst sinners among these old washer-ladies have not so much as seen Gallipoli, and would not know a mess tent from a mushroom. They might recognize a wayside tavern, because they would be aided by a fine natural instinct and a wide experience. Certainly it seems to indicate a falling off in British stamina when so many of our people get so easily discouraged. Mr. Moseley remarks: "The disloyal pessimists have said that so far as the naval part of the campaign is concerned, it is a closed chapter. We have run away from the Austrian and German submarines. I believed that until I got out there, and when I say that the neighbourhood of the Dardanelles is simply packed with warships, which are daily pounding away at the Turkish forts and positions as they did from the first, the public who have been fed up with gossip of our enemy's agents and our own frightened friends, will scarcely believe it. But it is so. We have the situation well in hand. Except for the Suvla landings, of which I shall speak later, we have every reason to feel proud of our accomplishments in a very difficult campaign. No other nation could have done better."

We may feel sure that no other nation could have done as well. Everybody knew that the Dardanelles was a big problem to tackle. But why cannot our lugubrious washerwomen leave it to the enemy agents to do their own croaking? Why need our frightened friends join in the chorus to discourage our own people, to weaken our influence with the Allies and the neutrals, and to stimulate the drooping courage of the hungry and war-weary Huns? To call pessimism just now disloyal is not too strong an expression, and it has not a particle of justification in existing conditions or in the knowledge and mental capacity of the critics.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

DIDN'T SAY ENOUGH.

An American woman writer describes an interview with the Queen of Greece, and pictures her as most womanly. Also the Queen "talked freely about the war," expatiating proudly on the "wonderful German organization." However, her womanliness did not happen to say anything about Belgium, the Lusitania, poison-gas, poisoned wells, baby-killing, Miss Cavell or the Ancona.—Ottawa Journal.

SENDING CANADIAN NEWSPAPERS TO THE FIGHTING CANADIANS

It is a difficult matter to keep the troops at the front constantly supplied with recent Canadian news. It has been impossible to devise any system for the official distribution of Canadian papers on a large scale The following letter, however, from Lady Mabelle Egerton, a daughter of Lord Brassey, who is in charge of "The Coffee Shop," Reve Gouche, Station, France, indicates that the sending of Canadian papers to points where Canadian troops are passing through would be one way out of the difficulty:

Lady Egerton says: "I receive a large number of Canadian papers each week which are very much appreciated by the men who pass through this coffee shop. Some of them have never seen Canadian papers elsewhere. It would be a convenience if each bundle was marked as to the area the papers come from. The Ottawa papers are marked outside, but not the others. I get comparatively few Ontario papers, and the men from Ontario are much disappointed. From British Columbia I get a great many. Sometimes when I have heard of a large Canadian contingent going through the junction outside here I have sent papers out to meet them."

The best way to ensure that the Canadian soldier gets his home papers is for relatives or friends to send individual packets through the mail. Failing that, it might be a good idea for each community to appoint a newspaper committee to look after its men in this respect. This is a small matter which if properly attended to would greatly increase the soldier's comfort. Bundles of newspapers sent to the Red Cross along with other literature go to the hospitals and do not reach the men in the field. The provision of newspapers for the troops in the field is beyond the proper scope of Red Cross work.

THE LAW AND ITS WAY OF DEALING WITH LAW-BREAKERS

To Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,— If the citizens of our city depended entirely upon the civic authorities and others who find it necessary to proclaim their goodness of heart from the house tops (in order to make a livelihood) to look after the old and the poor, there would be many a shocking case similar to what took place last week.

I agree with Mr. Kerr that a searching inquiry should be made and all the facts should be brought out, and if some of the people have been placing too much dependence upon the law, the professional moralist and alms giver, show them their fault. In every community there is a certain element that will not hesitate to make personal capital, political or otherwise, out of circumstances of this nature. Peterborough is well supplied with individuals of this kind, judging from the way some of our outcast and fallen women have been advertised for their benefit. Thank God we have many noble charity workers who are not of the limelight variety and they feel the disgrace of this Oliver tragedy very keenly.

When law is enforced only for the protection of the public it is a bad state of affairs, but when justice and law are administered in a particular manner to advance their political or material interests first of those in authority and the public afterwards it is even worse. It is time the citizens woke up to the fact that there is something rotten in the state of Denmark The law says that a drunken person may not be supplied with liquor. Is it not a fact that shortly after seven o'clock any Saturday evening there are a number of drunks to be seen upon our streets? Where do they come from? I may not know what the law calls a drunken man. If some of those to be seen are not drunk then some one ought to ring up the ambulance as they must be very sick or crazy.

To one who knows the business and the way it's conducted the enforcement of the liquor law is a farce in this city and it is played for political benefit. A poor unfortunate married man with a large family who has none too much sense at any time, and to whom to serve liquor to would be a crime, was released from gaol two weeks ago. He was served with liquor frequently and sent home to his wife and family in a beastly condition. If the authorities did not know where and by whom he was served, why? The neighbours knew that he was selling things out of the house to get money for liquor. When he got drunk the police knew the hotelkeeper had no more use for him; he was again arrested.

No liquor dealer knows the capacity of his customers and when he sees his victim getting more than he can handle the law says he must stop. It also says he cannot allow drunken men around his place of business; he must get the brute away. It is none of his funeral if the police get him or that he gets home to his wife and family. He gave him his money's worth and obeyed the law We sell him this privilege and with the money we pay the policemen and keep a farm to place him on when the poor unfortunate is no longer any use to himself or anyone else. Any one who has an interest in the poor and the old (and who should not) knows that all shocking tragedies are not made public or do not take place in the tales an interest in the poor and the if the people of this city do not control their thirst for wealth and position we in a few years will have nothing on the German for kultur

If a merchant or a manufacturer is willing to spend good money for advertising, to ask you to try his store or his product, it stands to reason that he must have something worth offering. Otherwise you would not go back, or you would not again purchase the product, and the first sale would be the last. In that case advertising would NOT pay. It only pays when it brings continuous patronage, and to do that there must be real value given. That is the reason advertised stores or products are almost invariably good. It will pay you to patronize the advertisers.

Appeals to the Canadian People To Support Loan

OTTAWA, Nov. 22—In a brief statement issued last night by the Minister of Finance announcing that the Canadian war loan of $50,000,000 is now offered for public subscription attention is drawn to the fact that "the Government confidently appeals to the Canadian people to support this loan, and thus further demonstrate the strength, unity and solidarity of the Empire, and our invincible determination to prosecute the war to a victorious conclusion."

The Finance Department has sent out about a million prospectuses of the loan, which were available for distribution this morning. These prospectuses and the new-paper advertisements contain full information as to the mode of subscribing and all the conditions of the loan.

There is little doubt but that the whole issue will speedily be subscribed for. The preliminary intimations received by the Minister of Finance as to intending subscribers for large amounts justify the prediction that a loan of twice the size could be successfully floated. Later a second loan may be required.

It is worth noting in this connection that Canada's war loan of $50,000,000 will enable the Dominion to finance its share of the war expenditures for almost four months.

The issue is to total $50,000,000 of 6 per cent. bonds, maturing December 1st, 1925, and repayable at par. The issue price is to be 97 1-2, and a full half year's interest will be paid on June 1st, 1916.

Applications accompanied by a 10 per cent. deposit of the amount subscribed must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank, and such forms may be had at any bank or the office of the Receiver-General. Ten per cent. must be paid on application, 7 1-2 per cent. on January 3, 20 per cent on February 1, 20 per cent. March 1, 20 per cent. April 1, and 20 per cent. on May 1, 1916. All payments are to be made to the bank, to the credit of the Minister of Finance.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, and $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

Subscription lists will close on or before November 30.

A despatch received this afternoon states that the Duke of Connaught placed a subscription of generous figures the moment the loan was announced.

There is only one good point about big troubles—they eat up little ones.

A Proverb Revised.—"A friend in need," said a writer, "is a friend you dont need."

BLUE CROSS FUND.

An Appeal.

I'm only a cavalry charger.
And I'm dying as fast as I can
(For my body is riddled with bullets—
They've potted both me and my man);
And though I've no words to express it,
I'm trying this message to tell
To kind folks who work for the Red Cross—
Oh, please help the Blue one as well!

My master was one in a thousand,
And I loved him with all this poor heart
(For horses are built just like humans,
Be kind to them—they'll do their part),
So please send out help for our wounded,
And give us a word in your prayers—
This isn't so strange as you'd fancy,
The Russians do it in theirs.

I'm only a cavalry charger,
And my eyes are becoming quite dim
(I really don't mind, though I'm done for,
So long as I'm going to him);
But first I would plead for my comrades,
Who're dying and suffering, too—
Oh, please help the poor wounded horses;
I'm sure that you would—if you knew.

All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Applications, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. The bank will issue a provisional receipt.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch of any chartered bank in Canada, and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the January instalment.

Scrip certificates payable to bearer will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds without coupons.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons will be payable free of exchange at any branch of any chartered bank in Canada.

Holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds with coupons, payable to bearer or registered, without payment of any fee, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert, without fee, into fully registered bonds without coupons at any time on application in writing to the Minister of Finance.

The issue will be exempt from taxes including any income tax imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

The loan will be repaid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Recognized bond and stock brokers will be allowed a commission of one-quarter of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications which bear their stamp.

Subscription Lists will close on or before 30th November, 1915.

Flat Backs

Below The Waist Line

The Silhouette which Drescoll, Marguerite, Hickson and other world famous designers approve, insists on a perfectly flat lower back.

In the ordinary Corset—lacing behind—it is simply impossible to achieve this line. Try it—see for yourself—come to this store and be fitted in the special models approved by the world's best designers and see the change.

Gossard Front-Lacing Corsets have always met the demands of the leading couturiers — and in every style centre of the world you can see fashion leaders whose figures owe much to Gossard genius.

Flat backs are wanted by 8 out of 10 women, only in Gossards are they perfectly attained, Models as low as $2.75, others as low as $3.50, $4.50, $7.50 and up, give the new figure line.

A trial fitting will not obligate you.

BATTALION PARADED TO CHARLOTTE STREET CHURCH

Inspiring and Practical Sermon by the Rev. J. P. Wilson B. A.—Britain's Drumbeat is Heard Around the World —The Roll of Honour.

"It takes more courage for a man to be a moral hero than a hero on the battlefield." These words were addressed to the 93rd Battalion, C.E.F., by the Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., at the special service that was held yesterday morning in Charlotte street Methodist church. The speaker referred to the words of Lord Kitchener, who in the course of an address to a body of troops leaving for the front, enjoined the men to live in the character of a true British soldier, fear God and honour their king. This, said Rev. Mr. Wilson, reveals the mind of the British Empire. They represent principles that have made the Empire worthy of any effort that could be made to maintain its integrity. It would be a tragedy for men to die for a nation that was unworthy of it.

The Dry Canteen.

The speaker commended the action of Major General Sir Sam Hughes for having introduced the dry canteen. His text was taken from second Samuel, fifth chapter, first and second verse, "Then came all the tribes of Israel to David unto Hebron, and spoke, saying, 'Behold, we are thy bone and thy flesh.'

Also in time past, when Saul was king over us, thou wast he that ledest out and broughtest in Israel, and the Lord said to thee, 'Thou shalt feed my people, Israel, and thou shalt be a captain over Israel.'

"The words of the text," said the speaker, refer to the palmy days of Israel. She might have been risen but she never saw an age when she was grander. The people were united and were loyal to their leaders. The speakers compared the empire of the Israelites with that over which floats the Union Jack.

Not One Conscript.

"Who would have thought," said Rev. Mr. Wilson, that sixteen months ago, boys who laboured on the farm and in the workshops, would go forward to cover themselves with glory on the battlefields of Europe in defence of a national heritage. It goes to show that peace of a hundred years duration did not breed decadence in the British Empire. These are stormy and glorious days for King George. He finds around him over four hundred million people and not a conscript on the battle line. It goes to show what a wonderful empire this is, bound together by strings as fine as silk and as strong as steel. There is scarcely a sunset that does not look upon the face of a Britisher who has died for England's sake. Her drum-beat is heard around the world. We are fighting not for a nation but for a lasting eternal peace," said the speaker in conclusion.

Order of Service.

The order of service follows:
Prelude, March in G—Smart.
Doxology.
Invocation.
Hymn 50, "All People that on Earth Do Dwell."
Prayer.
Anthem, "The Son of God Goes Forth to War," Geibel.
Reading Psalm 1 and Ephesians, 6th chapter.
Solo, "Till the Boys Come Home," Novello.
Hymn 91, "O God of Bethel, by Whose Hand."
Sermon.
Prayer.
"God Save the King."
Benediction.
Postlude, march, "Naaman"—Costa.

The Roll of Honour.

"Our congregation is not a large one," said the Rev. J. P. Wilson, "but we have thirty-six in uniform, three sleep in soldiers' graves. I have only one son, and he is in uniform."

Following is the names of those who have enlisted:

Overseas—
Frank Austin, Charles Barratt, E. W. Hopkins (prisoner in Germany), T. L. Arnott, Reginald Heslip, Victor Carton, Bruce Sloan, A. B. C. Throop, Capt. (Dr.) Stanly Walsh Capt. (Dr.) B. E. Kelly, J. S. Kearsley, John Garrett, A. E. Patterson, Bruce Chambers, Lieut. Meredith Huycke, Capt. G. F. Horsley, P. L. Brown, A. H. Martin, H. W. Stanley, E. Lillico, H. Ellis, Frank Nelson, Capt. Harry Frost, John Ridyard.

Still in Canada—
Lieut. Lloyd Stuart, Douglas Huycke, Wilfred Huycke, Wm. Johnston, Percy McCracken, Thos. Smith, Warden Brown, M. Silcox, Clarence Henry, A. Burrows, Sergt.-Maj. Hartshorn, Norman Saxby.

In Memorium—
Geo. Minorgan, Wm. Gibson, killed in action; John Lightfoot, died in Barracks, Winnipeg.

Her Reply.

A benevolent citizen, while walking along the road, spied a little tot weeping. So he walked up to the child and said:—"Now be a good boy and stop your crying." The child replied, "I can't." "But why can't you?" "I can't." "Well here's a penny. Tell me why you can't be a good boy and stop crying." "'Cause I'm a girl."

ST. CECILIA

The Memory of the Patron Saint of Music is Honoured This Day

Written for the Examiner by Frank Russell

St. Cecilia, whose feast-day occurs to-day, (November 22), is usually looked upon as the patron Saint of Music. At the present time musical associations, termed 'Cecilian Societies' exist almost everywhere in the Old Country.

Who St. Cecilia Was.

This saint, so often glorified both in poetry and fine arts, is one of the most venerated martyrs of early Christian times. According to the "Sacramentarium Leonianum," we find that Cecilia was a virgin of a senatorial family, and a Christian from her infancy. Having incurred the hostility of the prefect, one Turcius Maximus, she, after a glorious profession of her faith, was condemned to be suffocated in the bath in her own house.

Her Attempted Execution.

But as she remained unhurt in the overheated room, the prefect caused her to be beheaded in that place. Three blows of the sword of the executioner failed to effect their purpose. Unable to sever her head from the trunk, he fled, leaving the virgin bathed in her own blood. She lived on for three days, dying then from her wounds, and at her death was, by order of Pope Urbanus, buried in the resting place of bishops and confessors, viz., in the Catacombs of Callistus, in Rome.

During the three days that elapsed between her attempted execution and her death, she provided that her house should be turned into a Church.

The exact date of her death is very uncertain. According to some authorities it was placed at about A.D. 177 by others at A. D. 230 by another at A. D. 250, yet still another locates it as A D. 302.

An Early Christian Church.

As early as the fourth century a Church was built in her honour in the Trastevere quarter of Rome which is still preserved. This Church was rebuilt during the period 817-824. It was restored about 1599.

Recent excavations, beneath this Church, disclosed remains of a Roman building, presumed to have been her house, and in a side chapel of the Church there have long been shown the remains of the bath in which—traditional history says — she was put to death.

In Art.

Saint Cecilia is shown in the attitude usual for martyrs in the Christian Art of the early centuries; that is to say, with a crown of martyrdom in her hand. Since the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, an organ has been given her as an attribute. In this way St. Cecilia has been brought into close relation-ship with the art of music.

Patroness of Music.

In 1584, the Academy of Music was founded in Rome and St. Cecilia was made patroness of the institution, consequently her veneration as the patroness of church music generally, became still more universal.

Butler, the historian, says the reason for her being venerated as the patroness of music, was owing to her assiduity in singing the divine praises, the effect of which she often heightened by the aid of some instrument.

An Ancient Legend

Relates that on one occasion she so enraptured an angel by her harmonious strains that in order to visit the saint, he quit the abodes of bliss. It was to this tradition that the famous English poet, Dryden, refers in his

"Ode for St. Cecilia's Day."

At last divine Cecilia came
Inventress of the vocal frame;
The sweet enthusiast from her sacred store,
Enlarg'd the former narrow bounds
And added length to solemn sounds,
With nature's mother-wit, and arts unknown before.
Let old Timotheus yield the prize,
Or both divide the crown;
He rais'd a mortal to the skies;
She drew an angel down.

Celebrated in Verse.

Some of the greatest English poets, such as Chaucer, Dryden, and Pope have laid poetic tributes on the Shrine of St Cecilia. Dryden's famous ode is, however, usually considered the greatest.

Ace in Art.

The most famous paintings of this saint are those of Raphael at Bologna, Carlo Dolce in the Dresden gallery, Domenichino in the Louvre at Paris, and Rubens in the Berlin Museum.

And In Music.

About the end of the seventeenth century the practice of holding concerts on St. Cecilia's day became prevalent.

That this saint was held in high veneration may be judged by the fact that many masses were composed in her honour.

Big Increase in Number of Communions at the Sacred Heart Church in Past Year

The sixth anniversary of the opening of the Church of the Sacred Heart was celebrated on Sunday by a general communion at the early masses, by Pontifical high mass at 10:30 a.m., and vespers at 7 p.m., sung by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, and by adoration of the Blessed Sacrament during the hours between the conclusion of High Mass and the opening of vespers. Rev. Father Kehoe, of St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto, and a member of the Carmelite order, preached in the morning and evening.

Rev. J. J. O'Brien, the pastor, stated in his announcements, that there have been 42,875 communions during the past twelve months, an increase of 7,805 over the number during the preceding year. Bishop O'Brien referred to these figures when he addressed the congregation in connection with the occasion of the anniverrary. "I was astonished," His Lordship remarked, "to hear that the number of Holy communions received during the past year was almost 43,000. For this parish which numbers about 925 souls this is a magnificent thing and shows the devotion, the zeal and goodness of the people. I recall the eves of other anniversaries, of first Fridays, of holidays, the lines of men, unbroken until long after nine o'clock, waiting for confession. It was a sign that the men were in earnest about their salvation, and to partake of the sacraments."

Bishop O'Brien paid a tribute to the spirit of generosity in members of the parish who had helped to fittingly furnish the church. He mentioned that this had been the church of his pastorate. On the first Sunday, the altar, the sanctuary and choir did not have some of the embellishments it now possessed, but whatever was wanting then was made up by the expressions of goodwill and loyalty from members of the parish. His Lordship reminded the members to be thankful for the graces and mercies received during the past year. He was deeply gratified to learn that many members of the congregation were attending mass every day and receiving daily, and many others, weekly communion. "Oh, if we would only live by that Bread of Life, if we would make an effort to look after our spiritual welfare as we do after our temporal success!" The striving for our salvation hereafter was the greatest of wisdom. His Lordship referred to frequent communion by the children and urged the necessity of right influences at home to cooperate with the influences of the church and school that children might reflect in their lives the truths of Catholicity.

Turning to the future, Bishop O'Brien said that the next year and the next six years would bring their crosses. If new burdens are to be borne it should be remembered that the grace of God will give strength to the shoulders. "Continue to pray in God's holy faith and divine charity for his graces and blessings, and that we may live more kindly and more neighbourly one toward the other; and in this you will be storing up merit in the Kingdom of Heaven." His Lordship asked for prayers for any persons who may have been neglecting the advantages offered by their parish church.

"And behold I am with you all days even to the consummation of the world": St. Matthew 28:20.

Basing his evening sermon on this text, Rev. Father Kehoe said that it is not strange that Catholics who are assured of the faith that is in them should pray for the spreading of the holy faith. The spirit of Penticost came never to return according to the words of the text. We are even told that we are grafted to Christ, Himself, "I am the vine, you are the branches." "There is not one of us," Father Kehoe continued, "who does not feel that the most glorious thing the earth holds is the Catholic Church, and who would not give of his blood for the propogation of this church after the manner of the early martyrs if it were the will of God that it should be so. And yet when we pray for the spread of the faith, we feel that we are brought in opposition with the very will of God, for He could convert at once all to unity with the Catholic Church."

Father Kehoe traced the growth of Christianity from its beginning. At the death of Christ the soldiers who had crucified Him, witnessing the manifestations around them, beat their breasts and confessed unconsciously that this was indeed the Son of God. It was not necessary, he said, to follow the burrowings of the early Christians into the catacombs where they sought refuge. Finally after centuries of persecution appeared Constantine bearing his banner with the mystice words "In this sign thou shalt conquer." Then the church began to grow and spread until it seemed that the "birds of Heaven roosted in its brancnes." Then it was, said Father Kehoe, that Ireland was converted, and St. Augustine implanted the faith in England. Thus the nations came in until the kingdom of the church seemed spread over the whole world. In the first years of the sixteenth century the shadows returned and it seemed that over night the church was deserted. In thirty-five years, from 1515 to about 1550, nearly two-thirds of the world parted from the church until it seemed that there were no Catholics anywhere in Europe. Father Kehoe said that now, after four hundred years, this great schism was breaking up and declining, and that Pope Benedict had called upon the people to pray for the conversion of Protestantism. But, the speaker asked, what if this city were to become Catholic, if it were not truly such, or the world to be converted, if it brought in scandals as it did before? Father Kehoe said it was natural and logical for Catholics to pray for the spread of the faith. They know the consolations of their religion and what it means to live and die in the Church. Hence they should pray for those outside the Church that God may bring them in accord with it that there may be one fold and one shepherd.

THE GREATEST NEED OF THE WORLD TO-DAY IS LEADERSHIP

The People of St Paul's Listen to an Able Address on the Evolution of the Sunday School by Mr. Frank Yeigh of Toronto

Those who were fortunate enough to be present at the morning service of the St. Paul's Presbyterian Church were delighted with the excellent address delivered by Mr. Frank Yeigh, of Toronto, on the development of the Sunday School movement anad its relation to the problems of the day.

In introducing the speaker; the Rev. Mr. Pogue paid tribute to the Dominion-wide reputation of Mr. Yeigh as a man of literary attainments, a traveller and lecturer, and a Sunday School worker, who was in our midst as Director of the Boys' Conference.

Mr. Yeigh chose as his Scripture lesson the latter part of the second chapter of St. Luke's gospel, wherein we get a picture of Christ in the Temple discoursing with the Doctors, ending: "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and man."

During the Golden Jubilee of Sunday Schools held in Toronto recently, there were a number of tableaux presented, representing the evolution of the great movement, the first one depicting the inception of the Sunday School over one hundred years ago, with Robert Raikes in his eighteenth century costume, and his rabble of 'street urchins': the gathering of the first Sunday School Class, with teachers paid to teach, and boys paid to come.

As in the case with all such movements the Sunday School met with opposition. Robert Raikes was attacked both in England and Scotland. The Scotch preachers viewed it with alarm; it would destroy the proper relation of the family to religion and strike a blow at the Established Church. Wherever Raikes went he was pelted with filth and dirty water, and had insults heaped upon him.

There was a man in England, however, who had the vision to see its possibilities for good. This was John Wesley. Said he: "Perhaps God has ordered this; who knows but these schools may become the nurseries for Christians?" If John Wesley could see the Sunday Schools of to-day he would realize that his prophesy had been right.

In due time the movement swept across the Atlantic and was met with equal hostility. In 1850 Lyman Beecher created a sensation in his home town by taking his own children to Sunday School as an example. In 1878 Horace Bushnell declared that the work of the Sunday School was the greatest work in the world.

Robert Raikes, at his death, was recognized as a public benefactor. His original class of twelve, "the ragged regiment," had increased to over a quarter of a million in the British Isles alone. He contributed to the world one of its greatest assets.

Contrast the Sunday School of Robert Raikes with that of to-day, with its army of thirty million. What a human array! No one can gainsay that one of the world's greatest forces is the Sunday School.

The speaker, in a most lucid style, contrasted the conditions of yesterday with those of to-day, and sought to show that the "grown-ups" go to Sunday School now as well as the children; that the primary department with its army of little tots, and the secondary division with children of the teen-ages, the crisis-age, (only one-sixth of whom remain in active connection with the Church), present golden opportunities for individual and world-wide service.

Space will not permit a more extended review of Mr. Yeigh's splendid address, the keynote of which was that the great need of the world to-day is leadership, and this can be best developed through the great movement known as the Sunday School.

Said he: "We are going to hear from these young men—these leaders among boys — in the years to come.

"Nothing is so effective as character based on the teachings of Christ.

"A nation's childhood is its wealth and power.

"The Sunday School of to-day represents one of the most potent missionary forces—a modern crusade to bring the world to Christ."

DEVELOPING THE HIGHEST IDEALS IN THE BOYS

How Christian Leaders and S. S. Workers Can Best Serve the Interest of the Youths — Address by Rev. F. L. Farewell

How Sunday school teachers and Christian workers can best serve the youth of the community, in the development of what is best in boys, was ably brought out in an address by Rev. F. L. Farewell, of Whitby at the Mark street Methodist church yesterday morning. Rev. Mr. Farewell is in the city in connection with the Boys' Conference and his remarks were in the interests of the young manhood of the country. Mr. Farewell, previous to his present appointment as president of Whitby Ladies' College, was secretary of Epworth League and Sunday school work of the Methodist church.

In his talk about boys he said, the problem before the Christian leaders of the church to-day was to raise the boyhood and also the girlhood of Canada to the highest possible level. The Canadian people had the greatest resources any country would wish to possess. God had abundantly blessed Canada. Recently a conservation commission had been appointed by the Dominion government, with the object of conserving the wealthy resources of our land for future generations. One of Canada's greatest assets was its boy life and it was our duty to do all that was possible to develop it along the right lines. The church in the present day was called upon to take a greater interest in the play of boys. This could be done in two ways, first by supervised play and secondly by the building up of the social life within the Sunday school. Where play is supervised by a Christian leader, the best ideals of play life were developed. Boys usually belong to some "gang," with a fellow at the head who looked upon as a hero. Boys were great for hero worship. It was the task of the Sunday school to have leaders among the boys who would call out the best that was in them. "We are trying to build up the work among the boys on the 'gang' plan with a hero leader," said the speaker.

Boys at the age of fourteen and fifteen had ideals and ambitions for their future, when they grew to manhood. It was for the leaders to study these ideals and to encourage the boys to develop them.

The speaker urged his hearers to trust their boys, to give them work in the church to do. With the proper environment, with lofty ideals to follow, these boys would grow into young men, ready to contribute the best in them to the service of Christ, whether in the world of business or as minister of God. The boys of to-day will be the leaders of to-morrow, ready to take their place in the various worthy vocations in the world.

At the evening service Mr. Dinnick of Toronto, delivered the address.

A WEAK CHESTED BOY.

"My boy, Frank, seemed weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

"CABIRIA" LEADS THE WAY

"Cabiria" is said to have been staged in five countries at an outlay of $300,000, with a cast of 10,000, and it will demonstrate a new and important function of the camera. An expenditure such as this and the payment of royalty such as d'Annunzio would never have been possible if it were to have been seen only by the people of Italy. But in "Cabiria" the producers created a motion tableaux for the world and the picture machine makes it possible to show the colossal spectacle everywhere. It points out remarkable possibilities, as performances which have hitherto been confined to one place, to which the multitudes had to travel, such as the Oberammergau production, or the notable presentation of Joan d-Arc by Maude Adams, at the Cambridge stadium, can in this way be done with unlimited expenditure and then given to the entire world, through the medium of the camera, to see and enjoy.

Dropped Dead in The Post Office

Sudden Death of Mrs. Mary Stovell on Saturday Afternoon – Remains Removed to Toronto

Suddenly seized with a heart attack in the local post office, Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Mary Stovell passed away before medical assistance could be secured. Dr. Carmichael was called, but nothing could be done. Coroner Dr. Greer was notified and decided that an inquest was unnecessary, death being due to heart failure.

The late Mrs. Stovell, who was 56 years of age, had resided in this city for the past three years, making her home with Miss Fylun, at 5 Dennistoun Avenue. She was the local representative of the Viavi Medicine Co. She was born in Markham. She is survived by three sisters, Mrs. R Ross, Mrs. Lambert, and Miss Fenwick of Toronto. Miss Fenwick came to Peterborough Saturday night and looked after the remains.

The body was shipped from Belleghem's undertaking parlours, Hunter Street, this morning, to Toronto, where the funeral will take place tomorrow from the residence of her sister, Mrs. R. Ross, 114 Havelock street, to Prospect Cemetery.

KINGSTON BOYS WERE ENTERTAINED AT Y.M.C.A.

The Boys' Work Conference, which closed in Peterborough on Sunday has been a big uplift to the work of the Association, especially of the boys' department. The members of the Y.M C.A. Boys' Cabinet represented the Association in the conference, and many of the local church delegates are members of the local association, so we anticipate a good uplift in boys' work from the standpoint of the Y.M.C.A.

Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Meserve, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Galley and Miss Mignon Telgman served luncheon to the 50 members of the Kingston delegates in the new Y.M.C.A dining room following the Sunday evening service. A short programme of music and speech-making was carried out with Mr. C. N. Meserve in the chair.

Addresses on the part of Peterborough Association were made by Messrs. P. M. Mearrell, F. E. Kerr, G. L. Galley and Reginald Brown. Responses were made by Frank Newman, Dr. C. C. Nash, Sam Lilley, and John Kinch. Mr. Herbert Treneer, a former Kingstonian presided at the piano and a number of hymns were sung and the gathering dispersed, in time for the men from Kingston to catch the one o'clock train home. As Mr. Meserve was former secretary of the Kingston Association, it was a great personal pleasure for him to meet many of the members of the Association that he formerly served. As it is expected that Kingston will entertain the conference next year, a great effort will be made on the part of the Peterborough men to at least secure as large a delegation for the Kingston conference as that of Kingston in the conference that has just closed.

KITCHENER LEAGUE SENDS DIRECT TO TRENCHES

In the Examiner of a few days ago was a letter requesting information regarding parcels for the soldiers, and the information given was to the effect that Red Cross knitted articles sent to wounded soldiers and not to the trenches.

The Kitchener Patriotic Club of the Red Cross wish it to be known that all their knitted articles go direct to the men in the trenches.

Everything of this nature has gone to the men in the trenches, and if any one desires yarn to knit into articles it can be had by arranging with Mrs. J. Knox, 481 Gilmour street, or Miss Mowat at the Peterborough Creamery.

WISE WORDS
A Physician on Food.

A western physician has views about food. He says:

"I have always believed that the duty of the physician does not cease with treating the sick, but that we owe it to humanity to teach them how to protect their health especially by hygienic and dietetic laws.

"With such a feeling as to my duty I take great pleasure in saying, that, in my own experience and also from personal observation, I have found no food to equal Grape-Nuts and that I find there is almost no limit to the great benefit this food will bring when used in all cases of sickness and convalescence.

"It is my experience that no physical condition forbids the use of Grape-Nuts. To persons in health there is nothing so nourishing and acceptable to the stomach especially at breakfast to start the machinery of the human system on the day's work.

"In cases of indigestion I know that a complete breakfast can be made of Grape-Nuts and cream; and I think it is necessary not to overload the stomach at the morning meal. I also know the great value of Grape-Nuts when the stomach is too weak to digest other food.

"This is written after an experience of more than 20 years treating all manner of chronic and acute diseases, and the letter is voluntary on my part without any request for it."

DELAY OVER THE SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANT EXPLAINED

Informal Conference Between Representatives of the City and Township Councils Held on Saturday in Which the Difficulties Encountered Were Pointed Out by City Representatives.

NOT INTENTIONAL DELAY

At the last meeting of the City Council a letter was read from Messrs. Peck, Kerr & McElderry, solicitors for the townships of North and South Monaghan and Otonabee, protesting against the delay on the part of the city in acting on the order of the Provincial Board of Health to instal works for the disposal and purification of the sewage of the city, which runs into the Otonabee river. The townships felt that, so far as they could see, the city was not proceeding to carry out that order, while it was building another trunk sewer on Park street.

In order that the two parties, the township and the city, might understand each other better, an informal conference was held on Saturday afternoon at which Mr. Waterman, Reeve of South Monaghan, Mr. McIntosh, Reeve of North Monaghan, Mr. Duvell, Reeve of Otonabee, and other members of the Township Councils, and Ald. Green, chairman of the Board of Works and the City Clerk were present.

It was explained to the township representatives that last spring the city, having selected a site and prepared plans for the disposal works, asked that they be approved of by the Provincial Board. Objections to the site selected were made by residents of Otonabee, and the Provincial Board refused to approve of the site selected but said that a site at or nearly opposite Park street would be satisfactory. The city then had to begin again. Before doing so, in order to make doubly sure of their ground, as the end of Park street would be the city authorities had an engineer come from Montreal, go over the ground and report upon the site of the proposed pumping station, and he approved of it. A small committee was then appointed to try to secure options on sites at or nearly opposite to Park street, to carry out the recommendation of the Provincial Board. This committee opened negotiations with owners of the properties, and these negotiations were carried on for some time, as the prices asked were considered by the committee to be much higher than the values of the properties. The price of one was lowered, but not to a satisfactory figure, and the negotiations were continued.

Time was passing, and the committee feared that a satisfactory price would not be obtained, at least until the Provincial authorities would have become impatient, and the City Engineer was instructed to prepare plans for two locations in the vicinity indicated by the Provincial Board. When the letter from the solicitors for the townships was received, these plans were about ready and the Provincial officer had been informed that they would be ready to send to him in a few days.

These plans were taken to Toronto on Friday last by the Mayor and the Chairman of the Board of Works and submitted to Dr McCullough, the Chief Officer of Health of the Province. Notices have been sent out by the Provincial Officer that the Provincial Board will consider any objections to the location on Friday, November 26th, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon at the office of the Board in Toronto.

The explanations given on Saturday went to show that there had been no intentional delay and no neglect on the part of the city to carry out the order of the Provincial Board and instal the disposal works, and that it was the desire and intention of the city authorities to construct the works at the earliest moment. The delay was regretted, but was owing to the site first selected not having been approved and to the time consumed in endeavouring to procure options on the site indicated by the Provincial Board and in preparing the new documents to submit to that Board. These, as stated, will be considered on Friday next.

LOCAL CONFERENCE AN EARLY FRUIT OF THE BOYS' CONVENTION HERE

The final practical discussions in connection with the Boys' Work Conference were held on Sunday. Denominational delegations met in the morning from 9.30 until 10.30 o'clock, the Anglican, Methodist and Presbyterian, led, respectively, by Mr. Salisbury of Toronto, Mr. Farewell, and Mr. C. A. Meyers, in the George Street Methodist Church, and the Baptist Church boys assembled in Murray Street Church, led by Mr. Traver, assisted by Chief Thompson. The purpose of these meetings was to check over the ideas from the Conference in regard to their application in the various churches and what plans each denomination proposed to take away, and put into execution.

At 2 p.m. the delegates divided into rural, city, town and city groups for similar discussion, as to the application of the ideas and plans in the various communities. Among numerous decisions announced, the Brockville boys intend holding a local conference to be held in the near future. The Toronto delegates will hold three conferences, one in each of the East, West, and central sections of the city. Ottawa and other delegates have similar plans.

FINAL SESSION OF THE BOYS' WORK CONFERENCE

Inspiring Address by Albert E. Roberts of New York and Closing Ceremonies in the George Street Methodist Church Last Night.

The closing session of the Boys' Work Conference was held last night in the George Street Methodist Church, and proved one of the most unique ever witnessed in Peterborough. The Church was filled to overflowing, the front of the auditorium having been reserved for the five hundred delegates: "The Makers of Canada." As the young men filed up the aisles the choir sang that stirring hymn of action: "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Reports of resolutions adopted by various subdivisions of delegates were presented by their secretaries, their chief feature being: a determination to achieve greater efficiency along the intellectual, physical and religious lines, and to render more telling service to their fellows in the name of their Master.

Mr. Frank Yeigh, in his usual happy style, tendered to the press, the churches, the civic authorities and to the citizens, generally, the hearty thanks of the conference for the splendid manner in which they had been entertained.

The crowning event of the evening yes, of the conference, was the address by Mr. Albert E. Roberts, of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., New York, who, during the afternoon swayed a multitude of young men by his magnetic appeal to lead a better, a cleaner life, when, between sixty and seventy young fellows chose Christ as the King of their life, and over twenty-five reconsecrated themselves for higher service. It was an inspiring sight, indeed!

By way of introduction Mr. Roberts said it was a difficult thing for one to come from the other side of the line and propery enter into the spirit of the Dominion, when the very permanency of the pillars of Empire were at stake. In view of this, a gathering such as sat before him was fraught with tremendous possibilities for the present and for the future, representing as it did the flower of the youth of this province and Dominion. It would mean the outbreaking after a larger vision by the young manhood of the country.

Twenty-five years ago such meetings as these were unheard of, in fact they were an impossibility. Then a boy was a problem, now he is a power, even like the mighty Niagara, which existed for many years, but remained idle until harnessed up a short time ago.

These boys, said he, will have to face problems greater than ever confronted their fathers; they will require a better type of Christian manhood to combat this spirit of hate which is being sown in the hearts of the warring nations. Canada will be called upon for leaders to accomplish mighty things.

The Task of the Church.

The great work of the Christian Church will be to utilize the latent power of her young manhood, by devising ways and means of co-operation: the boys with the Church and the Church with the boys.

Just here the speaker touched upon the "gang" problem, and in a few humorous remarks, emphasized the duty of Christians to provide the proper type of companionship: to see that the gang was the right kind of gang; to teach that it is better to lose a game than to win dishonestly. The boys will welcome the suggestion.

Not only in his play, but in his physical and religious development it is possible to get beside a boy and lead him to a better, a higher life.

Christian people should put first things first, when they see such a lot of things to be done. The rewards of this service are many, the dividends are great.

Mr. Roberts, at the close of his inspiring address, called upon the delegates to sing their conference song: "Will You be Enlisted as a Volunteer" after which they joined hands in an unbroken circle, and with heads bowed, each prayed silently for the fellow on his right, then for the one on his left, and finally for the whole group.

Mr. Yeigh then offered a prayer for the people of Peterborough, which was followed by the singing of "Blest be the Tie that Binds."

Paul Penman.

Boys Impressed With the Duty of Preparing Themselves to Be Worthy Men As Result of War

Saturday night's banquet in the market hall was the feature social event of the Boys's Work Conference. The programme of meetings demanded every other available period and, as a result Saturday nights' affair was entered into with all the more zest.

A number of the ministers of the city were present with prominent laymen interested in Y.M.C.A. and Sunday School work. At a table elevated on a dias with a background of Union Jacks, Dr. Middleton presided with Rev. Mr. Grobb, Mr. A. E. Roberts, Mr. Paterson, Mr. Frank Yeigh and others on either side of him. It was a fine gathering of boys who doubtless appreciate the privilege which is their's, of listening to the advice and guidance of men who are making a life work of directing boys, "men" age experts, as it were. And the future should have occasion to rejoice in the results they accomplish.

A thoughtful message from the firing line in France was conveyed by Capt. Forgie, who had many interesting episodes to relate of life at the front, and others upon which he was silent, like all the other men who have reached home. "If we are not beginning to look at things in a different light," he asserted, "a lot of the sacrifice made by the soldiers is going to be in vain." They had to begin to play their part, Capt. Forgie told the boys; to stand up for those ideals for which the men are fighting. Many people in England and in Canada were all too ready to listen to the things that had been told of the lives of the men of the 1st Division. It cut deeply into the lives of those men of whom Capt. Forgie said no reference was needed. By emphasizing a factor which entered into the battle of Ypres, he showed what stout hearts the first Canadian division possessed. They were practically untried troops, but they were subjected to a most trying ordeal. As they advanced to the positions from which the Turcos had fled in a panic, and blue-faced, either from fright or gas they were heavily shelled.

They met thousands of refugees but in spite of the unnerving conditions they faced panic, shells and gas marching up the road from Ypres singing "O Canada." "Something must have happened up there," said Capt. Forgie. "They were outnumbered ten to one, but the Germans failed to rush them."

Geo. A. Warburton.

The secretary of the Toronto Y. M. C. A. snatched a few hours from his busy round of duties to present to the boys the idea of personal duty in some way or other in connection with the war's demands. While the tax rate in Canada is no more than 5 per cent., in Great Britain they are paying as high as a 35 per cent. tax, and are facing a rate of 50 per cent. To come up to a level with the British people we have to pay the difference between thirty-five and five per cent. Canada has done nobly, Mr. Warburton said, but we haven't commenced to come up to the British people in both men and money.

One of the benefits of the war will be a greater appreciation of the institutions of our country. Two fundamental ideas are in conflict in the war. The idea of Germany is that of the absolute power of the monarch over the very last citizen of the realm, and the British idea that the King rules as the servant of the people.

And this conflict of ideas is realized by the men in spite of the statement of the neutrals that many of the soldiers are ignorant of the cause of the war. "It is because we do know what is at stake that we are sending our sons, and they are ready to go."

Mr. Warburton dwelt upon the changes which Canadian life should undergo during the stress of war. The idea had developed here that wealth, power and rank counted most, and the country had grown prosperous and boastful; but the effect of the war and its demands for sacrifice should show after all that in a country like this it is character that counts most. Men thought more of themselves than they do now. They are thinking more of service now. And in this regard, Mr. Warburton said the women had set an example in the great service they are rendering.

Mr. Warburton made a final plea for self-sacrifice with its fruits of abiding self-sacrifice. Man is or is not a Christian, not according to his creed, or church, or other institution, though all those things may be correct, but in the spirit of absolute and complete self-sacrifice for others; and that country is Christian in proportion to the extent to which its public life is saturated with that spirit. And I believe we live in a Christian country and belong to a Christian Empire. It takes a lot of pluck to make this sacrifice day after day for Christ, but it will bring you joy as deep as your soul is deep.

Mr. Roberts' address made a strong appeal for the development of character, the greatest asset a young man may have, and the thing for which the Young Men's Christian Associations and the Sunday Schools are working. The world needs men who are ready to stand up and be counted. Boys must develop this thing if they are to be counted if they are going to live up to their full capacity. It includes the idea of self-sacrifice, putting yourself in the other fellow's place, not for our own sake, but conscious of the fact that you are doing something for God.

A New Way.

A furrier, wishing to inform customers that he would make up furs in a fashionable manner, out of old furs, which ladies have at home, appended the following to one of his advertisements:— "N.B.—Capes, victorines, etc., made up for ladies in fashionable styles out of their own skins!"

Mr. H. L. Troyer Spoke At Park Street Church

Mr. H. L. Troyer occupied the Park Street Baptist church pulpit on Sunday morning his subject being "The Inevitable Challenge." The High School boys of to-day will be called upon after this war is concluded to assume a large share in the leadership that must be borne.

In order that we may respond in a full measure to those demands there must be to-day an adequate preparation for effecient service. This is the present emergency, and it is for th challing that it is to come the youth of to-day must be developed. Mr. Troyer spoke in detail upon the qualities which must be trained in the young men.

After washing leather gloves rinse them in cold water, then soap again. This will prevent them from drying stiffly.

Port Hope to Cobourg, a distance of seven miles and will play at a patriotic rally at Cobourg that evening, afterwards being housed in the Cobourg armouries for the night. On the return trip on Saturday they will visit Millbrook and will arrive home in Peterborough on the 5.30 p.m. train. The tour of Bandmaster Hughes' splendid organization is expected to have a marked effect on recruiting.

Lieut. Bertram of the 39th Battalion, was a week end visitor in Peterborough.

The band of the 93rd provided music for the banquet of the Boys' Conference in the Market Hall on Saturday night.

A comparison between the conduct of the delegates to the Boys' Conference and that of the men of the 93rd Battalion was made by many citizens on Saturday night and the men in khaki did not lose in the comparison. "Why that bunch of delegates made more noise and disturbance on the streets in one day that the 93rd has since it was organized," was one citizen's comment, while one of the 93rd remarked: "If we made as much noise as that our military police would have the guard room full and the whole town would say we were drunk." However, the pranks of the visitors were good humoured and no damage of any kind was done.

Signaller Ernest Watson, son of Provost Sergt. J. H. Watson of the 93rd Battalion, has been transferred from the 59th Battalion to the 93rd and will report for duty to-morrow morning. He arrived from Kingston this morning.

Fiske O'Hara Pays His Annual Visit to Peterborough, Nov. 30

Fiske O'Hara, under the direction of Augustus Pitou, jr., will present his new play, "Kilkenny," at the Grand Opera House on Tuesday, Nov. 30. The story of "Kilkenny" is laid in Kilkenny in 1810, and is in three acts. David Conway is the guardian of Moina Carroll, and is anxious to marry his ward to Maurice Levine, a man of wealth, but a profligate. Conway has become involved, through speculation, in the Mexicana Gold Mine Company. When that bubble, one of the many of that age, bursts, he is facing ruin. He has deceived his ward as to her true age to delay making an accounting of the fortune left her by her father. A close friendship and sincere affection exists between Moina and the young Mrs. Conway. The latter knows Levine to be utterly unworthy to marry a pure, sweet girl like Moina. From 1805 to 1819 there existed in Kilkenny a company of amateurs, who gave performances for charity two weeks each year in October, during the "Kilkenny Carnival." Richard Desmond was the leading man and Moina Carroll the leading lady of this company. Playing many love scenes together, they naturally fell in love with each other. While Mrs. Conway favours the young lovers, her husband, upon learning of their attachment, is furious. He forbids Moina to appear at the theatre the following night, the last of the season, at the suggestion of Levine, asserting she must obey him as he is still her guardian and she is not of age. Richard, who rode to Castlecomer that morning, finds the record of Moina's christening in the chapel there, and discovers that Moina is a few months over twenty-one, and her own mistress. Levine suspecting that Conway lost part of his ward's fortune in speculation, tells him that he will aid him financially, and proposes to him that they abduct Moina that night and carry her off to the convent in France and put a stop to the growing attachment between her and Richard. Mrs. Conway sees her husband take Moina into the garden, while the guests are dancing. She follows them, and sees Levine throw his cloak over Moina's head, force her into a coach and drive off. She gives the alarm. Richard and his friends start in pursuit, overtake the coach and rescue Moina. In the last act Richard tells Conway he will marry Moina with or without his consent, that he knows she is of age, and that he will demand an accounting of his guardianship. Confronted with the proofs Conway breaks down, and influenced by his wife he confesses all, and begs for mercy. Richard compels Levine to apologize to Moina and leave Kilkenny.

Mr. O'Hara will be heard in five new songs, especially written for his use in "Kilkenny." He has been provided with a splendid supporting company, including Eileen Wilson, Marie Quinn, Anna Nichols, Mary Downs, Lisle Bloodgood, Elize Mason, Wm. J. Morgan, J. P. Sullivan, James Edwards, Henry Duffy J. E. Miller and Wm. T Sheehan.

(b) The following extract from King's Regulations and Orders for the Army are published for the information of all concerned.

"The hair of the head will be kept short. The chin and under lip will be shaved, but not the upper lip, whiskers, if worn, will be of moderate length.

(c) Officers commanding will be held responsible that this regulation is strictly adhered to. The above order will be read at three consecutive parades.

(d) Wearing of Badges. No unauthorized badge will be worn by any Officer, N.C.O. or man.

No badges will be worn by rank and file, other than issued from the Quarter Master's stores. Lanyards are not to be worn by rank and file. When belts are worn outside of overcoats, the overcoat will be pulled in snugly at the back, leaving no place for gaps.

5. Leave of absence.

Leave of absence. Officers applying for leave of absence will forward their application so as to reach the Adjutant at least 24 hours prior to their departure, unless leave of absence is required urgently.

(6). Retreat.

Retreat will sound for the week ending 28th at 4.45 daily.

(7) Canteen Committee.

The following officers will constitute the Canteen Committee up to Friday, 31st day of December, 1915: Lieut. T. B. Marling; Lieut. W. G. Worth.

They will forward, weekly, for the information of the Commanding Officer, a certified statement showing the quantities and kinds purchased, and profits from the sales. This will be done after their weekly inspection.

(8) Discipline.

The Commanding Officer has been pleased to permit of smoking in the eastern hall of the Arena in the drill hall, when off parade. All pipes, cigars and cigarettes must be extinguished one hour prior to the meal and at 9.00 p.m. sharp.

Spitting on the floors will not be tolerated under any circumstances.

(9) Funerals.

The funeral of the late Pte. H. F. Sawyer, "A" Company, 93rd Overseas Batalion, C.E.F., will take place this afternoon, at 3.00 p.m. from the Armouries.

(10) Reverting to Battalion Orders No. 20, paragraph 4, the following is amended as under.

Pte. G. E. R. Melton to be Corporal

Corp. A. B. Burrows reverts to the ranks, at his own request. Pte. Burrows is posted to the Signal Corps until further orders.

T. J. Johnston,
Lt.-Colonel
Officer Commanding 93rd O. S. Batt.

THE CHILD ON THE ROAD.

(One of our wounded soldiers told the writer that the most piteous sight he had seen was that of a little boy who was travelling along the road alone when a shell killed him. He had a little placard pinned to his blue blouse entreating any kindly passer-by to take care of him and get him into safety, as his parents and friends were all killed and his home destroyed.)

By the side of the dusty road
As if asleep he lay.
A little tir'd out boy.
In the light of the soft Spring day,
By the side of the long white road,
With its shell-torn trees brought low,
He lay in the sun with his journey done,
The last of his line to go.

Some one had pinned to his blouse
A message short but clear,
Begging the passer's help
That small, frail life to cheer
Gone was his home, and gone
All that he lov'd and knew,
Down the long way he went on that day
Till the war tide claim'd him too.

By the side of the dusty road
The British soldiers stay'd
To lift that tumbled form
In death so unafraid.
To dash from manly eyes
The tears for one who trod
So little of that long white road
That led him safe to God.

Men, in your manhood's prime,
Can you still your old ways take,
While your brethren strain and sweat
The battle-lines to break?
Can you lie o' nights in peace,
Nor think, when the lights are low,
That the child forlorn who died alone,
Might be last of your line to go?

—Augusta Hancock, in The Lady.

Silenced.

Same old story—hubby was growling about some bill of his wife's which he had just received.

"Seven pounds to your milliner," he enumerated, "12 guineas for your dressmaker, and—oh, this is too much—15 shillings for two bottles of perfume. Fifteen shillings for mere odors that fade away and die!"

Wifey was quite unalarmed.

"Yes," she replied, "odors that fade away and die and go to meet the 36 shillings worth or cigars you consume every month!"—Pittsburg Press.

Woes and Sorrows of Poles Under German Domination

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Some of the oppresive measures under which the unfortunate inhabitants of German Poland live and still manage, in their sturdy patriotism to maintain their nationalism, are told in an article written by the son of a retired officer of the German army, now living in Posen, Germany. The writer, himself a secretary in the German Foreign Office until his espousal of the rights of the Poles resulted in his disgrace and dismissal, is now in this country.

At his request his name and race are withheld. Here he is known simply as Felix Tercza, and as such, a future American citizen, he writes of the glories of German "Kultur" in Poland.

"I have come to this country, first of all, because I am a Pole who has lived under the tyranny of Deutsche Kultur. What tragedy there is revealed to the Pole from Germany by that simple declaration cannot be understood by an American. I was born where the Prussian eagle waves in triumph over a people kept in subjection, but not conquered, by brute force and such subtle cruelty as only Deutsche Kultur can devise.

"It is said of the Russian that he race. The Russian cruelty is that of is cruel to his dependents of another the clumsy bear, who strikes awkwardly and tears and bruises. The cruelty of the German is that of refinement, of the kind which aims at crushing out the soul of the victim.

"And yet away from Germany the bumptious claims of responsibility for all achievements and of the power of the German government become rather ludicrous. In my father's home I was taught that Mikael Kopernikus and F. Chopin were Poles. In the schools our German teacher told us that they were Germans! In my earliest youth my mother whispered to me that the Polish King Jan Sobieski saved Europe to Christendom when he defeated the Turks in the famous battle of Vienna. In the German schools it is taught that the Turk was driven from Europe by the German 'Grosser Kurfuerst.'

At my home, when we were alone my father and my mother taught me the beauties of the Polish language as all good Polish fathers and mothers teach their children. When I went into a German school I remember so well the shock I received when a teacher lectured us on the Polish language. The language, I was informed, is only spoken by the outcasts, the revolutionists German, he said, was the only language for honest and educated men. Why, the Pope in Rome spoke that tongue, although he was born an Italian!

"My old nurse, when I was a child taught me the beautiful and melancholy songs which have come down to the Poles through many ages. At school I was asked if I could sing, and, in boyish joy, I said I could sing fine Polish songs.

"Only German songs should sound from the throats in Germany, and the whole world" my teacher said harshly, and I was thrashed for the admission!

"These are only a few scattered incidents to reveal the complete attempt of the Prussian government to stamp out the Polish national spirit. Of course, the Poles resist this and hate their German oppressors, and it is for this reason that the Prussian Diet has passed the laws which are slowly strangling to death the Polish people.

"The Polish language is prohibited in the schools and in public life. No Pole may buy or sell property without the consent of the German government. Where a Pole owns property that is becoming valuable and is likely to make him a power in any movement there is a law which provides that a Pole may be dispossessed from his property. All that is necessary is that the government fix a price which must be paid. There is no appeal from this, and where a corrupt official desires a Pole's property all he needs to do is to set the government wheels in motion, have a ridiculously low price named, pay it and take over the property.

"I submit these few facts and others merely as an indication of how the Poles are cared for by the kind Prussian government. Were I to write all that I know I fear my life would not be very safe. This is melodramatic, but only too true.

"There is, for instance, the case of Vladislav Kolek, which is written on the records of the German government. Kolek fought in the Franco-Prussian war in the Prussian army and was a hero, so great a one, in fact that when he was picked up on the battle field after the battle of Bravellotte, on August 16, 1870, he had lost both legs. He was decorated with the Iron Cross and was given a pension of fifty marks ($12.50) a month for life and he was pointed out proudly by the government as a fitting example of how highly an honest Pole might be regarded.

"And then poor Kolek fell in love with a Polish girl in the afternoon of his life. The German government officials frowned at this seeming indelicacy. Why not a German girl? But his love persisted. The government cut the pension to twenty marks a month ($5).

"The Polish girl and the hero married and she loved her husband and went out to work for him. Then Kolek committed the crime of buying a few acres of land near Bylour, Poland, and he proceeded to build himself a house. This was too much from one Pole for Germany. The government refused the necessary permit to build. Kolek smiled, dug himself and his wife a cave and they moved into it. This infuriated the Prussians Gendarmes were sent out to expel the insolent Pole, but he resisted. A gendarme drew his revolver and shot; Kolek reached for his gun and killed the policeman. A force of gendarmes brought up a cannon and blew the cave up; and with it Kolek, the hero and his wife.

"Cruel Oh, yes, but how definite.

"There is again the case of Draymala, a retired subaltern officer of the German army. He, too, married a Polish girl and sought permission to build a house, a permission naturally refused, for few Poles are permitted to own dwellings. So he bought himself a gypsy wagon, believing that he had the same right as a gypsy to live in a wagon. The government ordered him to sell this wagon or go to jail. He capitulated, remembering Kolek. Now he lives in a German-owned house.

"And now for my last illustration of Deutsche Kultur. In 1908 I visited my brother, who is a physician in a small country town in German Poland, and he told me the story of Sygmund Zajka Piaski, of Posen, Germany.

"One day a mother came with a crying boy to my brother. The right ear of this child was torn nearly off. The teacher, one Hermann Muelberg had done it, the mother said, because her son had spoken Polish to a companion in the school.

"The mother was given a certificate by my brother, with which she went to the public prosecutor. He frowned and told her she must have a certificate from the German official county doctor. She came back to my brother who took her to the county physician. He refused the certificate bluntly. My brother took her to a Jewish physician and he gave her the necessary certificate of injury, which in my brother's name was insufficient. The public prosecutor took this document and for three months the poor woman waited for justice. And when it failed to come my brother, aroused, presented the matter to a member of the Prussian parliament. He investigated the matter. The report handed to him exonerated the teacher and declared it was the unclean condition of the boy's ear which made it tear loose when slightly pulled.

"So you see what the Poles endure under this kindly system of the great German government, whose mighty Emperor is now waging such a magnificent war, in which thousands of my poor countrymen are being slaughtered.

"I am the son of a prominent man in Germany, because he has been a high officer in the German army. I obtained a post in the German Foreign Office, given to me by the government because I am a prominent Pole of family and circumstances and therefore it is well to show the other Poles how well the government treats its people.

"But, alas, I gave three lessons to some Polish children in our beautiful language, and gone are my honours. I fled to the United States to escape the nine months in jail which would have been mine had I stayed in Berlin. Now, every day I can read a Polish newspaper without fear of dismissal from the glomy office in Berlin.

"So here in the United States I am going to seek my fortune, where no Pole is a Pole only, but a citizen, who can speak, read and write what language he chooses without fear or favour."

The lecturer on theosophy had concluded his long and able address, and stood looking at the audience.

"If there is any question," he said "that any of you would like to ask me before I sit down, I should be pleased to answer it."

Amid the deep silence that followed this remark an earnest looking man near the door rose up and said:

"I'd like to know, professor, if anybody has yet discovered a reliable and certain cure for corns.

"Every one in our family is some kind of animal," said Jimmie to the amazed preacher. "Why, you shouldn't say that!" the good man exclaimed. "Well," said Jimmie, "Mother's a dear, the baby is mother's little lamb, I'm the kid, and dad's the goat."

Brudder Johnson was a pompous negro who took an active part in church work. One night the preacher said:—"Brudder Johnson will you lead us in prayah?" "Ah'm sorry to disappoint de Lawd to-night, pahson," replied Brudder Johnson, "but Ah has a cold on mah chest."

"Yes," sighed the mother. "I am so often worried about my boy John. You have no idea how much concerned a mother is when her son is on the tented field." "Ah!" said the sympathetic listener. "And what regiment is your son with?" "Regiment? Oh, he isn't with the Army—he's employed in a travelling circus."

NOT ONE PLAYER OF LAST YEAR'S INTERMEDIATES IS LEFT IN THE CITY

Fans who have not glanced over the hockey situation recently may be surprised to realize that not one of the men who represented Peterborough in the intermediate series of the O. H. A. last season is left in the city. Three of the team are wearing khaki, another is making, and another inspecting shells, while the rest are scattered.

Skid Janes, the regular goalkeeper, is with the 40th Battery, Toronto, as is Jack Pethick, who performed on the defence here last winter. Ack Hunter, the other defence player, is a shell inspector for the Militia Department. Joe Dwyer, the spare goaler, accepted a position in Sarnia late last spring. Of the forwards, Maurice Park, the best goal-getter of the team, is now Capt. Maurice Park, of the 58th Battalion, C.E.F. Grover Halpin is in Detroit. Fred Kelly is in Ingersol. Ray Rose is making shells in the Ross Rifle Works, Quebec, and "Joe Moines" is "somewhere in Canada." He has been officially reported "missing" since last spring. Ed. Dillon, the trainer of the team, is now a member of the 93rd Battalion, while Mart Kenneally, for years the mascot of the Peterborough club, is in England as a motor car driver with the Canadian forces. Cyril Giroux and Fred Denison, of the 1914 team, are both in khaki, while Harold Knapman, Hatold Morrow, and Orme Cavanagh, well known junior players, have also heard the call of King and country. As last year's Executive, with the exception of the manager of the Junior Club, were suspended by the O.H.A., practically all of last year's hockey group has disappeared.

However, some of last year's Juniors remain, and a number of players of more or less ability have become residents of Peterborough since last season, while among the ranks of the 93rd Battalion other players may be discovered before the ice comes.

A number of hockey fans are holding a meeting to-night for the purpose of organizing a club to apply for admittance into the O.H.A.

The Peterborough Hockey Club, players and Executive, is a thing of the past.

COLLEGIATE HELD THE HARBORD TEAM TO TIE

The Peterborough Collegiate Institute Rugby team showed their class on Saturday afternoon, when they held the strong Harbord Collegiate Institute of Toronto to a 10-10 tie in a hard battle at Riverside Park. The weather was anything but favourable for rugby with the ground a quagmire and rain and snow falling during the afternoon, but in spite of the conditions it was a lively battle, and the excitement was keen from start to finish. Running plays were almost impossible in the bad going and both teams confined their tactics to line plunging and kicking. The good work of Long, Canniff and Eastwood featured the work of the Collegiate. The visitors had a heavy, fast team. They took the leadearly in the game on a fumble by one of the Collegiate backs, which gave them a good start, but the local team gradually overhauled them.

The teams were as follows:
Harbord Collegiate—
Flying wing—Norman.
Halves—Squires, Vokes, Fraser.
Quarter—Currie.
Scrimmage—Wessells, Purdy, Grey.
Inside wing—Houson, Miles.
Middle wings—Staughton, Keillor.
Outside wings—Gormed, Williams
Peterborough—
Flying wing—E. Smyth.
Halves—Jobbitt, Long, Eastwood.
Quarter—Stevenson.
Scrimmage — Brandon, Crawford Sjden.
Outside wings—Green, Carmichael.
Middle wings—Austin, Smith.
Inside wings—Kirn, Canniff.

Heavy Fire Going On On Western Front---Another Drive Expected

PARIS, November 22.—Reports of the French fighting along the western front disclosing the fact that lively artillery actions are taking place at many points, is believed to be significant. The French, it is thought, are planning an important movement for which the artillery actions are a preparation. The official communique to-day dealt chiefly with the artillery activity and the War Office announced later that there was nothing to add to this previous communication.

It was a similar and heavy artillery preparation along the western front which the French employed before they made their great drive late in September, and broke through the German lines in the Champagne district, driving the enemy back to their second lines and taking thousands of prisoners. This was an offensive movement that extended all the way from the North Sea to Alsace. The village of Loos, mentioned in to-day official statement as being in the vicinity of the extremely lively artillery actions which are now taking place, was captured by the French at that time. During that drive the British reached the outskirts of Hulluch, which is also named in the latest official French statement as one of the points at which artillery fire is now very heavy.

London Irish, Heroes of Loos, Carried Football Into Battle

"On the Ball!" Was Cry That Carried Famous Rifles Forward to the German Lines in First Dash of Big Drive, and "Goal!" They Shouted When Ball Was Landed in the Trenches.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—One of the most stirring stories of British grit and courage in the war is undoubtedly that of the charge of the London Irish Rifles in the attack upon Loos.

Some of them actually played football right up to the German trenches; but this way only one of hundreds of instances of cool dare deviltry that marked a day which, according to Brigadier General Thwaites, witnessed "one of the finest actions of the war."

One of the wounded Irishmen, now lying in a London hospital, told a correspondent who called on him the first connected story of the great charge and equally great stand against tremendous odds.

"As soon as we heard the great bombardment start," he said, "we knew the big advance was about to begin, and for nineteen solid days the guns banged away, till, as one wit in the regiment put it, 'It was a wonder the shells didn't bally well jam together in the air,' so thick did they come over our heads. When we were ordered one night to the back reserve trenches and 'fed up well,' we knew the time was near. 'Fattening the calf for slaughter,' said we to ourselves.

"I can't tell you the pride we felt when we heard that we were actually to have the honour of leading the division. Our first objective was to be the Valley Cross Roads, which commanded the way to Loos and Hill No 70, after taking which we were, if possible, to break through as far as Lens, the key to Douai. After three days' good food and rest we were marched into the first trenches late at night, laden with ammunition, kit bags and trench tools, and, in fact, everything we could carry.

Leading Way Into Battle.

"Our first job was to get over the parapet and start digging about three hundred yards nearer the enemy, and by dawn we had managed to make a sort of ditch about three feet deep all along our front. It was not dangerous work the first night, for the Germans had not spotted us, and we left off at dawn; but when they did spot the new earthworks and realized what we were up to the first thing they did in the morning was to start a terrific bombardment. We had to lie low all day until it was safe enough to go out again under cover of darkness and complete the job, for we were told we should have to stay in them the next day.

"I shall never forget that night. As we 'marched into battle,' to use the old expression, the General — God bless him!—said a few words to us which stirred us to our inmost souls.

"'The Empire expects great things of the London Irish to-day—remember that—for you have been chosen to lead the whole division.' But, heavens, you've got to be a soldier and to have been under fire and facing death for weeks to be able to understand what such words mean. No man can hear them and remain a coward. I, for one just feel that all the old people at home would scorn to receive your back unless you had done your utmost.

"A few minutes later we were crawling out into the open to finish the trench which was to be the springing off place for the great dash that we hoped would break the German lines. No sooner had we reached this place than the stillness was broken by the roar of the enemy's guns, and bullets and shells poured on us, the explosions silhouetting us momentarily every few instants, and revealing us hard at work.

"One set of our men, footballers by profession, made a strange resolution. It was to take a football along with them. The officer discovered this and ordered the football to be taken back to the base, which, of course, was carried out. But the old members of the London Irish Football Club were not to be done out of the greatest game of their lives—the last to some of them, poor fellows—and just before Major Beresford gave the signal the leather turned up again mysteriously.

Carried Football to Enemy's Trench.

"Suddenly the officer in command gave the signal. 'Over you go, lads.' With that the whole line sprang up as one man, some with a prayer, not a few making the sign of the cross. But the footballers, they chucked the ball and went after it just as cool as if on the field, passing it from one to the other, though the bullets were flying thick as hail, crying, 'On the ball, London Irish-' and they actually kicked it right into the enemy's trench with the cry, 'Goal!' though not before some of them had been picked off on the way.

"When we reached the German trench under a cloud of smoke, we found nothing but a pack of beings dazed with terror. In a jiffy we were over their parapet and the real work began. A kind of madness comes over you as you stab with your bayonet and hear the shriek of the poor devil suddenly cease as steel goes through him and you know he's 'gone West.' The beggars did not show much fight, most having retired into their second line of trenches when we began to occupy their first to make it our new line of attack. That meant clearing out even the smallest nook or corner that was large enough to hold a man.

"When it came to cold steel, which they can't stand, they ran like hares. So, having left a number of our men in the first trench, we went on to the second and then the third, after which other regiments came up to our relief, and together we took Loos. It wasn't really our job at all to take Loos, but we were swept on by the enthusiasm, I suppose, and all day long we were at it, clearing house after house, or rather what was left of the houses, stabbing and shooting and bombing till one felt ready to drop dead one's self. We wiped the Twenty-third Silesian regiment right out, but it was horrible to work on with the cries of the wounded going up all round.

The Facts About Hill 70.

"There seems to be some mystery about Hill 70 — as to whether it was taken or not. As a matter of fact, Hill 70 is some five or six miles across, and it is quite possible for the Germans and the English to be occupying it simultaneously without even realizing that they were on a hill at all, so flat it is.

"Now, what really happened was this: Our men went clean over it in the first rush that carried them beyond Loos in the direction of Lens, which we had hoped to capture. Unfortunately, the Germans suddenly brought up tremendous reinforcements as soon as they realized that the loss of Lens probably would mean the loss of Douai, and concentrated their whole counter attack upon some fresh troops who had been out at the front only a fortnight.

"Luckily during the advance a large quantity of supplies had been moved up from our old trenches to our new trenches, which were nothing more than the Germans' third line of trenches turned round back to the front, the sandbag parapets having been moved sack by sack onto the other side and consolidated as well as time would allow.

"The battle now became terrific. It seemed as if the whole of Krupps was being chucked at us wholesale, while our own artillery was peppering away just as hard from behind our backs. It seemed as if they'd pop our heads off at times between them. 'Stick to it, lads,' said one of our officers. 'Everything depends upon your holding your position. If they once break the line'— He didn't have to finish; that was quite sufficient, and the words of the General came back—'Remember, you're Irish, and the Empire expects great things of you.

Long Wait for Relief.

"That was enough. If every Jack man of us had to go under we were determined to do so, but we wouldn't give in. 'Von Hindenburg is coming with half a million men'' shouted one German, as he advanced. 'Begorra thin, so much the worse for Von Hindenburg and his half million'' we shouted, and the fight went on.

"There we were, a long, long way from our own lines; in fact, nearly in the enemy's, isolated from every help and hardly knowing what was happening around us or what part we were really playing in the great struggle. The strain on the nerves was something terrific, every moment [illegible] to drop from sheer exhaustion, but still you kept up, you couldn't tell yourself how.

"So all Monday passed, and still no relief came; indeed, it was a question whether any minute we should not be blown to atoms and the line swamped with a rush of the enemy. We could hardly stand from fatigue, having been in action steadily since Saturday morning; but still we fought on almost blindly.

"'Fight on, lads,' said an officer, who was afterwards killed, poor chap. 'Remember the division looks to you. This is bound to end sooner or later. Let it be in a way that will never be forgotten when they hear of it at home in London and in Ireland.' So we fought on, and never a single German got nearer than a dozen yards from our lines. Soon we got the word that relief was coming under cover of the darkness. The announcement sent a terrific thrill of joy through us, for then we knew that we had won.

The After Battle Roll Call.

"The last few hours, however, were terrific. Our own shells had come to our rescue and under their shelter new troops came to relieve us, together with the stretcher bearers for our wounded. As soon as we got to the back trenches in safety a huge cheer went up from all the others, 'The London Irish—Hurroo!' and they shook us by the hand and took our rifles from our grasp and the kits from our backs in their eagerness to show their gratitude.

"The first few moments after the battle are very wonderful, for it is then that the roll call takes place and you see for the first time the terrible cost of victory. You hear pals calling out the names of pals and no answer coming back, and then the poor fellows who survive going round to get the last news. It's terrible. You see chaps who have stood the strain of battle like so many giants crying like children all alone.

"Then you see others around full of the enthusiasm of the great hour, taking out their pencils and scraps of paper and cardboard or anything in order to let the people get the first news of their escape as quickly as possible and saying that every one was telling how the London Irish had saved the situation.

"I put that down myself to the ordinary pride of regiment till we got it from the General himself, who assembled us together. 'Not only am I proud to have had the honour of being in command of such a regiment, lads,' he said, 'but the whole empire will be proud whenever in after years the battle of Loos comes to be written; for I can tell you that it was the London Irish who helped to save a whole British army corps. You've done one of the greatest actions of the war.'"

Never Begged.

Charles Hogg was the next witness called. He said he resided in North Monaghan and knew accused by sight. She had never solicited aid so far as he knew.

It was here that Magistrate Langley ruled out a number of questions asked by County Constable Moore. The Magistrate made it plain that he would not open up the court for the purpose of allowing the County Constable to justify his actions. The case before the court was one of vagrancy preferred against Alice Oliver.

"Can I explain, enquired Mr Moore, as he stepped into the witness box, presumably to give evidence. He said he felt annoyed at the way he had been "scandalized" by reason of the manner in which the case had been aired in the press.

Mr. McElderry pointed out that the constable's mode of arrest was not impeached. "If you have been aggrieved you have the remedies, but this is not the time or place. The Court is dealing with a place of vagrancy against the accused," said Mr. McElderry.

Continuing his evidence, Mr. Moore said he was instructed to go down and arrest the couple. He went down in an automobile in company with Milton Howland. When near the Kincaid farm, witness met a woman whom he took to be Alice Oliver about fifty yards from where the couple were staying. He apprehended the woman after telling her who he was. She started to "whine" and said "I can't go." Witness said you had better come along with me we are going to get a nice, comfortable place for your and your husband for the winter." She then requested permission to visit the house, which was granted. Accused started to light a fire but was prevented by the witness. The accused had no mitts so witness helped her to pull a pair of stockings on her hands. He then assisted her into the automobile, after which they proceeded to Andrew Hogg's, where the woman's husband was arrested. While on the way up the accused, according to Constable Moore gave him a severe tongue thrashing. She was very profane in her remarks.

Refused to Answer.

To Mr. McElderry, Constable Moore said he did not administer the customary warning.

"You brought her into Peterborough and then procured the warrant?' enquired Mr. McElderry.

"There was an understanding between Magistrate Langley and the Crown," replied the witness.

After further questioning, witness said he was unable to remember when he procured the warrant.

"You don't know whether you had rested the woman?"

the warrant with you when you arrested her?"

"I don't think I will answer that question. It has no bearing on the case, besides you objected to some of my questions," replied Constable Moore.

"Then you take it upon yourself to refuse to answer?" countered the counsel for defence.

"I think you will have to answer the question," observed the Court.

Witness replied by saying he did not remember whether he had the warrant with him.

Milton Howland, who drove the automobile for the constable, corroborated in part the evidence submitted by Constable Moore.

He said he heard very little of the conversation that took place in the car between the accused and Constable Moore. Witness submitted that the Constable treated the accused very carefully. He did not know what took place in the Kincaid house. It was here that the Constable was alone with the woman.

Mr. McElderry asked the Court to discharge the accused on the grounds that insufficient evidence had been produced to warrant a conviction.

Magistrate Langey said he did not think there was any evidence to justify a conviction. It was a very unfortunate affair, he said.

The woman was taken in charge by Adjutant McElhiney, who will see that she is provided for until arrangements can be made to have her placed in the County House of Refuge.

Reeve McIntosh authorised the County Clerk to make the necessary arrangements for the woman's removal to the House of Refuge. This can be done in extreme cases whether or not the party has resided in the County for the required period.

COUNTY CONSTABLE ASKS COMPLETE INVESTIGATION

In reply to Mr. F. D. Kerr's letter in The Examiner on Saturday regarding the death of Alexander Oliver in the jail on Friday morning, County Constable Archie Moore desires a full investigation into the arrest of the late Mr. Oliver. If it is proved that Mr. Moore used any undue violence or harsh treatment in making the arrest. While no name was mentioned in Mr. Kerr's letter, yet Mr. Moore was the official who made the arrest, and he states that the implied charge in the letter is utterly unwarranted in so far as he is concerned. He is prepared to prove by the evidence of Mr. Andrew Hogg's son and daughter that he treated Mr. and Mrs. Oliver with every consideration in the fact of violent abuse. Reviewing the antecedents to the arrest, Mr. Moore said: "I received a telephone message on Wednesday evening from Mr. McIntosh, Reeve of North Monaghan, telling me of a couple that were down in the old Kincaid house in a starving condition, but that Mr. Andrew Hogg took over some bread. It was felt by North Monaghan people, and it was the wish of the Township Council that the old couple should be taken in charge until their friends or former residence could be located. It was feared that something might happen to them and it was believed that they would be better off in the House of Refuge. Mr. Bell, a Councillor, had seen them and wanted them to go to the House of Refuge, but the old man said they had been in the home in Lindsay and they had had enough of it.

Laid Information.

As a result of the conversation with the reeve I laid a complaint of vagrancy following the usual procedure. I went down to the Kincaid place and met Mrs. Oliver on the highway about 80 yards from the house. I drove past her and waited at the gate until she came up. I asked her where her husband was and she replied that he was at Hogg's. I told her who I was and that I wanted her to come to a place where she would be warm and well cared for during the winter. She said she wanted to go into the house, so I went in with her. There was no fire in the house, there was a hen and 2 or 3 chickens in it, and a dead one on a window sill. There was an old mattress on the floor with two dirty quilts or parts of quilts on it. The stove was an old one; there was no table and the only food I saw was two raw turnips. Mrs Oliver walked out of the house of her own free will. I assisted her into the car and we drove to Mr. Hogg's, which did not take more than ten minutes.

Mr. Hogg came out and I asked him where Mr. Oliver was. He went around the edge of a shed and brought him. I took both the man and his wife into Mr. Hogg's house. I got an overcoat and put it on Mrs. Oliver and buttoned it close around her neck. I also got her a cup of tea. All this time Mr. Oliver was cursing and swearing at me using very abusive language I wanted to get a coat for him but he wouldn't have it.

We started out of the house to come home. I took Mrs. Oliver by the arm but when I reached the middle of the yard I found to my surprise the old man with a sharp axe behind me. I left Mrs. Oliver and caught hold of the axe handle. In trying to take it away from him the old man cursed and swore and kicked at me, and raised as much of a row as he could. I coaxed him to behave and to come along quietly that it was only for his own good, but he swore he wouldn't. I got a handcuff on one wrist, but it came apart. I then asked Mr. Hogg for a rope. I tied it once around Mr. Oliver's legs to keep him from kicking, and around his body holding the upper part of his arms, but leaving his hands free. I did not want him to strike at me. Mr. Hogg's son and I lifted him into the auto. All the way to Peterborough I sat on the back of the front seat facing the old couple. I put a buffalo robe around both of them, but the old man kept knocking it off. He used abusive language all the way. We were only about 20 minutes coming in. I went to Magistrate Langley's office where I had an appointment with him and then went to the Court House, where we waited until Magistrate Langley arrived. A joint charge of vagrancy was laid before the old couple, and they were remanded until Monday morning. They were then taken over by the Court House officials."

Demands Vindication.

Mr. Moore further stated that it was his desire and that of the North Monaghan people to treat the old couple with every kindness. Mr. Hogg's son remarked to him that he should not have to put up with the abuse both Mr. and Mrs. Oliver used toward him. The County Constable declares without reserve that he did not use either of the old people harshly, but treated them as kindly as possible. Had Mr. Kerr withheld his opinion until this morning's court he would have other testimony than Mrs. Oliver's. Mr. Moore says he wants his conduct vindicated, and is confident that the Hogg family will show that he used no harsh treatment toward Mr. and Mrs. Oliver.

That the vagrancy charge against Mrs. Oliver was dismissed proves nothing in regard to the manner of the arrest of both of them. Besides no evidence was taken in regard to the charge against Mr. Oliver, for the reason that he was dead, and in fact nothing was brought out in regard to the justification of the desires of the North Monaghan residents and Council, that the old couple should be taken to some proper home where they could be temporarily and comfortably cared for until it was learnedd where they had come from with a view to sending them back either to friends or the Lindsay Home they spoke of.

Efforts Being Made to Include China in the Entente Powers

WASHINGTON, November 22—Efforts are being made by Great Britain, France and Russia to include China in the membership of the Entente now aligned against the Germanic powers. Disclosure of this fact directed the attention of officials Washington to-day to a complicated situation in the Far East, the seriousness of which has not hitherto been realized.

It became known that in order to insure friendly relations between Japan and China conversations and exchanges had been proceeding in Pekin and the European capitals looking to the formal entrance of China on an equal footing with Japan into the alliance that now includes Great Britain, France, Russia, Italy, Japan and Serbia.

Military participation by China in the war would not be expected, but the political necessity of adding China to the allies is looked upon by them as of vast importance. It was learned to-day that recently several Japanese warships were placed at strategic points along the China coast and that the possibility of internal revolution in China through the proposed change from republic to parliamentary monarchy had caused some Japanese officials to believe that munitions of war should be husbanded for emergencies. When the recent Japanese-Chinese negotiations were in progress Japan similarly felt forced to hold her ammunition supply for developments, a circumstance that is known to have embarrassed Russia considerably.

So far as is known here most of the conversations have been conducted at Pekin and it is not clear how far the proposal has been discussed with the Japanese Government at Tokio. The belief is general, however, that Great Britain on account of the obligations of her allies with Japan, probably has consulted the Tokio government freely.

CHINA FAVORABLY INCLINED.

China's attitude has not yet developed, but in some quarters here the view is held that the Pekin government is favorably inclined to the Entente proposal, since the move would guarantee the integrity of China during the present disturbed condition of the world politics and safeguard her political interests at the peace conference. In fact some rumors have reached officials recently that the plan actually originated with the Chinese who saw in it a means of checkmating possible Japanese aggression.

Just what advantages would Nie to Japan in acquiescing in the proposal are not clear, but it is suggested in well-informed quarters that by placing on a solid foundation the relations between China and Japan Japanese commercial interests in Japan might be immune from the possible disturbances which recurrent political friction might bring about. The feeling in China against Japan has been growing on account of the recent negotiations and the possibility that a friendly spirit might be developed between the two Oriental countries also is said to be a factor in behalf of Japanese approval of the plan.

Secretary Lansing declined to comment on the situation declaring that whatever had been received by the American government on the subject was confidential, and could not be disclosed.

ROBT. FAIR & CO., Ltd.

A NINE-STOREY DOXOLOGY FACTORY

Los Angeles Edifice Includes Auditorium, Gymnasium, Theatre, Hospital and Barber Shop.

"The world wants an electric-lighted, self-starting, seven-cylinder church," says the pastor of the Trinity Methodist Church South, of Los Angeles, and in the erection of Trinity Auditorium the requirements for a "1915 model" religious plant seem to have been adequately answered.

The completion of the 9-storey church building, with social rooms, motion pictures, hotel for men, roof garden, cafeteria, barber shop, sun parlor, nursery, hospital and bowling alley, marks the largest enterprise in church building on the Pacific Coast, where many churches are breaking away from conventional ecclesiastical architecture and housed in "white temples" and the like, are showing that adaptability on which the Coast prides itself.

336 Hotel Rooms.

Activities of the church and Sunday school are confined to the first three floors and roof. There are 336 hotel rooms on the remaining floors and offices and club rooms of various religious and secular organizations.

In the hotel, all are outside rooms and many have sleeping porches and shower baths. On the roof there is ample room for tennis and basketball courts and an auditorium to seat five hundred. The roof garden is also used for entertainment features of the church activity. Typical of these was the 3-day boys' carnival a fun held during dedication week.

Movies a Feature.

The auditorium, seating 2,300 people, is fully equipped with stage, orchestra pit, the usual stage curtains, drops and footlights. In addition to the main auditorium are four others seating from three to five hundred persons. These rooms are beinused for Sunday school classes, recitals, club meetings and social events.

Motion pictures begin the regular Sunday school service and are also used through the week when feature photoplays are presented to the public at regular motion picture show rates. The annual income from the auditorium alone is expected to be $15,000, while the hotel is expected to yield $75,000 annually, the cafeteria $10,000 and the club rooms and store rooms $10,000.

In discussing the new field of activity for the church, the pastor has this to say:

"Many churches need to wake up and step out of their shroud. A shroud is a very prim, conventional thing, but it is a poor fighting garb. The church needs to be belted and buckled for war, for in these complex days of strange forces we are facing a new moral Armageddon. Trinity Auditorium will stand for reverence of the past, but it will also seek to keep in touch with present tendencies and have a share in all movements for community uplift.

Labour For General Uplift.

"Most churches deal with the soul's salvation to the exclusion of the mind and body. The church has been getting a few people, the club a few, the lodge people, the clubtions a few. We have combined the advantages of all of these in one comprehensive institution. There is just enough difference between trinity and other churches to make it interesting to many who have lost interest in religious work in general.

"Trinity Auditorium will not work along the ordinary circumscribed lines of a denominational church, but will labour for the general uplift of the community, and consequently will attract the attention of all people who are interested in the moral and intellectual improvement of the city."

Extremely Kind.

"My dear friend, I must ask you to lend me a sovereign at once: I have left my purse at home, and haven't a farthing in my pocket." "I can't lend you a sovereign just now, but I can put you in the way of getting the money at once." "You are extremely kind." "Here's twopence; ride home on the tram and fetch your purse."

ANOTHER GRAND TRUNK HOTEL.

The last addition to the great chain of Canada's hotels, built by the Grand Trunk System, is The Macdonald, Edmonton, Alta. This beautiful house, on the banks of the Saskatchewan, is described and pictures in a new booklet just issued by the Railway Company. The booklet is a very handsome one, containing a brief and concise description of this beautiful hotel, printed on India tint paper and illustrated with direct reproductions from photographs of the different rooms, the exterior of the hotel, and snapshots of Edmonton. The text is inserted in a cover printed in gold on hand-made paper, the tout ensemble making a very attractive publication, a copy of which may be had on application by writing to the Manager of The Macdonald Hotel, Edmonton, Alta.

"Mabel is engaged." "Whom to?" She doesn't say in her letter. All that she knows is that his first name is Frank."

THE GUNBOAT.

Out in the good clean water, where it's blue and wide and deep,
The pride of Britain's navy lies with thunders all asleep,
And the men they sing their British songs along the open sky
But the little modest gunboat, she's a-creepin' in to die!

The first line's swingin' lazy on the purple outer ring,
The proudest ship that ever kept the honour of a King!
But nosin' down the roadway past the bones of other wrecks
Goes the doughty little gunboat with her manhood on her decks!

Oh, the first line's in the offing, with its shotted lightnings pent,
The proudest fleet that ever kept the king his seas most!
But down the death-sown harbour where a ship may find her grave,
The plucky little gunboat is a-sinkin' 'neath the wave!

Then sing your British chanteys to the ends of all the seas,
And fling your British banners to the seven Oceans' breeze
But when you tell the gallant tale be neath the open sky,
Give honour to the gunboat that was not too small to die!

ANNUAL MEETING OF BUSINESS GIRLS' CLUB

Reports Show That the Organization Had a Busy and Highly Successful Year — Much Work Has Been Done.

THE OFFICERS ELECTED

The annual meeting of the Business Girls' Club was held in the Green Parlour of the "Y" on Friday, November 19, at 7.30 p.m.

The yearly report was presented as follows:

The Business Girls' Club was organized Wednesday, Nov. 25, 1914, when about 42 members were enrolled. Miss H. Dennison being president. The annual membership fee was decided upon as 25c.

The first two meetings were held in the Peterborough Typewriter Company's store, then Mr. Travers offered the girls the use of the Bank of Montreal chambers until such time as they could procure other accommodation.

The distribution of toys and candy to the girls, for some little children, who were otherwise unprovided for, was held in one of the stores of the Toronto Savings and Loan Building, kindly loaned for the occasion by Mr. Morrow. Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald supplying the coal for heating purposes and Messrs. Alexander & Miller attending to the lighting.

With an expenditure of about $100 about 288 pounds of candy and 510 toys were purchased, with some 25 donated, making it possible to remember 525 children at Christmas.

On Feb. 10 Miss Dennison resigned from the office of president and Miss Lillian Hall was appointed as her successor. At this meeting Miss Peacock placed the particulars of the "Y" at the disposal of the girls, at the same time offering a club room in the building should the girls become members of the "Y."

On April 16 a cheque for $15 was sent to Captain Grey, Kingston, being a donation to the Field Kitchen Fund of the 21st Batt., 2nd Overseas Contingent.

On April 22 the girls held a sheet and towel shower in the gym of the Y.W.C.A. which was decorated for the occasion through the generosity of Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons and the Peterboro Floral Company.

The shower was open to the public and some 65 sheets, 117 towels, 6 wash cloths, and $44.88 in cash were donated for the Toronto University Base Hospital No. 3 and sent forward in due course.

The club is very grateful to Mr. J. M. Greene for engaging someone to make the sheets at his store, to Mr. Featherington of the Peterboro Laudry for laundering the sheets and towels, and to Mr. Reid for transferring the utensils from the J. M. Greene Music store to the "Y."

At a business meeting held at the conclusion of a picnic at Jackson Park, July 16, 45 was sent to a little child in East City who is in rather unfortunate circumstances.

On Saturday, July 30, the girls attended a tennis tea at the Brinton Carpet Company, the courts being placed at the disposal of the girls for the afternoon through the kindness of Mr. Brock.

On Nov. 15 a cheque for $50 was sent to Kingston University Base Hospital, being a donation for two cots.

Beginning Oct 26, the girls are devoting every Tuesday evening to work at the Red Cross rooms in the Public Library.

Total enrollment at the end of the first year 85. Total meetings during the year, social and business, 18. Total attendance, 458. Average attendance, 25.

The girls wish to tender a hearty vote of thanks to all those who so kindly assisted them in many ways during the year, especially to the officers of the Y.W.C.A., for such material help in allowing the girls the use of the parlours for their meetings and to the press for their uniform courtesy and kindness in inserting notices, etc.

V. GUTHRIE, Secretary.

BRIDGENORTH HUNTERS GOT THEIR SHARE

Returning Party Report that the Deer Were Plentiful This Year

BRIDGENORTH, Nov 22. The Jopling hunting party returned with their complement of deer on Wednesday night. The party was composed of Jim and Fred Jopling, Isaac Elliott, Bert and Fred Dobson of the city and Jack Knot and C. Forsythe. Their hunting ground is at Stoney Creek. They report deer plentiful.

The McManus and Heard party returned with their complement of deer. They hunted in from Burleigh Falls. They report deer very numerous.

The Rev. Mr. Cruickshanks of the city preached the anniversary services on Sunday last. There were two services, morning and night. The church was comfortably filled at night and the free-will offering amounted to about $165.00. The Rev. Mr. Cruickshanks was a former pastor here about six years ago. He was stationed here for three years and his services here were very much appreciated. The Rev. Mr. Gall of the Gilmour Memorial church was in attendance and took part in the services.

At the close of Sunday school on Sunday afternoon the organist of the church was in the basement practising some of the children in singing when the caretaker locked up the church, with the result that the organist and her pupils were locked up for some time. Their only escape was by the window, which was a difficult task on a stormy day like Sunday.

The village blacksmith is busy sharpening up the horses for the roads as there is a lot of grain to be hauled out.

Germany Held Responsible For the Sinking of the Italian Str. "Ancona"

Ancona Case Supposedly was the Topic of a Long Conference Between Foreign Minister Somnino and Ambassador Page —Monastir has Not Yet Fallen.

GENEVA Nov. 23.— Prilep is burning, dispatches from the Balkans report to-day. The town is the important southern Serbia centre captured by the Bulgars last week on their march to Monastir. It is supposed the Bulgars set it on fire in reprisal for some act by the Serbs.

THE ANCONA CASE.

ROME, Nov. 23.— The Ancona case supposedly was the topic of a long conference between Foreign Minister Sennino and American Ambassador Page to-day. All information the Italian government has gathered concerning the torpedoing of the liner is understood to have been placed at the Ambassador's disposal.

No statement has been given out, but popular opinion inclines more and more to hold Germany responsible for the attack. The Censors' apparent indifference to newspaper attacks on the Kaiser is generally regarded as significant in its contrast with the pains taken by the authorities during the early stages of the Austro-Italian struggle to prevent anything from being said which might give offense to Germans.

10,000 BULGARS KILLED.

LONDON, Nov. 23.— Ten thousand Bulgers have been killed and wounded in the fighting for Monastir. The Bulgar forces attacked the town Saturday, Salonica advices say it was learned here to-day for the first time that the assault was repulsed. Repeated earlier reports were to the effect that the town had fallen.

VIENNA, Nov. 23.— The Austrian War Office admits the capture of Zan Martino by the Italians.

LONDON, Nov. 23. — Premier Asquith announced in the Commons that the government would introduce a Registration Bill on Wednesday containing a provision to extend the life of the present Parliament till the end of the war.

GENEVA, Nov. 23. — Austrian despaches report terrific fighting for the possession of Gorizia. The Red Cross has been overwhelmed with wounded. Italian reports claim success.

ROME, Nov. 23.—News of the blockade of Greece followed here by official announcement that Italy is acting in full harmony with the Allies and approves of it.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 3.—Extensive military preparations have been made near the Danish frontier as though to resist a siege. Several regiments have been sent to Alsen.

REVOLT FEARED IN ATHENS

King Constantine Sees Compulsion to Yield to Allies

NEW YORK, Nov 23. A news agency despatch from Rome, yesterday says:

An anti-dynastic revolutionary outbreak is feared in Athens. Troops are patrolling the streets and occupying all strategic positions, and a large force is guarding the Royal Palace.

The Cabinet Council is constantly in session, the chiefs of the military staff participating.

The impression prevails that King Constantine realizes that he will be forced to yield to the Allies demands

CHICAGO DRY DOCK LARGEST ON LAKES

Put Into Service Again and Will Employ One Thousand Men.

CHICAGO, Nov 23.—For the first time in eight years, the flood gates of a dry dock of the ship yards at 101st Street and the Calumet River, were thrown open, putting in service the largest dry dock on the great lakes. A 600-foot freighter, the George S Baker, was the first to enter. A thousand men will be employed

The drydock shut down eight years ago because of a strike. Recently $500,000 has been expended in improvements.

HUNS SICK OF WAR SAYS PRISONER

LONDON, Nov. 23.—One of the prisoners taken in the Canadian surprise attack on a German trench said they were being well fed, but he was glad to be captured, as all German soldiers are utterly sick of the war.

The Canadian medical services intend to secure their own hospital in London to accommodate 25 officers. At present officers are sent to private hospitals.

BURIAL OF THE "BRIDAL" CORPSE

Proxy of Society Girl's Phantom Lover is Interred.

CHICAGO, Nov 23.—"Dr Alleyne Hensley," the latter demolition who went to his marriage in a coffin, will be buried, and the sexton's clods will close that strange post-mortem escapade on which he adventured to Atlanta with the society girl, Julia Choate Crumley.

The proxy for Miss Crumley's phantom sweetheart is to be buried in the Arlington cemetery with full ceremony. He thereby escapes the grave that was dug in Potter's Field for the waif killed Oct. 31 in the Illinois Central freight yards.

A mysterious person representing the Crumley family of Atlanta, has made all arrangements with the Western Casket and Undertaking Company for the decent burial of the nameless "bridegroom." The body of the unknown tramp was returned to Chicago from Atlanta several days ago and taken to the Western Undertaking Company rooms where Miss Crumley had impressed it as her grim fiancee

WOULD MAKE ONE DAY'S KILLING

Hudson Maxim's Description of the American Army.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov 23 Hudson Maxim, addressing the Kansas City Commercial Club at its annual dinner, asserted that the only way America could be saved from war would be to have a big navy and powerful enough to stand successfully against any other navy in the world and "an army big enough to save the country from the horrors of defeat and humiliating even should our navy be destroyed."

"Our army would make just about one good day's killing," Mr Maxim said. "Suppose the enemy should land at Boston or New York or at any of the ports between. Nothing we could do would prevent the invaders from capturing the entire country between the Alleghanies and the sea within two weeks.

"Any one of the great warring nations, if victorious, would have available several million war-tried veterans for a trial at arms with us, and should that foreign nation be either England or Germany it would have a navy far superior to our own."

Great Anglo-French Fleet Ready to Strike Hard To Guard Troops From Treachery

British Press Hopes Greek King Will Bow to Will of People and Make Definite Cause With Allies Before It is Too Late to Avoid a National Catastrophe.

LONDON, Nov 23 Despatches from Athens report that Lord Kitchener had more than an hour's conference with King Constantine, followed by a brief interview with Mr Skouloudis, the Prime Minister, and coincidentally with the fateful call of Britain's War Secretary on the King the newspapers of Athens published extras containing the communique issued by the British Legation declaring in the name of the Quadruple Entente an economic and commercial blockade of Greece. The announcement caused a panic in all circles, as it is recognized the hour for Greece has struck. Her King must now declare for the Central Empires, give to the Allies a satisfactory guarantee of the continuance of a benevolent neutrality or, by immediate action, prove that he is willing to submit to the wishes of the great majority of the Hellenic people by honouring his treaty with Serbia and ranging his army and navy on the side of the Entente, thus making for a Greater Greece.

The Greek Cabinet forwarned of the vigorous policy to be initiated by the Quadruple Entente, was in continuous session from nine o'clock on Friday night till three o'clock on Saturday morning, and information that it was unable to agree upon any definite course was followed by the manifesto of the Entente Powers.

Only one member of the Cabinet said to be Mr. Gounaris, the man whose threats to disarm the Serbians and Franco-British forces led to the allied warning that Greece must intervene in behalf of Serbia or demobilize, favoured casting the lot of the nation with the Central Empires. The King and the other Ministers insisted on maintaining the policy of benevolent neutrality, but they would not agree to give the definite guarantees demanded by the representatives of the four great Powers.

An immense crowd that witnessed the arrival of Lord Kitchener at the Palace cheered Britain's War Secretary as heartily as it did Mr Denys Cochin, Minister of France, thus evidencing that the heart of the Greek people is with the Allies.

Despite the pessimistic tone of the British newspapers there still is hope the King will go with instead of against his people. If he does Mr Venizelos will be immediately recalled.

Whatever the outcome is to be, and we shall not have a long wait, the great Franco-British fleet is where it can strike hard and protect the allied troops in Serbia from Greek treachery.

Of the French and British troops no news has been received. Apparently they are only holding their positions and can no longer hope to render assistance to the Serbians except by keeping a large number of Bulgarians engaged. According to German reports an effort will be made by the French and British to save the Serbian armies by sending troops through Montenegro and Albania but, with poor roads, it will take a long time for them to reach the battlefield.

Already the Serbians are making what may be their last stand near Monastir and also on the Plains of Kossovo. The Bulgarians, it is true, are being held up by unfavourable weather conditions, but they must be almost at the gates of the Macedonian capital by this time, while the Austro-Germans and Bulgarians are slowly but surely pressing back the northern army.

The Germans announced yesterday the capture of Novibazar, and are, therefore, on the direct road to Mitrovitza, which has been the Serbian capital since Nish fell into the hands of the Bulgarians. Other armies are pressing in from the north the northwest, the northeast and the east, and even the Montenegrins, who have been joined by a Serb detachment, and who held their positions for so long, are being driven into their own mountains.

One of Germany's New Dreadnoughts Sunk by Mine in Baltic

LONDON, Nov. 23.—A despatch from Rotterdam says one of Germanys newest dreadnoughts struck a mine in the Baltic and went to the bottom. Thirty-three of the crew were drowned.

PARRY SOUND, Nov. 23. — The plant of the Canadian Explosives, Limited, has been blown up, probably by alien enemy troops now in charge. Nobody was hurt so far as is known.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Guns of the British fleet now command the Greek coast cities. It is believed King Constantine will give in.

ATHENS, Nov. 23.—Another large contingent of British have reached Monastir and a Bulgar defeat has been confirmed.

PARIS, Nov. 23. — It is believed here the Balkan sky is now clearing in favour of the Allies.

MILLIONS ARE MAKING SUPPLIES

Britain Has Huge Army of Men and Women Producing Shells.

LONDON, Nov 23. Lord Murray of Elibank, director of recruiting in the Ministry of Munitions, in an interview published in Lloyds Weekly, says:

"More than a million men and women are labouring continuously turning out an ever increasing supply of munitions for the land war. Trades unions, fired with a desire to win the war for freedom, have surrendered rights won after centuries of fight, rights which must be restored after the allies have marched, as Mr Briand said, through victory to peace.

These men are working from sixty to a hundred hours each week, and from every quarter I hear of the extraordinary zeal and efficiency of the many thousands of women employed in making shells.

"This great department is a marvellous success as the result of the superhuman work of Mr. Lloyd George the splendid staff of business men who are supporting him and the working men and women who are doing much more than their bit so that the soldiers in the trenches may win the war."

Nearly 5,000,000 bushels of Canadian grain have come to New York since early August for shipment to Great Britain Italy and France

WAR DRILL IN SCHOOLS

German Youths Being Drilled Into Militarism at Early Age.

Purporting to write from Berlin, a correspondent of the Paris "Temps" describes how every school boy now has to learn war drill, and declares that, started at the outset in a burst of patriotism and emulation, the work is now gone about in real earnest as if even lads of thirteen, fourteen and fifteen may yet find themselves drafted to the battlefield.

They are taught to dig themselves in and make big trenches in the latest fashion, and special marks are given for all who prove themselves expert hand grenade throwers. Bayonet exercises are another branch to which particular attention is paid. Every school has, in short, simply become a kind of preparatory barracks.

Applying This Paste Actually Removes Hair

(Beauty Notes.)

Merely applying an inexpensive paste to a hairy surface, say beauty specialists will dissolve the hairs. This paste is made by mixing a little water with some powdered delatone; after about two minutes it is rubbed off and the skin washed. This simple method not only removes every trace of hair but leaves the skin free from blemish. To insure success with this treatment be careful to get real delatone.

GETTING NO PARIS GOWNS

President Wilson's Fiancee Causes Denial to be Issued.

Washington, D.C., Nov 23 Both M. Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the President, and Miss Edith W Benham, social secretary at the White House, denied the truth of despatches from Paris that Mrs Norman Galt, fiancee of the President, is having difficulty in getting gowns in the French capital through Mr Kurzmann, of New York, because his name is German. The reports are not true, they said, because Mrs. Galt is not getting any gowns in Paris. It was generally agreed by those who discussed the matter that there is no possibility of a diplomatic question being raised.

A despatch from Paris says:

Late this afternoon the Paris Dressmakers' Association held an official meeting at which its original decision not to ship gowns ordered by Charles Kurtzmann of New York was formally reaffirmed.

STOMACH ACTS FINE! NO INDIGESTION, GAS HEARTBURN, ACIDITY

"Pape's Diapepsin" Fixes Sick, Sour, Upset Stomachs in Five Minutes

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad or an uncertain one or a harmful one, your stomach is too valuable, you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief, its harmless-ness; its certain, unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy, get a large fifty-cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them, if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas, causes headache, dizziness and nausea, eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

Soldier of Fortune — by Randall Parrish

Copyright, 1912, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

The [illegible] also standing until I could see beyond the boat swing to the davits. It was a small, light boat, fashioned like a cutter, a good seagoing craft for its size. Two oars and a short mast together with a roll of canvas, were stowed on top of the thwarts and secured by lashings. I cut one of these and drew forth about three fathoms of line sufficiently pliable for my purpose. The boat being ready for launching the falls easily unhooked, and two pair of hands would be sufficient to lower it into the water. There was a locker forward I was unable to reach, but two water kegs lided were strapped under the stern sheets leading me to believe the craft was fully equipped for immediate service. My mind filled with a daring hope by this discovery. I fastened the rope to the end of the cold, weighted it with a bunch of keys and crept back to where I had marked the rail. Inch by inch I paid out the line, leaning well over. At last my ears detected the dimpling of the metallic keys against the glass, and by manipulating the rope managed to make them sound with fair insistence. I repeated the effort several times before there was any response. Then the port seemed to be opened cautiously, although no gleam of light shot forth. She had evidently extinguished her lamp before venturing to answer the signal, but I felt her grasp on the cord. Then it was left dangling against the closed port leaving me to infer that she was reading the nasty note.

My line was again hauled taut, but as I straightened up, prepared to haul up the returning message, I saw the shadow of a man passing across the cabin below. He was already at the foot of the companion stairs; in another minute he would be on deck. There was no time to do otherwise, and I released my grasp of the rope, letting it drop silently into the water. I had barely turned my back to the rail when Stanley emerged within six feet of me.

"Who is this? Oh, you, Craig?" he questioned sharply. "Not asleep yet?"

"Not even drowsy," I said, pretending an ease I was far from feeling.

"You think favorably of my plan, I hope."

"I see no reason to refuse, if the pay is all right."

"It will be, trust me for that. A beautiful night this—the air as soft as June. I was about to turn in, but decided to take a whiff on deck first."

"Rather a captain's duty, is it not?"

"I believe so, in regular service, but this is decidedly irregular. The fact is, that while I am the owner of this vessel and technically in command, I am no navigator. I merely give my general orders and trust the seamanship to Herman. He is perfectly trustworthy and capable, and I never interfere. The last voyage I doubt if I was on deck twice, although, of course," he added soberly, "my word goes if I should care to exercise authority."

"What are those lights off yonder?" I asked, pointing.

"Shore lights."

"Then we are steering east?"

"A bit south of east, yes; odd course for Honduras, you think?"

I nodded, willing enough to let him talk.

"We are playing the game safe, Craig, that's all," he explained, both hands gripping the rail. "You see, we cleared for Santiago and are not anxious to be seen and reported by any westbound ships. Tomorrow we will be hidden among the islands off the west Florida coast. Then, as soon as it is dark we will shoot out under full steam into the gulf. The chances are we'll cross the lane unobserved. If we should intercept a liner, she won't identify us in the dark as we burn no lights. By daylight we'll be well beyond their lookouts and can steer a straight course."

The proximity of the man irritated me. I wanted to be alone, where I could think out some feasible scheme of escape.

"I have had enough for tonight," I said finally, "and am going to turn in."

"Best thing you can do," he coincided, but without looking toward me. "Will follow suit as soon as I smoke a cigarette. See you tomorrow."

When I awoke the sun was shining through the glass of my porthole, and, glancing forth, I caught the dazzle of the water. The vessel was motionless, apparently riding at anchor, the sea barely rippled by a gentle breeze. The breakfast table was set for one, and the black steward was lolling lazily in a chair. At sight of me he got to his feet.

"Ah suah thought you wasn't nebber goin' ter wake up, sah," he said genially, showing his teeth. "Ah bin waitin' fer yer more'n two hours, Ah reckon."

"For me! Have the others eaten then?"

"Mostly, sah, mostly. De captain he nebber eat no breakfast. He say et ain't good fer his libber. Yew, yaw! But de mates dey both bin down."

"What time is it?"

"Most 10, sah."

"Has Mrs. Manley breakfasted yet?" I asked.

"Who, sah?"

"The lady you have on board."

He scratched the wool on his head vigorously, glancing behind the mast as though uncertain what he had best answer.

"Ah suah nebber know'd dat was her name, sah. No, sah, Ah nebber done suspected it. Yes, sah, she had her breakfast, but Ah reckon she didn't eat much."

"You served her here at the table?"

"No, sah; in her room, sah," his voice low. "De captain he unlock de door an' den lock it agin. You like sugah in your coffee, sah?"

I found the after deck entirely deserted, and there was no one visible on the bridge. Two or three sailors, the anchor watch, were forward engaged in some service about the capstan, and a fellow was swabbing the deck amidships. I heard Broussard's voice at a distance, but could not locate him. However, no one paid the slightest attention to me as I stood smoking and gazing curiously around. Everything appeared peaceful enough. We were lying in a small harbor within a hundred feet of the shore. I sauntered forward toward the bridge, aiming to exchange greetings with the creole mate. Broussard was not a man to expect favors from, and I had hated him with the first glimpse of his face, yet he possessed his racial characteristic of impulsive speech and was thus far more approachable than the gruff German first officer. Perhaps if he believed me an accomplice he might be led to talk.

"How you com' on se deck, m'sieur?" he asked, his eyes threatening. "I thought you down below, locked in all tight," and he waved an expressive hand aft.

CHAPTER XIII.

Tables Turned.

I LAUGHED, but without paying him the compliment of looking at him.

"I've changed allegiance, that's all, Broussard. The captain turned me loose last night."

"You wif us? You go volunteer?"

"Well, something like that. I'm to be drillmaster or general for those tattered battalions down in the jungles. What do you think of the job?"

He shrugged his shoulders and then grinned.

"What se dif!" and he swept his hands about in expressive gesture. "Sea—land, if only one gets the price, m'sieur. But, for me, I like to go, to move—not lie still an' rot."

"Of course," falling into his mood, "that's in your blood, I reckon. But the captain said we were only to hide here for a day."

"Maybe day, maybe week. No one knows how long. We wait till the sea is clear. Bah! The man 'fraid of shadow. He give me sheep, an' I show heem. He no sailor, m'sieur. I know heem long while."

"How long?"

"Oh, seek, eight year."

"Then you can tell me if he is really Judge Henley's son?"

"Oui, m'sieur; 'tis sure I can. I hav' been with heem there!" he thrust out outstretched landward. "Where we got you, hey, many the time; besides, the lodge he been on sis sheep. Of course he was son; why you think not?"

"I am beginning to believe I do not know very much about it, Broussard," I explained briefly, moving aside to the rail. "I came down south with another story pumped into me, that's all."

"And so young woman," he persisted, following me closely, "why she come?"

"For the same reason I did."

"Mere like 'cause she love you, hey! Sacre! She was fine lookin' girl, but"—shrugging his shoulders—"'tis the capitaine, not no mate, who may admire. He is no capitaine; nobody tell him not go so far Gulf."

I left him and walked aft, aware as I turned of the sneer on his face. Yet even then, although burning with anger, I knew better than to remain. I [illegible] the bitter words on my tongue, feeling certain that whatever I said would be repeated to Herman. I knew men well enough to understand the character of the Sea Gull's captain. With unlimited power in his hands he was not an antagonist to be despised. Nor did I doubt his purpose. Now that he had seemingly won me over to his scheme he would turn his attention to her, feeling secure from interference. And he was Judge Henley's son or, at least, so Ulysses Henley had declared who had been associated with him for years. The situation grew more and more complicated; it was no longer merely her word against his, and yet I could not doubt the truth of any statement she had made to me.

Broussard stood in my direction for a moment, but made no effort to follow, and finally disappeared forward. There was nothing on sea or land to distract my attention, and I felt that I would be nearer to her below in the cabin than on deck. The skylight was closed, although even then it gave me a partial view, and, as I gazed through the clouded glass I perceived a shadowy pass. The next instant the negro steward emerged from the companion. Some swift impulse led me to crouch instantly out of sight, until the sound of his feet on the deck convinced me the fellow was going forward. I watched him cautiously. He stopped twice to glance back, but, perceiving nothing, finally vanished into the forecastle.

The negro's going forward left the captain, and Viola Henley alone below. I crept to the door of the companion and then down the stairs.

The main cabin was vacant, but the door of No. 5 stateroom stood slightly ajar. Assured I should find it empty, my heart already beating furiously, I took a swift glance within. It in no way differed from the room which had been assigned me opposite, and everything was in perfect order. Evidently the girl had departed without a struggle, and with full expectation of an early return. Her small handbag lay on the berth unlatched, and a handkerchief, together with a pair of gloves, were upon the chair. That she had not gone on deck was a certainty, while the deserted cabin led me irresistibly to suspect the captain's quarters. He had dismissed the steward on some excuse, opened her door, and, using some pretense, or authority, had induced her to accompany him. What I could do to help her, to overcome him, was not evident. I was alone, unarmed, surrounded by men under his command.

THE BATTLE AUTUMN.

(By John G. Whittier (1862.)

The flags of war like storm-birds fly,
The charging trumpets blow;
Yet rolls no thunder in the sky,
No earthquake strives below.

And calm and patient Nature keeps
Her ancient promise well,
Though o'er her bloom and greenness sweeps
The battle's breath of hell.

And still she walks in golden hours
Through harvest-happy farms
And still she wears her fruit and flowers
Like jewels on her arms

What mean the gladness of the plain,
This joy of eve and morn,
The mirth that shakes the beard of grain
And yellows fields of corn?

Ah, eyes may well be full of tears,
And hearts with hate are hot;
But even-paced Time counts round the years,
And Nature changes not.

She meets with smile our bolt and ball,
With sunny hair our graves of pain,
She mocks with mist of flower and leaf
The wounds and crimson stain.

Still in the cannon's pause we hear
Her song of thanksgiving and praise,
Too near to God for doubt or fear,
She shares the eternal calm.

She knows the seed lies safe below
The fires that blast and burn;
For all the tears of blood we sow
She waits the rich return.

She sees with clearer eyes than ours
The end of suffering and sin,
The flowers that bloom in place of flowers,
And spare the life within.

In God's own time, she sees and knows
The service of her sons,
The obscure graves of heroes
Alone this stormy din,
We too would hear the bells of rest
Ring peace and freedom in.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A CASE OF HEDGING.

By GEORGE HERBERT COHN.

When I was studying medicine, one afternoon I was in the dissecting room hurrying to get through with a subject before the building should be closed for the night. An examination was before me the next morning and there would be no opportunity to return to the dissecting room for some time to come. I had finished every member except a foot when time was up, and, stuffing it in a hand bag I used to carry needed articles between the city and the place I lived in the suburbs, I left the room, intending to finish my work at home.

On my way I made one of a game of whist in the smoking car with three strangers. Finishing a rubber just as my station was called, I hastily picked up my bag and left the train. On reaching home I tossed my satchel on a table, made my toilet and went down to dinner. In the evening I went up to my room to go to work. What was my astonishment and chagrin on taking up the bag to discover that it was not mine.

I was in a pickle. Whoever had taken my own satchel on opening it would be horrified to discover a human foot. The fact would be reported to the police, and if the owner could be identified I would be subject to a charge of murder, followed by an effort to get rid of the corpse piecemeal.

The wise thing to have done was to report my loss to the police at once. I thought of this, but before doing so concluded to look into the bag I had taken with a view to discovering the owner. It was locked, and I was obliged to force it.

The only articles in it were burglars' tools.

"Well," I said to myself, "whoever has taken my satchel is not likely to report his find, since by doing so he will incriminate himself. There is no necessity for my giving the subject any further attention."

Were it not for one of those strange coincidences that are continually happening my story would end here. A year after my exchange of satchels my house, or, rather, my father's, was robbed. I followed one of the men downstairs, where they had turned on the lights, and caught him by the coattail just as he was going out the front door. He turned and gave me a blow which knocked me down. He made his escape, but during the brief instant I saw his face I recognized my partner at whist on the journey when I had exchanged satchels. I wondered whether he had recognized me, but it occurred to me that he had not, for the light was at my back.

Two more years passed. One day while on a train a man took a seat beside me, and when I looked at him I recognized my partner at whist and in the same man the burglar who had robbed my father's house. My first thought was to summon the conductor and have him telegraph ahead to the police. My second was to turn up my coat collar and pull my hat down over my eyes so that the burglar would not know me. Then I remembered that he had only seen me once, since when I had grown a beard. Thus reassured, I made a remark to him. He replied, and we entered into conversation.

Now, it occurred to me that should I make a charge of burglary against him I would stand in a vulnerable position. He had been possessed of my subject's foot, and I was uncertain what, if any, use he would make of it to establish a countercharge. I concluded to discover if possible what his intentions might be in this respect. I told him the story of the exchange of satchels as having happened to a friend of mine. He turned and after fixing a sharp glance on me said coldly:

"I see you are the man with whom I played whist and who went off with my satchel."

"And you are the man who robbed a house in M. two years ago and whom I caught by the coattail and recognized as he passed out. Suppose I give you away?"

"You'll stand trial on a charge of murder."

"I can easily prove that I was a medical student and was taking the foot home for dissection."

"Not so fast, please. To head you off I learned of a missing man and secured evidence to prove conclusively that a man of your description was seen to murder the person who had disappeared. Then I turned over your satchel with the foot in it to the police."

Suddenly it dawned upon me how foolish I had been not to report the case myself. It would have blocked my opponent's game.

"If you report me," he continued, "persons supposed to be unknown to me will inform the police of your identity with the man whom my witnesses saw you murder. You will be arrested, tried and the best of circumstantial evidence furnished to prove that you had a grudge against him, murdered him and intended to protect yourself in case of discovery by the fact that you were a medical student studying anatomy."

A mental vision of one of those celebrated murder cases of which I would be the central figure and wherein half the people believed in the accused's guilt and the other half in his innocence came up before me.

"My friend," I said, "in the eye of the law should we inform on each other we would both be suspected criminals, which is the next thing to being proved criminals. I am quite sure I would be proved guilty. At any rate, I should be ruined. Go in peace."

Corn Products Entrained.

The president of a western railway system was spending the week end at the country house of a friend in New York when one evening some reference was made by a layman touching the commercial greatness of the country as evidenced by railway operations.

"What you say is quite true," observed the head of the big system. "Do you know that if the corn products in this country for the last year were loaded into one train the engine thereof would be entering the state of New Jersey just as the caboose was leaving Los Angeles?"

At this remark a woman present could not suppress her astonishment and incredulity. "How you men do exaggerate!" she exclaimed. "You know very well that even two engines could not pull such a train!"—New York Tribune.

ACID STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

Common Sense Advice by a Distinguished Specialist.

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach, and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatments are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized, and its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a simple antacid, taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acidity is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause distress may be eaten with impunity if the meal is followed with a little bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist, and should always be kept handy.

Weight of a Lion.

What does a lion weigh? Those who know the look of the king of beasts best and how small his little body really is will probably come farthest from the truth. About 300 to 350 pounds is a usual estimate, but a full grown lion will tip the scales at no less than 500 pounds. Five hundred and forty pounds is the record for an African lion. His bone is solid and heavy as ivory. The tiger runs the lion very close. A Bengal tiger killed by an English officer scaled 520 pounds. A tiger this size has, however, considerably more muscular strength than the biggest lion.

Hired His Newspaper.

Lady Taylor once took a friend to see the poet Tennyson and was rather coldly received. On Lady Taylor rallying him on his manner he said:

"Madam, I am a poor man, and as I can't afford to buy the Times I have it from the stationer. He charges me 2 cents for it, which entitles me to keep it an hour. Why will people select just that hour to come and call on me?"

His Periodicals.

"Do you take any periodicals?" asked the clergyman on his first round of parish visits.

"Well, I don't," replied the woman, "but my husband takes 'em frequent. I do wish you'd try to get him to sign the pledge."

MOISTURE AND HEAT.

Why a Person May Feel Cold in a Room That is Well Heated.

It often happens in winter that a person living in a steam heated apartment feels cold even when the thermometer shows the necessary degree of warmth in the room. Of course there is a reason for this and also a very simple remedy. The reason is that the air in the room is too dry—it does not contain enough moisture—and the remedy is, of course, to keep some water in the room all the time, so that it can evaporate into the air.

Our bodies, you see, are at all times exuding moisture in the form of perspiration. Now, this perspiration, even in winter, amounts to a great deal more than one would think, being measured in the pints. To evaporate water heat has to be used up, and, as the body is warmer than the air, the heat to evaporate this perspiration is taken from the body. Of course then the body feels cold.

Here is still another illustration of this fact: It has been shown by actual experiment that a man can stay in an oven heated to the boiling temperature of water and not get uncomfortably hot—that is, painfully hot. The heat makes him perspire, and the heat taken up by evaporation from the body keeps the body from getting hot. But suppose that the oven already contained in its atmosphere all the water vapor that it could hold. Then, as none could evaporate from the body, the drops on the body would soon get near the boiling point. So in the room referred to above, if it contains a good bit of moisture the evaporation from the body will not be so fast, and consequently the body will not feel cold.—New York American.

GinPills FOR THE KIDNEYS

What They Cured

Here's the remarkable experience of a Nova Scotian:—

"I was once a terrible sufferer with kidney and bladder troubles, and at times I would lose the use of my legs, and could not go away from home without some one with me. I was treated by different doctors for 3 years, and only got temporary relief. My son advised me to take Gin Pills, and after taking the first 2 or 3 doses I got relief. I continued to take them until I got completely cured. I owe my life to Gin Pills.

Yours very truly,

THIS SCHOOL GIRL HAD BAD FAINTING SPELLS

Was Weak and Run Down. But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Made Complete Cure

The most critical time in a girl's life comes during the school age, when she is impelled by rivalry to put forth her best efforts in studying for examinations. At the time she should have healthful outdoor exercise and abundance of fresh air, to keep the blood pure and rich, she is confined to her studies. Is it any wonder that she becomes run down in health and suffers from headaches, indigestion, loss of appetite and spells of weakness or fainting?

The case described in this letter is a good illustration and you can read here the splendid results of using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to help through this critical period.

"While attending school my daughter became weak and very much run down. She was frequently troubled with bad fainting spells, and nothing we tried seemed to do her any good. We were advised to try Dr Chase's Nerve Food, and did so with most satisfactory results. I am pleased to tell you that after using five boxes of the Nerve Food she was completely cured, and has no return of the fainting spells."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Hamilton Houston, Justice of the Peace.

The reason Dr Chase's Nerve Food is so effective in cases of this kind is because of its extraordinary blood-forming influence. By creating an abundance of rich, red blood it strengthens the action of the heart, revitalizes the exhausted nerves and builds up the system in every way.

The appetite is restored, digestion improves, you rest and sleep well, and the new vigour and energy is felt in every organ of the human body. Dr Chase's Nerve Food is doing wonders for men, women and children whose systems have become weak and run down. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto

An Ancient Industry.

It would be difficult to say where exactly and at what date the manufacture of cotton fabrics began. In comparatively modern times, says Country Life, it has become an industry of importance in Europe, but it has flourished in the east from a period too remote to admit of calculation. The Egyptians certainly used both cotton and linen materials, for fragments of such stuffs have been preserved among the other relics of their ancient civilization, and there is much reason to believe that the elaborate draperies of the Assyrians were cotton or muslins finely woven and of delicate texture. In China, too, and India the same kinds of material have been the common wear of the people from time immemorial. In fact, everywhere throughout the east cotton fabrics were professed and used long before the primitive Europeans had begun to develop any of the germs of civilization or indeed had ceased to be anything but skin clad savages.

Most Awkward.

An old, steady going farmer was accustomed to ride to the market town upon a rather bad tempered horse.

One day his man Bob brought the animal, which was especially vicious that morning, to the door, the horse trying to bite and kick and giving a good deal of trouble.

The farmer mounted the horse with some difficulty and began to walk it out of the yard when Bob, who still entertained ill feeling against the animal, picked up a stone and flung it at him with all his force; but, alas, his aim was erratic, and the missile struck his master on the head.

Half dazed for a moment, the farmer turned slowly in his saddle, and, not suspecting the real cause of the blow, he measured with his eye the horse's hind hoofs and his own head and, settling himself in the saddle again, started off with the remark, "Well, he allus was an okard beggar."—London Scraps.

Tall and Short.

First Detective—What was the description of that absconding bank cashier we were told to look out for? Second Detective—He was six feet tall and $50,000 short.—Philadelphia Record.

A Possibility.

"Did any man ever kiss you before I did?" he asked.

"Yes, dear!"

"Tell me his name, that I may thrash him."

"I'm afraid, Algernon, that he might be too many for you."

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

If you suffer from this painful malady, apply Zam-Buk. It is purely herbal, quickly eases the dull, gnawing pain, stops bleeding, ends the irritation, and in a short time completely and permanently cures. Zam-Buk should be in every home.

PILES

Mrs C. Hanson, Poplar, B.C., says: "I suffered for years with bleeding piles. The pain was often so bad I could hardly walk. I tried remedy after remedy, and finally underwent an operation, but only got temporary relief. At last I tried Zam-Buk. Perseverance with this complaint cured me, and there has been no return of the trouble."

WORST PLAYER

As Grantland Rice tells the story, a certain English actor, whom we may safely call Jones-Brown, plays a persistent but horrible game of golf. During a recent visit to this country, the actor in question occasionally visited the links of a well-known country club in Westchester county, near New York.

After an especially miserable showing of ineptness one morning he flung down his driver in disgust.

"Caddie," he said, addressing the silent youth who stood alongside, "that was awful bad, wasn't it?"

"Purty bad, sir," stated the boy.

"I freely confess that I am the worst golfer in the world," continued the actor.

"Oh, I wouldn't say that, sir," said the caddie, soothingly.

"Did you ever see a worse player than I am?"

"No, sir, I never did," confessed the boy truthfully, "but some of the other boys was tellin' yesterday about gentleman that must be a worse player than you are. They said his name was Jones-Brown." Saturday Evening Post

Cure Your Bad Cough By Breathing "Catarrhozone"

You may dislike taking medicine—but coughs are best cured without medicine. The modern treatment is "Catarrhozone"—it isn't a drug—it's a healing vapor full of pine essences and healing balsams. It spreads over the surfaces that are weak and sore from coughing. Every spot that is congested is healed—irritation is soothed away, phlegm and secretions are cleaned out, and all symptoms of cold and Catarrh are cured. Nothing so quick, so sure, so pleasant as Catarrhozone. Beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone. All dealers sell Catarrhozone, large size which lasts two months price $1.00, small size 50c, sample size 25c.

German Cruelty to Polish Workmen Brings Revolt

To Avenge Hanging of Several Fellow Workers on Charge of Being Russian Spies, Artisans of Warsaw Destroyed Stores of German Ammunition and Gasoline

Translation from the Article "Warszawa" in the Polonia of October 23 and 30. By Mr. Jan V. Cholmiuski.

The Echo Polskie, published in Moscow, gives a series of sure and curious views from the Polish capital, of which the following are extracts:

General von Armin was appointed the General Governor of Warsaw and General von Beseler the commandant of the same city. The counsellors to the former are Count Francis Kwilecki, Eigismond Dziembowski, who sold to the Prussian Government the land property Radzyna, and Count Hutten-Czapski, ancient officer of Prussian Hussars, a Germanized Pole.

From the very moment of their entry into Warsaw the Germans introduced their regime, holding in their hands the administrative and financial affairs.

The relation of the German Government toward Poles, which was from the beginning rather mild, grew day by day worse, especially from the moment when the Poles in their frank way claimed their rights and protested against creation of the Polish legion which Mr. Sieroszewski proposed to organize. The arrival in Warsaw of the Austrian General Pilsudski, who was at the head of the Austro-Polish legion, could not persuade the Russian Poles to this, and he was obliged to quit the Polish capital city after only one day's sojourn in it.

Owing to increase of prices of all kinds of provisions and also to the bringing to Warsaw of German foremen for the Polish factories, riots took place among the workmen, which led to many heavy punishments.

The Deutsche Warschauer Zeitung (a German newspaper started after the fall of Warsaw) says that on August 26 the following Poles suspected as Russian spies were hanged: Leonard Heed, Charles Wertz, Alexandre Mazurek, Jan Lwow and Constantin Afka.

As an answer to this cruelty toward Polish workmen great fires occurred on the same day in the stores of the Warsaw-Vienna railway station, where the warehouses were loaded with ammunition. In spite of all efforts to extinguish the fire the Germans lost several millions of marks. The day before a great explosion of gasolene took place close to Warsaw in the camp of Mokotow. After those two incidents many more persons were again arrested and court martial will follow.

The street cars, electric and water supply are still fairly regular, but the gas supply suffers a great deal on account of the shortage of coal.

The crossing of the Vistula between Warsaw and Praga is accomplished by boats only, as the new pontoon bridge, the three old ones having been blown up by the Russians, is used by the troops constantly. As the pipes were destroyed Praga has neither gas, water nor electricity.

The German Government opened direct communication on August 24 between Warsaw and Berlin through Alexandrowo and Kalisz, with trains having dining and sleeping cars. The Warsaw Siedlec line is also open.

The price of clothing is rather low owing to the great number of German merchants and there is also plenty of paper, but all provisions have reached very high prices and are scarce. Bread regulations will soon be introduced. Milk and butter cannot be obtained. Sugar costs 30 kopecks a pound. On tea, meat and tobacco the German Government has introduced a monopoly already. The exchange of the one ruble bill is at 60 kopecks instead of 100. The two-mark Prussian bill also is at 60 kopecks.

In the beginning of September street traffic was allowed till midnight. Most of the Polish theatres were closed by the German authorities, as the actors in their witty way made a sharp allusion against Germans. In the Grand Theatre German actors from Breslau give performances in German. Their first night opened with the "Black Eagle," by Morat.

The Poles work as they can for the benefit of their fatherland, expecting and hoping for the better days to come.

The telegraph office was opened lately in Warsaw for the public, but only to Germany and the part of Poland occupied by Germans. Despatches sent from Warsaw to Austria, Galicia and other parts of Poland occupied by Austrians are not received. The telegrams must be written in German, and nearly four cents a word is charged. The University and the Polytechnic School are to open soon.

The Austrians, with German help, are working with great speed on the railway to join Lemberg and Warsaw. It runs from the Galician frontier through Zamosc to Lublin and then to Warsaw.

In Warsaw, Lublin and other places in Poland occupied by Germans and Austrians every day from dawn numbers of lines of poor wait before bakers' shops to get some bread, which for them is the only nourishment.

Warsaw inhabitants who wish to go out of the city must get a special written permission, for which a heavy tax is imposed. These permissions are issued only for the part of Poland occupied by the Germans.

MOTHER! GIVE CHILD "SYRUP OF FIGS" IF TONGUE IS COATED

If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Clean Little Liver and Bowels

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is, they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs," because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

"TRAMP" DIPLOMACY.

A tramp approached a certain Kansas home the other morning, rapped on the back door and when the lady of the house appeared he began to clear his throat preparatory to telling his hard luck story.

"Get away from here," said the woman. "I never feed professional bums."

"But, madam, I am not a professional bum," said the tramp. "I am a psychologist traveling in the interest of science. I read character at a glance. In looking into the soulful depths of your beautiful eyes I read there that you are by nature a kind-hearted, gentle, generous woman. It is these noble impulses and the contemplation of charitable deeds that keep you looking so young and hand-some."

"You poor, tired, hungry man," said the woman. "Come in side and I will give you some breakfast."

Pretty, Waving, Curling Hair Without Hot Iron

Let me tell you of a simple method which is the favorite of the belles of a certain exclusive seaside set. I am sure you would like to know of it, as it will give your hair such a pretty curliness and lustre and permit you to do away with the ruinous waving iron forever.

Just get from any druggist a two ounce of ordinary liquid silmerine, and at night apply a little with a clean tooth brush, drawing this down the full length of the hair. In the morning you will have a real surprise, the fascinating, fluffy, wavy effect will appear so natural, and there will be no greasy, gummy, streaky or other unpleasant trace of this harmless liquid. You will also find this a splendid dressing for the hair. Mona Morrow in the Club Woman.

Mother's Cough!

It distresses you as much as her! Why continue to treat it by dosing the stomach (which is not ailing) with cough mixtures, syrups, tonics and the like? You will never cure lung troubles by dosing the stomach. The Peps way is entirely different. Peps are tablets made up of Pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes; not swallowed down to the stomach which is not ailing.

Peps contain no morphia, laudanum, nor any of the poisons often are found in many of the old-fashioned syrups. Peps are, therefore, best for aged people and for young children. Peps do not disorder the stomach; they sweeten the breath, are pleasant to take, and are the latest and best that science can offer for the treatment of coughs, colds, bronchitis and allied lung troubles. 50c, all druggists and stores, or Co., price from Peps Co., Toronto. A New Kitchener Story

A sarcastic remark of Lord Kitchener's, which has hitherto escaped publication, is related by one who heard it. Soon after his appointment as Secretary for War he made an inspection of Woolwich Arsenal, which, as all the world knows, had suffered from political cheeseparing in the past. Lord Kitchener stalked round the shops in dead silence, quietly taking everything in under his bushy eyebrows. At the conclusion of his tour he said gruffly, "Hm! Seems to me this place has been ran on a bit of emery paper."

Escaped From the Turks

This young Armenian girl narrowly escaped death at the hands of the Turks, having been rescued by a French force and placed on board a French battleship off the coast of Syria. She was armed with a revolver with which she was prepared to defend herself to the end.

AUSTRIAN GIRLS LOVE PRISONERS

Newspapers Are Aroused by Affections Lavished on Russians in Prison Camps.

Disgust and indignation are expressed by Austrian newspapers because of declarations made in connection with the conditions at Burg and Salzburg, where large numbers of Russian prisoners are held. Young girls and women, they assert, have fallen in love with Russians, big, handsome fellows and are corresponding with them and paying them considerably. Food and articles of feminine attire are secreted in order to smuggle them to the Russians, so much so that the government has taken the matter in hand and will in future keep the prisoners under such a strong guard that women will be prevented from entering the barracks.

The correspondent of the Neuigkeits Weltblatt in a report on the above charges declared that the observations he has made demonstrated that the Russian prisoners has in no wise encouraged the attentions of the people who, but for the more or less kindness he received and despite that many girls in Austria stood in the front row, would be objects of hatred and contempt. The report concludes with a column in openly thankful acknowledgment for the Russian soldiers. The animosities which were engendered by the Maori war (though these were disappearing thanks partly to intermarriage between Maoris and whites and partly to the paternal attitude of successive cabinets toward the Maori tribes) are now in a fair way to being wiped out by the opportunity which is being given a handful of the brown men to fix bayonets and rifle butts in far off Turkey.

Like all other South Sea Islanders, the Maoris have their strong susceptibilities one of which is toward firewater but again, like other Antipodean races they are fighters to the backbone. It was, therefore, a question with the Massey Government when the demands of the war became pressing whether or not to recruit Maoris. That the decision in the affirmative which resulted in the first contingent of 500 men, was wise is proved by the conduct of the Maoris in the action described by Mr. Bartlett. The contingent "made good," so much so that a second Maori contingent is about to be dispatched to the front.

The solidarity with which brown men and white men from New Zealand are storming Turco-German trenches is illustrated by the fact that among the wounded in the Maori contingent, as a result of the Suvla Bay operations, were two descendants of Chief Wahanui. This chief was "the power behind the throne" in the district of the upper Waikato 40 years ago, and he opposed white government up to as late as 1880. He was wounded by a British bullet, but now these young King Country (as the district from which they enlisted is called) warriors who bear his name will carry back to their homes scars of wounds received in Great Britain's cause.

Power of the Bagpipes.

The wounded Highlander in hospital was very depressed, and seemed to make no headway towards recovery. He was forever talking about his bonnie Scotland," and the idea occurred to the doctor that a Scotch piper might rouse his spirits.

After some hunting around, a piper was found, and it was arranged that he should present himself outside the hospital that night, and pour forth all the gems of Scottish music the pipes were capable of interpreting. This he did.

When the astute doctor turned up the next morning he eagerly asked the matron:

"Did the piper turn up?"

"He did," replied the matron.

"And how's our Scotch patient?"

"Oh, he's fine! I never saw such a change," said the matron.

"That's grand. It was a fine idea of mine to get that piper," said the delighted doctor.

"Yes," said the matron, sadly; "but the other 30 patients have all had a serious relapse."

Bulgar Repulse With the Loss of 600 Captured is Reported at Vodoco---Bulgarians Have Been Repulsed From the North and a Big Battle is Looked For Hourly in the Monastir District---Italians Co-operate With Other Allies In Handling the Grecian Situation.

BERLIN CLAIMS CAPTURE OF 9,500 SERBS

LONDON, Nov. 23.—That Monastir can now hold out is believed here to-day. British troops are pouring in from Salonika to help the Serbs. Big guns are being mounted and the town's defences are being strengthened heavily. A fresh Bulgar attempt at an advance is looked for hourly. The Bulgarians have been reinforced from the North, but the Monastir defenders are now in a strong position. A big battle is expected.

A Bulgar repulse, with the loss of six hundred captured, is reported at Vodoco, just north of Vranya. All previous advices have indicated no large Serb body remained in that district. The French have been operating in its direction, but if they have reached it they must either have taken Veles, which has not been claimed, or passed it by a detour to the East.

ROME, Nov. 23. Greece's serious position, if she continues to defy the Allies, was strongly represented by Foreign Minister Sonnino to the Greek Minister here to-day. Signs of great activity at the Foreign Office followed a long conference between the two. Whether this indicates an early Greek acquiescence in the Entente Powers' demands, or foreshadowed still further steps toward compelling the Athens Government to yield, was not revealed. It is no secret that Italy is co-operating with the other Entente nations in bringing pressure on he Greeks. The two countries have been closely associated diplomatically, so it is considered natural that Sonnino should have much influence with the Greek Government heads.

BUCHAREST, Nov. 23. Huge quantities of military supplies from Germany are now pouring through Bulgaria to the Turks. Thus far, according to advices to-day from the Bulgar town of Rustchuk, 1,200 carloads of munitions, artillery and hospital necessaries have been landed at the Bulgarian Danube ports for transhipment by rail to Constantinople. Included in one shipment were two 9-centimetre guns for the Ottoman defence at the Gallipoli Peninsula.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Greece is believed to-day to have yielded sufficiently to the Allies' demand to have obviated the necessity for forcible measures of coercion. The conclusion is based on an official Foreign Office denial that Greek ships are being seized or detained by the British or that the blockade of her ports has been established. If the Athens Government had not at least promised to refrain from interference with the Allies' Balkan campaign, it is assumed both steps would have been taken. It is rumored that Premier Skouloudis has resigned.

BERLIN, Nov. 23. The capture by the Austro-Germans and Bulgars of 9,500 more Serbs was announced in a War Office statement to-day, also fifty cannon and twenty-two machine guns.

PARIS, Nov. 23. (French Official Communique). Aviators have done most of the fighting on the Franco-German front in the past few hours. According to to-day's official communique, five aerial combats occurred in the Champagne and Argonne regions alone. Three of the encounters ended in the disabling of the German aeroplanes, forcing their descent; a fourth fell, and a fifth was set on fire and disappeared, enveloped in flames. In Belgium and Rheims region French aviators ascended and gave battle to German airmen. Two German machines were shot down in such duels in Belgium. In the Rheims district the German aeroplanes, two in number, were forced to flee.

"At the front," said the communique, "the situation is unchanged."

NEW YORK, Nov. 23. Captain Boyed, the Military Attache of the German Embassy, was charged directly with activities in connection with the alleged Hamburg-American plot to supply German commerce raiders from American ports, when Assistant District Attorney Wood outlined the Government's case to-day. "When a man does an act once, there may be a question of intent," Wood said, "but when a group of men go about the country trampling upon the nation's laws a dozen or fifteen times as though they were scraps of paper, bad intent is apparent." Richard E. Wrigley, ship broker, the first witness, verified documents showing that he had negotiated for vessels to carry supplies for the defendants.

ROME, Nov. 23. Cyclones and widespread floods are reported to-day from Sicily. Many persons have perished.

The loss of life is especially heavy at Licata. With railroads interrupted and wires down, details are consequently meagre.

LONDON, Nov. 23. Persian gendarmes in revolt against the Shah's Government, have made prisoners the British Consul in Shiraz and the English manager of the Imperial Bank of Persia, Foreign Secretary Sir Edward Grey announced in the House of Commons to-day.

The two Englishmen's imprisonment has been reported before, but the gendarmes' revolt was fresh information. The Gendarmerie is officered by foreigners, including many Germans.

Grey emphasized the fact that violence to the two Englishmen was without the Persian Government's cognizance.

PETERBOBO' BOYS HOME FROM FRONT ARE AT KINGSTON

Corp. H. King and Gunner Mertle McGill of the 4th Battery C.F.A. Are Now in the Elmhurst Convalescent Home

NOT DISCHARGED YET

Corporal H. King and Gunner Mertle McGill, two Peterborough members of the 4th Battery, who have been invalided home to Canada, are now in the Elmhurst Convalescent Home in Kingston. They reached Quebec a week ago Sunday on the Metagama and their friends have been anxiously waiting for their arrival in Peterborough. Word has however been received that they have not yet been given their discharge but have been sent to Kingston for further treatment. Speaking of the arrival of the wounded heroes at Kingston, the Kingston Standard says:—

"To the stirring strains of martial music provided by the splendid band of the 59th battalion, and accompanied by the hearty good wishes of the citizens who had gathered to meet them, twenty-six soldiers of the military division, several of them Kingston boys, arrived at Grand Trunk city station yesterday forenoon shortly before 11 o'clock.

Tired with their long voyage from Liverpool and their train ride from Canada's ancient capital, where they arrived just one week ago, all of them showing traces of their sufferings for their king and country, the familiar sights of the Limestone City and the presence of friends from whom the grim vicissitudes of war had separated them last summer, the men braced up as they heard warm words of welcome from the city's chief magistrate, and received hearty handclasps from the friends who had gathered to greet them.

Their arrival in the city was known to but few, in fact their train had arrived at the outer station before even the military authorities knew of its coming, and but for the timely action of Fred Davis, a member of the military police, who notified Mayor Sutherland of their coming, there would have been but few at the station.

MAYOR PREPARES WELCOME.

With characteristic promptness, Mayor Sutherland laid his plans for a civic recognition for the returning warriors, and as prompt as put them into execution he summoned the 59th band from St. George's Cathedral, where they were attending divine service, and as the train pulled into the station the familiar strains of welcoming music broke on the ears of the few assembled.

As the men detrained Mayor Sutherland greeted each one and as they assembled on the platform he briefly addressed them, expressing the firm appreciation of the citizens of their valorous conduct at the front, of the splendid example they had set for their fellow citizens and wishing them a rapid recovery from their wounds. His remarks were applauded by those present, who felt that the men deserved all that could be done for them.

Mrs. Hamilton, A.D.C. and some of the division, was also at the station, and presided the duties for transferring the men to Elmhurst Convalescent Home.

After a few minutes with their friends the men were rushed into waiting cars and driven to Elmhurst Convalescent Home, where they were registered in accordance with the military regulations. Afterwards they were driven to the British-American Hotel, for lunch and last night they also had dinner at that hostelry.

The First Gun in The Big Campaign

Influential Deputation From the Various Townships Will Wait Upon the County Council During the December Session in the Interest of the Canadian Patriotic Fund—Liberal Response is Expected From the County Legislators.

Eighteen months ago our people were quietly looking after their business, untroubled by any thought of war, and its responsibilities. Now we have it before us, as a part of our daily lives. We are enmeshed with the rest of the Empire in a struggle for freedom, not only in Canada, but throughout the world. Canada is playing her part well with her treasure and of sons in the field and camps in training. We will have to do our part.

So we have presented to us various activities [illegible] with worthy claim on our attention and resources. No one has any one of these has seriously touched our ability to give. We have not as yet felt anything of the stress and trial of war, except in a monetary sense. We have had the Red Cross, the First Aid, the Tobacco Fund, the Field Kitchen, and Regiments, Funds, the Machine Gun Fund, and others. To all of these people have subscribed and liberally. There is as yet one activity to be remembered and helped—the Canadian National Patriotic Fund.

Last Year's Campaign.

One year ago the city was organized and the effort made. It was a success. The large sum of $60,000 in the aggregate was raised by municipal and from private sources, and divided between the Patriotic Fund and the local Relief. Both of these funds have accomplished much good. The Patriotic Fund has supplemented to the pay and seperation allowance of the soldier's family while the relief fund gave assistance to those in adverse circumstances brought on by the war. To replenish the Patriotic Fund an appeal will be made to our citizens the second week in December, that it may be a fitting anniversary of that of last year. No subscription will be asked for the Relief Fund. That is in such shape that there is ample funds for the future, and in any event unemployment is almost wholly unknown. It is anticipated that there will be little appeal to the relief fund this winter.

Side by side with the appeal to the city one will be made to the country. With the large enlistment going on, and the numbers of good men flocking to the colours from the townships of the county it is felt that the county will heartily come into the work. In anticipation of this men of the county have been invited to come to the city and form a deputation to wait on the Council of the County at the December session. The call that has gone out will bring the deputation together on the morning of Wednesday, Dec. 1st, at 11 o'clock, for a short conference. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the Council will be waited on, and it is expected that the claims of the Fund will be presented by several speakers from the County municipalities.

Grants From County Councils.

Experience of the year past has shown that a personal canvass of the rural municipalities is not only difficult but tedious. Men are not as easily accessible as in the villages, towns, and cities. So assistance to the Fund has been forthcoming in the form of grants made by the county councils, the cost of which is assessed on the properties. The plan is in large favour. That it is approved is seen in the fact that in the first two months counties have given very substantial grants. Four already are noteworthy: Bruce, $4,000 per month, for one year. Huron, $6,000 per month for one year; Wentworth, $4,000 per month for one year, and Lampton, $5,000 per month for the same period. This year is to date from the time of the passing of the local legislature by the several county councils. Hamilton (city) is engaged in a campaign to secure from the same time as that in Peterborough, and is pledged to hand to the Fund $400,000. That will be a notable thing for the Ambitious City.

The Reeves and Deputy-Reeves of the several town-ships of the County Council, have been communicated with. The Warden of the County has been advised and asked to receive the deputation. The Council will, no doubt, consider the matter on other day of the session and reach a conclusion. Following are those asked to form the deputation and it is anticipated that their kindly co-operation will be forthcoming.

A SLOW DEATH

Prejudice dies hard, and very often at a great deal of cost to the eyes. It may be you have a prejudice against wearing Glasses, while your eyes are far from comfortable and your sight disturbed. The kernel of the whole matter is: That if Glasses are to be worn, be very sure that the man you choose to examine your eyes is competent and worthy of your confidence so that if he knows you are better without Glasses he will have the honesty to tell you so. We do not say that Dr. Lacey's (formerly Tait's) is the one place, there are honest oculists in every community; but we solicit your confidence with the promise that the best care and judgment will be given you.—410 George Street (opposite Examiner Office). d-t-f

Cobourg Company To Be Transferred

PTE CECIL KYLIE, a Peterborough boy with the 2nd Pioneer Battalion.

Recruits There Will Be Part of New Northumberland Battalion Under Col. Floyd—Peterborough City and County Will Have to Complete the 93rd--Battalion Orders

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

[illegible] have been given to understand that neither the [illegible] at Lindsay or Bracebridge at Cobourg will be part of the 93rd Battalion and that, as announced several times before, Peterborough city and county must fill up the 93rd. The Lindsay company will go to the 109th Victoria and Haliburton Battalion, while the recruits at Cobourg will be part of the new Northumberland Battalion which is to be commanded by Col. Floyd. The official transfers may be expected in a day or two. In the meantime Capt. Neilson and the other third officers attached at Cobourg and Sergt.-Major Oxley of Peterborough, who has been on duty there will be brought back to Peterborough for duty here.

With the new development the proposed trip of the 93rd Band to Port Hope and Cobourg, which was to have taken place at the latter end of the week, will be cancelled. With the recruits from the Cobourg and Port Hope district going to the Durham and Northumberland battalions, there is little from the 93rd standpoint to be gained by visiting the Lakeshore towns. Instead, Lieut. Johnston proposes to send the band to Norwood, Havelock and other points in the county to stimulate recruiting in those districts.

To-day's Orders.

The [illegible] Battalion orders to-day by Lieut. T. J. Johnston, Officer Commanding, and Overseas Battalion [illegible] are out to-day.

LONDON SOLDIERS HAVE BAD CLASH WITH THE POLICE

Four London, Ont. Policemen Are Injured in a Riot on the Street —Soldiers Got Beyond Control

IGNORED THEIR OFFICERS

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 23. [illegible] has had several [illegible] of the sort of clashes between soldiers and the city police, but those that occurred before were pink tea compared with the fight tonight. There is no immediate way to know the [illegible] to-night, but a small [illegible] last night, when several soldiers were put under arrest and [illegible] were fined in the Police Court, [illegible] supposed to have lost it.

In the mix-up at the corner of Dundas and Richmond streets a policeman was struck with a [illegible]. Half a dozen members of the [illegible] gave chase, and captured the man who is alleged to have struck the officer, and then it was a battle for the offender to the police station a few blocks away. The [illegible] crowd, composed largely of [illegible] battalion, accepted [illegible] girl was struck on the head with a [illegible] which was hurled by a [illegible] which [illegible] struck.

Most of the police were [illegible] handled, four receiving [illegible] several wounded. P. C. Brannon was badly [illegible] in the scrimmage. Sergt. MacDonald received a [illegible] on the face and P. C. McCutcheon and Tapworth were severely [illegible]. The police, however, [illegible].

GOOD FOR CANADA.

Indications are that the Canadian war loan of fifty million dollars was fully subscribed the first day the lists were opened. That is something to be proud of—eight million people going down into their pockets at the rate of $6.25 for every man, woman and child in the Dominion. This result is a tribute to the liquid character of Canadian financial resources, and a tribute to the patriotism of the people—to their confidence in the soundness and future of their country. And fifty millions is just a farction of what we can do; for it is probable that the present loan will be greatly oversubscribed. The results show us what we can do, ant what we didn't think we could do, till we tried. We have been borrowing money from Britain to finance our share in the war, whereas the results show we can borrow all the money we want for this purpose from ourselves; and the unthinkable thing may easily come to pass that Canada may be able to lend money to Britain instead of borrowing it, if the little drop in the bucket we could lend could be noticeable in the immense expenditures the Mother country is making and must continue to make. Canada is beginning to cut some figure in the financial world, and in this has splendidly begun to measure up to the splendid work her soldiers have done in the field. We are proud that Canada has been promoted to one of the front seats she will occupy after the war is over.

THE MERCILESS AND MURDEROUS LAW.

Apart altogether from the merits of the question of the manner of the arrest of Oliver and his wife on a charge of vagrancy, there are revealed conditions that are a disgrace to our boasted civilization and humanity. Though the two unfortunates had been arrested as tenderly as possible, and brought to jail swathed in silken wadding, the disgrace begins at the jail. Not with jail authorities and officials, but with the cruel and heartless custom of pitchforking the poor, the helpless and the unfortunate in hard, cold stone cells built for criminals. We are not far ahead of the Germans. We make poverty, and helplessness, and decrepitude, and hunger, and nakedness, a crime. The Germans make weakness and defencelessness a crime; and dearly they punish them as we dearly punish poverty. We make the gaol our Red Cross, our hospital: our refuge.

The fault is in the law, or the custom and practice the law permits and virtually enforces, of making the jail a house of detention for the temporarily insane; for the indigent poor; and it is no more fitted for the purpose than a barn. We keep inmates guilty of no crime in a jail built for criminals, for months. They may be ill, but there is no proper provision made for their treatment, not from the fault of officials, who be they never so kind, can only do what the conditions provide — and no one would think of building a hospital on the model and with the treatment equipment of a jail. We have seen the insane and weak-minded cooped up in jail for months, without the special treatment demanded, postponing curative measures till it is too late to have effect. We surely could have things arranged in a better way.

There was no other way provided by the law or conditions of building to deal with Oliver and his wife than to bundle them into separate cells, without a proper examination to ascertain their physical condition The result was that the poor man died in the night, without the presence or knowledge of his wife. It would seem an easy thing to have a portion of a jail fitted up as a temporary infirmary, where such cases could be given a medical examination, and their physical condition their state of health, and their need of treatment ascertained, before they are thrown into criminal' cells. With such primitive precautions taken—the most rudimentary suggestion of humanity—the life of the man Oliver might have been saved, and the hardships, injustice, and virtual cruelty, that from necessity attend the treatment of similar cases, would be avoided.

The law is heartless—like Sydney Smith's corporation, it has no soul. There is need that our lawmakers should take some measures to remedy the conditions involved in the treatment of our presumably insane, and our poor and destitute. Year after year, grand juries, make presentments to judges denouncing the crime of making poverty or misfortune a crime. The judge passes on crime. The judge passes forward these presentments to the authorities, who promptly pigeon-hole them to gather dust, while the bodies of the victims of the law's cruelty themselves turn to dust. Our legislators squabble, and fight, and spend money galore, in a thousand other ways, and leave untouched a system of treatment of the poor and unfortunate that would shame a German junker.

We must remedy these things before we can consistently open our mouths to deplore German frightfulness." We go to bed at night, and while we sleep in safety and comfort German Zepplins are raining bombs on peaceful cities, and bombs are blowing the mangled bodies of women and children out of their beds. Last Friday night we lay in bed in comfort and safety, and wot not, not that a sadder tragedy than wrought by Zeppelin bombs was enacted in a criminal's cell close to our happy, comfortable homes. A poor old woman was tossing in her hard prison bed, frightened and dazed with the cruel suddenness of her excitingiexperience of the afternoon, while in another equally luxurious, cell, her husband lay struggling alone in his death agony, brought on possibly by the exciting experience of the afternoon. The husbands and wives of the poor love each other as do those of the rich. But we take no account of that. We carry out the law and the undertaker carries out the pauper corpse and there's an end of it, till the merciless law and the conditions permitted and created by it, bring on a similar crime against humanity and civilization.

VIRTUALLY WON BUT YET TO WIN.

If we, that is Britain and her Dominions, and her Allies, win this war, which we shall and must do, we must imitate Germany. This seems peculiar advice. But the wise nation will learn even from its enemies. It is not meant that we should imitate Germany in the atrocity and ruthlessness of her methods, but in the energy with which she is maintaining the struggle. She is bending every effort to the accomplishment of success, and is making unheard of sacrifices. We have often heard of the straits to which Germany is reduced—a good deal of truth and a good deal of error — but Germany throws everything into the melting pot of war. Food is scarce in Germany; women and children are hungry, but whatever the shortage of food, the army must be fed, and the women and children may go starve. That is the German way, but it shows her determination to try to win. In the past no consideration of humanity or human interest has been allowed to interfere with the prosecution of her war programme, and it is not allowed to interfere now. When Germany thought she would gain by slaughtering women and children, she slaughtered them. Now when, to her mind ,it is necessary to starve her own women and children to feed her soldiers, the soldiers are fed. This policy forced upon her by the steady lessening of her food supply, is creating a great deal of suffering among the people. We do not need to depend for this information upon some imaginative newspaper correspondent, who has never been in Germany, but got his facts by looking across the border. The conditions in Germany are so bad that the heretofore subdued papers have been permitted to relax the muzzle and speak out. A great and influential German journal, "Forewarts," tells how the "note of popular misery," mingles with the blare of loudly trumpetted victories, that are no victories. In the following paragraph it is told how German dreams of triumph and conquest have given place to the conditions of starvation. The German newspaper says:

"The short, successful war, the spoils of victory, the wealth of Belgium, huge indemnities, annexation of colonies, trade which would make everyone prosperous and contented, and bring back the armies in triumph and splendor—that was the reward promised and dream dreamed. To-day the reality is growing daily farther from that intoxicating vision: in the sight of enormous and increasing losses in the field, starving women at home fighting for food for their children, the miseries of another winter in sight, with increasing privation, and no alternative but ruin, whether victorious or defeated, at the end."

There can be no doubt that Germans, both the militarist clique, and the people, are getting thoroughly sick of the war; and there can be no doubt that the authorities permit such outspoken utterances by a heretofore tightly muzzled press, in order to gradually pave the way to consideration of peace proposals. The conditions thus painted by the Germans themselves are an encouragement to us and an inspiration to renewed action. There is evidence that Germany has shot her bolt in this war, and that the efforts she is now making, after fifteen months of war that was to be decided in fifteen days, are a dying struggle. While her resources are tremendously impaired, the resources of the Allies, especially Britain and her Dominions, are still good. In Britain and France, and in Canada, there is no shortage of anything, except perhaps, of voluntary recruits. We have food and to spare; we have yet almost untapped financial resources. The immense favour and success of the Canadian war loan shows that the people have money, and the recruiting shows, that we still have men. While Germany is peopled with starving women and children, we, in Canada, have not felt the pinch of poverty in any degree; in fact, Canada is in a generally more prosperous condition that she was before the war broke out. But there is yet much to do to win. We must supply men and money yet for a while. Kaiserism and militarism will die hard and like the wounded anaconda, in their dying struggles, show capacity of doing great damage. We have got the war in hand, but our triumph is conditioned upon keeping up the fight, till victory is assured beyond peradventure.

OPPONENT OF FREE WHEAT

It is reported that the strongest opponent of free wheat in the Ottawa Cabinet is Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, who is regarded as the chief representative of the privileged interests of the east. It is also stated that the railway interests are secretly opposing free wheat to the very utmost of their ability. The publication of the huge profits of the big milling companies has rather upset the arguments of Mr. White and those of his colleagues who have been preaching the need of protection for these interests. In fact, it is now stated that the milling interests, or at least some of them, are sorry they exposed the enormous profits on the past year's operations.—Grain Growers' Guide.

He Sold Them.

An American, while one day walking down a street of a large town in Scotland, noticed on a sign over a shop door, "Portmanteaux, travelling bags, overland trunks," and so on. Thinking to take a rise out of the shopman, he went in, and the following dialogue ensued:

Yankee: Have you got any overland trunks?

Shopman: Yes, sir.

Yankee: Could you please supply me with an underland trunk?

Shopman: Yes, sir. Here, Jimmy, show this gentleman to the coffin department

The Obligations of Greece To Britain, the Allies, and To Herself and Her People

There is an impression in some quarters that Great Britain has as little business in Greece as Germany had in Belgium. It speaks badly for our acquaintance with imperial responsibilities, not to mention world-history, that such a view should obtain among us, but anything is possible in these days of local, if not limited, education, and widespread, if not unlimited, prejudice. The one big issue of the war was never more clearly marked than in the difference of the relations that exist between Germany and Belgium and Great Britain and Greece. It is the paramount issue between autocratic militarism and democracy.

Germany's presence in Belgium is a threat against liberty and constitutional government. Great Britain's presence in Greec is a threat against the bad faith of a king and for the preservation of constitutional government. Germany is in Belgium in violation of a treaty by which she guaranteed to protect the neutrality of the little nation. Great Britain is in Greece in conformity with the treaty by which she guaranteed independence and constitutional govrnment to the Greek people.

By he convention of May 7, 1832, Greece was declared independent under the protection of Great Britain, France and Russia. Prince Otto, son of King Louis I of Bavaria, was proclaimed king. It was not a wise choice, and after eleven years, during which Otto surrounded himself with Bavarians and assumed absolute power, he had to dismiss his favourites and accept a constitution.

Otto had the German taint, however, and lived in opposition to constitutional government. He was deposed in 1862. Prince Alfred of England, afterwards Duke of Edinburgh, and Duke of Saxe-Coburg, was elected by the people, who wanted the British type of government, but the three powers had bound themselves not to give the throne to any member of their ruling houses. Had Prince Alfred become King of Greece, the history of Europe would probably have taken a different course. His son, who is now a satrap of the Kaiser, would have had a differnt training in Greece, and the Greek nation would probably have been given a better chance to speak its own mind.

By the treaty of London of July 13, 1863, the change of dynasty was sanctioned by the powers, and Britain ceded the Ionian Islands as a token of good-will in 1864. At the end of that year King George was compelled to accept what has been deacribed as an ultra-democratic constitution, drawn up by the national assembly. It has not, however, proved democratic enough to hold his son. It is still in force, being the sixth since 1832. The stormy experiences of Greece with her neighbours and her domestic strifes are within the recollection of most. Trikoupis and Delyannes were the two big figures up till 1905, when the latter was assassinated. The former died nine years earlier.

A secret patriotic society had played a large part in Greek affairs, the Ethnike Hetaeria, and the war with Turkey was precipitated by this body. In 1897 Germany proposed the coercion of Greece dorng the Cretan crisis, but Britain dmurred, with the result that joint action was taken by the powers and Greece was granted autonomy. It was apparently out of these troubles, and the war with Turkey that Germany shaped a course which led Constantine to the position he occupies. Germany never had any business with Greece and has none now. Great Britain and her allies, France and Russia, are bound by treaty to see Greec assured of her democratic liberties and government, and, no doubt, Lord Kitchener will be able to interpret Greek history to Constantine in a convincing manner that will leave no room for comment or emendation by the Kaiser.—The World.

CONSCRIPTION

The following poem, entitled Conscription, appears in the Preston (Eng.) Argus, and was given to the Examiner by one of the members of the 93rd Battalion:

Conscription, Sir? I'm with you there
Let all men equal stand,
But do you think Sir, that it's right
To hi-ty, healthy men

To get good berths and do their bit with nothing but a pen

There's Henry Charles Augustus Slack
With relatives well placed,
Getting a "fiver" every week,
And no bullets to be faced

Whilst other chaps gave up their work
To go and face the foe,
They are fighting now in Flanders
At a "Bob" a day or so

Now, whose worth most, the fighting man
Or the man whose slinging ink?
The fighter, did I hear you say?
Yes that's what I think

Then again there's Moneybags,
Let's conscript his surplus wealth,
The soldier offers all he has,
His life, his strength, his health

Moneybags is taxed you say.
What's that to offering life,
And risking abject poverty
For the children and the wife?

So let us tax all surplus wealth,
And then at least we'll find,
Enough to keep in comfort those
That Tommie's left behind. B.B.

BARS OF STEEL FOR SONG WRITER

Swindler of Would-be Song Writers Gets Prison Term.

John T. Hall, accused of misuse of the mails in defrauding scout [illegible] ambitious song writers, was found guilty by a jury in the Criminal branch of the Federal Court, New York, and was sentenced by Judge Foster to serve two years in the penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga.

Judge Foster said Hall's scheme was the most flagrant swindle that had ever come under his observation. There is no excuse for an intelligent man, especially one who has himself written good music, to engage in such a despicable enterprise as you operated," said the Judge. Hall is the author of "Queen of the Moulin Rouge" and "The Wedding of the Winds."

A motion by George G. Battle, attorney for Hall, for the setting aside of the verdict was denied.

Hall accepted over 20,000 amateur ballads at from $10 to $35, from which the royalties were paid.

112,000 TROOPS FOR OVERSEAS

Ninety of the 145 Battalions Authorized Have Been Fully Recruited—"Foreign Legion" from B.C.

OTTAWA, Nov. 23.—A hundred and forty-five battalions have so far been authorized in Canada for overseas service. Of this number, 90 battalions have been fully recruited. Forty-seven batteries of artillery have been authorized, and forty-three raised. In regard to mounted troops, twelve units have been raised. At the present time there are, roughly, 57,000 troops in France, 55,000 in Canada, and 50,000 in England.

Ten of the new regiments are being raised in Toronto, three in Montreal, two from Hamilton, two from Brantford, and the rest are scattered. Not all of those listed as heading the regiments will go overseas.

Major Lionel Webber, of Rossland, a son of Major General C. E. Webber, proposes to raise a new regiment of Montenegrins and Russians in British Columbia.

Senator George Taylor has undertaken to raise a new regiment in Leeds and Grenville.

British Soldiers Confined At Wittenberg, Germany, Suffer Keenly

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The British press bureau has published the reports of James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador to Germany, and members of the Embassy staff in Berlin, relative to the condition of British prisoners of war in the camp at Wittenberg, Prussia.

Lithgow Osborne reported that his whole impression of the camp authorities was utterly unlike that which he had received in every other camp he visited. Instead of regarding their charges as honorable prisoners of war, he stated, they apparently regarded them as criminals whom a regime of fear alone sufficed to keep in obedience.

"All evidence of kindly human feeling between the authorities and the prisoners was lacking," said Mr. Osborne, "and in no other camp have I found signs of fear on the part of the prisoners that what they might say to me would result in suffering for them afterwards."

Sixteen Overcoats for 278.

The following extracts are taken from Ambassador Gerard's report:

"I regret to state that after a careful examination of the camp and long conversations with the prisoners my impression is even more unfavorable than I have been led to expect.

"Upon my arrival at the camp I was not received by the general who acts as commandant, but by a major.

"There were over four thousand prisoners in the camp, of whom 278 are British. Among these I found only sixteen overcoats. The men, on the whole, are insufficiently clothed.

"The men told me that one of the British medical officers in the camp recently was struck by a German non-commissioned officer and this proved to be true.

Dogs as Guards.

"Many prisoners complain that dogs were brought in by German soldiers at night, and that in certain cases prisoners had had their clothes torn by these dogs. I asked the authorities whether they considered dogs necessary for the preservation or order, saying that at no other camps have I seen dogs used for this purpose, and they informed me that they considered it absolutely necessary, that dogs were needed to protect the German officers on duty. I was shown half a dozen of these dogs, which were of the usual police type.

"Two prisoners informed me that the conditions in the camp had unquestionably improved greatly in the last few months, that last year when an epidemic of spotted typhus existed the camp conditions had been indescribably bad.

"They said that they then implored the German authorities to put the British soldiers in barracks by themselves, as this was the only way to prevent an outbreak of the epidemic, which had been brought to the camp by Russians. This request was refused on the ground that the British should learn to know their allies better. Largely because of this 50 British military prisoners and 9 civilians died of the disease.

"The attitude towards the British prisoners seems to be based on suspicion. They have no opportunities for playing games or for exercise, except walking. I am sending a cheque for 2,000 marks to Capt. Vidal to be spent for the immediate relief."

Sir Edward Grey, after commenting severely on the facts mentioned, says that he much appreciates Ambassador Gerard's action in visiting the camp personally, and asks Dr. Walter Hines Page, the American Ambassador to Great Britain, to convey to Mr. Gerard his cordial thanks for the reports.

Caller: Glad to hear it, but we're in a fix here. I'm the staff photographer for the Scarehead, and the Sunday editor sent me out to get a snapshot of you—

Mrs. Blough: Good heavens! Wait till I run and frill up a bit and put on my best silk dress, and my best and sweetest smile!

Belgrade Was Taken Because Germans Had the Bigger Guns

The Berliner Tageblatt correspondent with the German army in Serbia describes the bombardment and capture of Belgrade.

"A shell exploded in the throne room of King Peter," he writes, "and did great damage. It entered a window of the balcony on the second story of the palace, with its green caryatides that look so beautiful in the sunlight. Then the shell passed through the library, plunged through the floor, and then entered the throne room, with its red curtains and red upholstered furniture. The furniture was smashed to pieces, and books, pictures, letters and papers, and also the golden eagles in the foyer were scattered all over the building. The aquarelle portraits of the ladies of the court are no longer recognizable. In the porcelain room a few things remain untouched. That one shell almost made a wreck of the palace. The Russian Embassy is also partly in ruins. Strange to say, the German and the Austrian embassies were untouched.

"The greater part of the city was spared. The greatest damage was done in the Kalimegdan and the manufacturing district. The Kalimegdan is a pretty park-way along the walls of the fortress in the northern section of the city. This is now a very busy place. Motor boats, monitors, steamboats, coal barges and tugs can be seen going up and down the Danube, and on the shore pass troop trains and cars loaded with cattle, hay, flour and munitions. Towards the west winds the river.

"The German and Austrian armies entered the city at two points. The command of Belgrade had a strongly fortified position in the northern part of the city around the Kalimegdan and the citadel. English and French troops served the guns on the ships in the harbor, while Russian gunners operated the big guns in the fortress. Our artillery worked with guns of the heaviest calibre. At midnight every light in the city was extinguished and only the searchlight in the Kalimegdan was now and then seen, looking very much like some spectre. The next morning our artillery began its real work and before noon three fires had started, one near the railway station, another near the slaughter house, and the third in the manufacturing district. In the afternoon the big guns in the fortress and those on the vessels in the harbour had been silenced and towards evening the first detachment of German and Austrian troops crossed the river and entered the city. They stormed the Serbian trenches behind the railroad station, which had been throwing a heavy machine gun and rifle fire into the ranks of the pushing troops. The guns in the fortress on the Kalimegdan also began firing again. Our gunners answered them with telling effect, thus saving our troops from being further shelled by them. The next day more troops landed and joined the detachments of the previous day. The Serbian forces then retreated and the city was ours."

Pat Got There.

An American and an Irishman were discussing the great things each had done. The American said, "Would you believe that one day I got out of my own house through a two-foot window?" Sure, returned the Irishman, that's nothing. I once walked through the side wall of my house without touching a stone." "Impossible!" exclaimed the American. Upon which Pat turned with a smile. "I walk from round the front door."

'ANGELUS STRAFE' IS NOW POPULAR DANCE AT FRONT

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN CHAMPAGNE, Oct. 21 (By Mail).—"The Angelus Strafe" is a new dance popular at the Front, but no cabaret boys in the U.S.A. will take kindly to it, nor will society be doing it this winter. Its other name is "a spilling the beans cannonade" and its object is to prevent the soldiers' dinner from being brought up. The artillery furnishes the music.

However, calm the day up to the Angelus hour, there is almost invariably a hot exchange of shells near sundown on every battle front to impede movements of troops, principal of which at this time of day being the food convoys from the rear, with hot dinner for the men in the front lines. Not infrequently the rolling kitchens are struck and the soldiers whose food was inside go without warm victuals. For them it means hard tack and "monkey," otherwise embalmed beef.

Old Rule Applies.

This might seem petty, but others assure you it is not. The old rule that the easiest way to reach a man's heart is through his stomach has been applied to war and both Germans and Allies recognize it. Nothing hurts the "moral" of an army more, or saps his supply of optimism quicker, than going hungry, and the sundown cannonade variously known as "spilling the beans" or the "evening hate" or the "Angelus Strafe," is speeded up pretty hot largely with that charming aim in view.

In the beginning the French were poorly equipped with "rolling kitchens" and company cooks, close up to the lines, with their stationary kitchens, like old-fashioned wash boilers mounted on an improvised brick or tole oven were frequently blown out of existence by the enemy, making hot meals an intermittent luxury.

Cooked on the Fly.

The "rolling kitchen" made kitchen centres possible miles behind the line. The big boilers are on wheels something like an old-fashioned fire engine, and the meals may be cooked on the fly when necessary. Advancing or retreating, the men receive steaming hot victuals, and the food is better prepared, more palatable, more digestible.

When, as in the case at present, the line is stationary, the rolling kitchens prepare the food at their bases, then move up a few miles to points not far back of the front trenches. From these advanced points not far back of the front the troops not actually on duty in the foremost positions while the men in these get their rations carried to them in buckets suspended from yokes. The roads these kitchens must travel are sprinkled with shells.

REPAYABLE AT PAR AT

INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY—1st JUNE, 1st DECEMBER.

ISSUE PRICE 97½

A FULL HALF YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st JUNE, 1916.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

In the event of future issues (other than issues made abroad) being made by the Government, for the purpose of carrying on the war, bonds of this issue will be accepted at the issue price, 97½, plus accrued interest, as the equivalent of cash for the purpose of subscriptions to such issues.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers herewith on behalf of the Government the above named Bonds for subscription at 97½ payable as follows,

10 per cent on application.
7½ " " 3rd January, 1916.
20 " " 1st February, 1916,
20 " " 1st March, 1916,
20 " " 1st April, 1916,

The instalments may be paid in full on and after the 3rd day of January, 1916, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Applications, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. The bank will issue a provisional receipt.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch of any chartered bank in Canada, and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the January instalment.

Scrip certificates payable to bearer will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds without coupons.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons will be payable free of exchange at any branch of any chartered bank in Canada.

Holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds with coupons, payable to bearer or registered, without payment of any fee, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert, without fee, into fully registered bonds without coupons at any time on application in writing to the Minister of Finance.

The issue will be exempt from taxes including any income tax imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

The loan will be repaid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Recognized bond and stock brokers will be allowed a commission of one-quarter of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications which bear their stamp.

Subscription Lists will close on or before 30th November, 1915.

Finance Department, Ottawa, 22nd November, 1915.

BAY RUM FOR HAIR TROUBLE

Do you know that ordinary bay rum is of great value in treating hair and scalp disorders? But the bay rum alone should never be applied to the hair or scalp. If you want to get rid of dandruff, stop falling hair, stimulate hair growth, beautify the hair and make the scalp feel good, undoubtedly the best thing to use is a mixture of six ounces of bay rum, two ounces of lavona de composee, and one half drachm of menthol crystals. You can buy these ingredients at any drug store and mix them yourself at home or the druggist will mix them for you. If you like a tri-a-teaspoonful of your favorite. The bay rum is a fine scalp cleanser and the other ingredients make this mixture remarkably good to destroy dandruff, stimulate the hair growth, etc. Apply night and morning and rub well into the scalp with the finger tips

Guarding Art Treasures War Problem For London

LONDON, Nov 20.—There are perhaps thousands of Londoners who can echo Mr. Asquith's declaration in the House of Commons, "I have not been in the National Gallery lately," and that perhaps, accounts for the absence of discussion about the measures that have been taken there to insure the safety of the priceless treasures in charge of the trustees against the bomb dropping Zeppelin.

The Prime Minister was asked whether it was not a fact that there are many irreplaceable pictures still on the walls. He might have replied that there are nearly three thousand.

The National Gallery contains no pictures which are not irreplaceable, and having decided that they will not afford to Berlin the intense satisfaction of closing the gallery and removing its whole contents to the cellars, the trustees have had to face the extremely difficult and thorny problem of making their selection of the pictures which cannot be exposed to any avoidable risk.

Of more than three thousand they have chosen about two hundred and fifty, and art lovers will find only blank spaces on the walls and empty frams to indicate where these most valued of the nation's pictures hung.

The secretary informed a correspondent that the trustees have endeavoured to select pictures of preponderating value in the historic and artistic sense — pictures which are unique. At the same time they have endeavoured to leave a representative collection in the galleries.

A tour of the galleries showed that pictures have been taken impartially from the British and foreign schools and that the ancients and the moderns have been dealt with justly.

One of the pictures of the Madonna and Child Enthroned, painted by Caroli Crivelli in the latter part of the fifteenth century, is exiled temporarily. So is Sir Joshua Reynolds' "Three Graces." Several of the Turners are gone, and with them some of the Constables, the Cromes, the Cotmans and the Gainsboroughs. Vandyck's great equestrain portrait of ing Charles leaves leaves a large blank on the wall. Titian's "Bacchus and Ariadne" has gone, but his "Venus and Adonis" remains.

The trustees have been compelled to exercise their judgment somewhat arbitrarily, and there may be warm discussion among the experts of the selections they have made.

Those who go to the galleries are noting with interest that a large sand bin has been added to the furniture of every room to deal with fires caused by incendiary bombs.

At the British Museum the question of protection against bombs is far more difficult, though less delicate. There some of the most valuable things are not portable. The Elgin marbles cannot be packed away by the curator as he goes home to tea. They and many others of the most important of the antiquities in the Museum are a part of the actual structures. To remove them would mean pulling down the edifice.

It has been necessary to build a safe round the valuables, and as a result some of the galleries present a stronge and wonderful aspect just now. An inspection of the rooms which have been closed to the public for some weeks past showed how the Elgin room has been metamorphosed into a close resemblance to a well constructed "dugout." Heavy timbering has been reared all round the interior walls and the face of the marbles now is protected by a solid pile of sandbags. The famous Assyrian bas-reliefs are literally packed in wool. For eight feet up the Assyrian saloon is a continuous wooden framework supporting a two feet thickness of slag wool, capable of resisting a high degree of heat and also fairly effective, so it would appear, against the consequences of explosion.

"We cannot eliminate altogether the risk from the vibration of the atmosphere from an explosion in a confined space," said an official, "but we have taken all the steps we can to minimize it."

The keeper of the coin collections has removed everything of high value to the strong rooms in the basement of the museum, where, too, many of the manuscripts and books are safely deposited in steel safes.

At Westminster Abbey the Coronation Chair has been taken from the position where it is usually placed behind the reredos of the great altar to "a place of greater safety," which the Abbey authorities are keeping a profound secret, and with the chair have been removed some of the ancient glass and a few other portable things of national significance and value.

OFFICIAL EVIDENCE OF CRUEL TREATMENT BRITISH PRISONERS

What a painful shock would go through the civilized world if the United States Ambassador to Britain were to visit the German prisoners in England, and find conditions so bad that he had to send a personal cheque "for immediate relief" of the prisoners. Yet that is just what has happened in regard to the British prisoners in Germany. The American Ambassador was plainly shocked at the conditions he found. His report undoubtedly will rank as a historic indictment of the German authorities.

Mr. Gerard makes it quite clear that his visit was regarded as an unwelcome intrusion. That is the meaning of the diplomatic phrase that "Upon my arrival at the camp I was not received by the general who acts as commandant, but by a major." The commandant resented a visit and treated the ambassador to a typical example of German boorishness to show how peeved he was

If the German commandant had a spark of humanity in him, it may well be believed, too, that he was too much ashamed of the conditions he was enforcing to meet a visitor with good grace. Mr Gerard found prisoners of war treated like criminals herded by dogs, kept without sufficient clothing, tyrannized over, and allowed no opportunities for recreation or exercise. Mr Gerard reproduces with every evidence that he believes it to be a true statement that in this one camp fifty British military prisoners and nine civilians had died largely because of the insanitary conditions enforced by brutal exponents of the blood and iron policy.

This is but another example of German "frightfulness." No military advantage whatever can possibly accrue from ill-treating and even torturing prisoners. The Germans cannot even hope, as they profess to do in regard to their baby-killing raids, that this will frighten their opponents into demanding peace. It is simply a reversion to barbarism, another proof of the "Kultur" that Germany seeks to plant over the world.—Montreal Herald.

PREDICTS AN EXODUS OF GERMAN-AMERICANS

LONDON, Nov 23 The Daily Mail has a despatch from New York saying that a Manchester News correspondent in Washington has received from a prominent friend of German-American descent in the United States a letter in which the writer says:

"Personally I am of German descent, but I am heart and soul for the Allies. I am ashamed of my countrymen in America. I have no time for them. I have given up my German friends because they have often made me feel ashamed by showing their pro-German sympathies. America is not going quickly enough for them, so they are showing themselves to be agents of the German government and with little regard to their own interests."

Mr. von Skal thinks that America will be badly hit by the loss of many loyal Germans.

Voice of The People

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—May I be allowed through your valuable paper to express what I, and I feel many another citizen feels, respecting the arrest of A Glover and his wife, and the sudden and untimely death of the former. I was glad to see in your Saturday's issue Mr. Kerr's timely letter and his appeal to the hearts of his readers as to whether this matter should be dropped.

I am glad to say that this sorrowful tragedy robbed me of a few hours' sleep on Friday night. It stirred my heart more deeply than any of the war tragedies have done, for those who fight and fall in battle are young, and there is a certain amount of glory attached to their death, but this old couple were old, were helpless, 'yes' and friendless in a so-called Christian community, among farmers with well-filled cellars and every comfort. Now it is only natural for a person reflecting on these things to feel like asking, as the disciples of Jesus asked Him on one occasion when their indignation got the better of them, if they should call down fire from heaven on the offenders, but the answer came (ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of), so instead of judging harshly or being too severe I am going to relate a little romance that I was weaving around those poor old people. I feel there is room for a little more sentiment in our hard, practical, matter-of-fact lives. First of all I was thinking of the song, which begins like this:

Darby dear, we are old and gray,
Fifty years since our wedding day.

And then I thought of some dear old couples I had known in the old land, in the flower-scented, sunny south of dear old England. I have a photo right here of two I have known all my life. They were taken a year or two back, the old lady was then 88 and her husband 98 years. They are sitting hand in hand outside of their pretty little cottage, sitting among the flowers, a typical (Darby and Joan). Then I thought of this poor old Darby and Joan, arrested and put into gaol, seventy years of age, given bread and water on an empty stomach, after a terrible, cold drive. It has been surmised that they were in an House of Refuge and that they ran away (a perfectly natural thing to do). It is more than probable they had in the past a comfortable home, but misfortune overtook them and they were placed in the Home. I can imagine the call of the country, and to have once again a little home of their own, no matter how humble, and to hear again the song of the birds in the morning and the shrill whistle of the frogs in the evening, and let me say it with reverence, the Divine voice of nature, calling loudly, and who, I ask, that are country born, can resist the temptation of that tender call, the wild longing for freedom, for justice, for love. This perhaps, explains the vagrancy charge, the endeavours on the part of this poor old man to get the necessaries of home for himself and wife. But his little dream ruderly came to an end because he had to ask for a little help. "What's wrong with the world you ask?" I will answer that question in four words. "Man's inhumanity to man." How inhuman were the men who figured in this case, the unmerciful church deacon who phoned for the constable, the cowardly constable who bound a poor gray-haired old man, and lastly a cruel and unnecessary prosecution.

May God speak to these people in language unmistakable through the death of this poor, broken-spirited, broken-hearted soul

Speak gently to the aged one,
Grieve not the care-worn heart,
Their race on earth is nearly run,
Let such in peace depart

Mrs. Burton.

GET THIS BOOK ABOUT ROSE CULTURE SENT FREE FROM OTTAWA

Every lover of flowers in Peterborough, and especially those interested in roses, should procure a copy of Bulletin 85, entitled "Hardy Roses: Their Culture in Canada," issued by the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. Simply write to the Department and ask for a copy of this bulletin which, in addition to valuable information in regard to rose culture in general, deals particularly with the hardy varieties which grow to best advantage in Canada. The bulletin was issued primarily for distribution among farmers who certainly have the ground, if not the inclination, to devote to horticulture. After all, the rose is the queen of flowerdom and it is passing strange that the number of its devotees is so comparatively few. There are some rosarians in Peterborough who feel that a community of this size should possess an association of rose fanciers and growers. However, the first step is to instil a modern love for rose culture for its aesthetic influence and the joy it brings. Societies may come later. This first thing to do is to get a copy of this Bulletin No 85. It costs you nothing, it is practical and is authentic for the guidance of the amateur. Write at once to the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, and request that a copy of this pamphlet be sent you.

Automobile apparatus has been perfected to enable trains running at high speed to pick up any number of mail bags without injuring their contents and to deposit others gently in troughs beside the track

HER LITTLE BOY HAD PNEUMONIA NEARLY LOST HIM. DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP SAVED HIM.

The slight cold, the irritating cough, the tightness of the chest, if not attended to, will sooner or later develop into some serious lung or bronchial trouble, and our advice to you is that on the first inception of a cough or cold "GET RID OF IT."

Mrs. H. Washburn, Gaspereaux Station, N.B., writes: "I thought I would write and tell you just how much I appreciate Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, for I would not be without it in the house. Twice my little boy, now four years old, has had pneumonia, and nearly died, but since using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I have kept him clear of even a cough. I often say that if it had not been for "Dr. Wood's" I would have lost him."

"My little girl, ten months old, is subject to bronchitis, but when she seems to be stuffed up and has difficulty in breathing I give her a few drops of Norway Pine Syrup every two or three hours, and in a very little while she is all well, in fact, on the first signs of a cold or cough we all fly for "Dr. Wood's."

You can procure Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup from any druggist or dealer, but be sure and get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it, as there are many imitations on the market.

The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c

WHAT THE TOWNSHIPS SHOULD DO FOR THE PETERBORO' BATTALION

If Three and One Half Per Cent. of the Rural Population of the County Were to Enlist 563 More Men Would Be Added to the Ranks of the City and County Battalion.

The 93rd Peterborough City and County Battalion is now recruited to over 350 men, most of whom are drawn from the urban populations such as Peterborough, Lakefield, etc. In round number- 1050 men are required for an infantry regiment. In order to make up the Battalion the Townships should furnish at least one half the men, and that they are not going to allow the honoured and solid name of the County of Peterborough to be eclipsed by any other district in Canada what-ever goes without saying. The City of Peterborough itself has recruited so far 4.x per cent. of its population, a very good and moderately high showing for Canada. In addition to what it has done it will have to contribute considerably more to the formation of the Battalion. This is also in addition to calls on it from time to time for artillery recruits and mounted infantry recruits, while many other men are working on war materials and cannot be spared. If the townships were to give three and one half per cent. of their respective populations to the formation of the battalion, the 93rd can be hand-somely completed for its work, but at 563 men divided as follows:

Belmont and Methuen	50
Asphodel	53
Burleigh and Anstruther	16
Chandos	23
Dummer	49
Douro	78
Ennismore	21
Galway and Cavendish	14
Harvey	58
N. Monaghan	68
Otonabee	94
Smith	87
	563

Three and one half per cent. is a low percentage. It would be well for the Reeves and Councillors and aiding men in the several townships to at once take this matter up which so closely concerns our duty to the Empire and our good name and push as hard as they possibly can the battalion to this successful consummation.

A DRY ONTARIO BY DOMINION DAY SLOGAN OF TEMPERANCE PEOPLE

"Billy" Sunday Addressed an Immense Concourse of People in the Arena, Toronto, Last Evening—Many Local Workers Attended

TORONTO, Nov. 23. — Canadians have heard from afar the "boom boom" of a big gun over the line, followed intermittently by the smashing of bars and the wail of the penitent. Last night this gun, Rev. "Billy" Sunday, opened fire on an immense concourse of people from all over Ontario in the Arena, who had assembled at a meeting under the auspices of the Committee of One Hundred, to inaugurate the campaign for a Dry Ontario by Dominion Day, 1916.

What went they out for to see—a reed? Yes, Billy Sunday is a mere wisp of a man; supple and easily shaken, but not by the idle wind. Slight of build, alert, athletic, he looks as if he could take the high jump with ease. "Shaken!" Yes, with emotion and passion, with hate of all that is hateful. His hatred of hell and the devil is almost Mephistophelian. He sneers at the devil chaffs him, laughs in his face. One half of his final prayer he addressed to Jesus in Heaven, and the other half, stooping over the platform he addressed to the lower regions.

Apostrophe to the Devil.

"I know you've got cold feet down there, devil. I don't blame you devil; you've got pneumonia and your servants are applying a mustard plaster to your lungs. ha, ha, ha, ha!"

Mr. Sunday is a wifely-looking woman, evidently well able to manage her volatile husband. "This is Mr. Sunday, right here," said the leader of the singing. Homer Rodeheaver. Mr. Sunday rose and thank of the audience for the reception of "my husband, we think he is pretty nice over in the States."

That Billy Sunday is all nerves was evident from his restlessness on the platform. During the preliminaries he could not sit down. He paced the floor in an absent, fidgety manner, now consulting his wife, now standing beside the singers and looking at them faces. His lips would move as if rehearsing some new diabolical invective. His head is not large and his nose is rather small, perhaps damaged, but his lips are tight and his chin pugnacious. His voice is hoarse and seems to be weak or like a steam whistle with too much power on.

Makes Dry Figures Live.

The greater part of his speech was taken up with statistics about the liquor traffic. he made dry, lifeless figures dance and caper. Set to his audience like marionettes. Arithmetic became imbued with passion; dollars, bushels, gallons, jails were preached like personal entities.

Whatever may be said by the orthodox against Billy Sunday, he can not be accused of heresy. He believes the whole creed, and preaches it literally—vulgarly, may be, but his adjectives are almost all good English. He is an artist in lurid and vile adjectives.

"If you want to meet the filthiest and rottenest members of the community go to that hell-hole called the saloon. A man who keeps such a clearing-house for all the filth and rot on God Almighty's earth is so low down I would not wipe my feet on him."

The audience was made up of the church-going class, with a great many prominent city men. There were representatives of all the churches, and the chiefs of some of them. They all went frantic at the evangelist's gibes, flagrations, and gesticulations. "I stand for civil liberty, but to hell with personal liberty," and suiting the action to the word, he drove out with his right fist, and the impetus of the blow carried him along the platform till he was poised upon the edge like a trapeze artist, ready for a flight in mid-air.

At one end of the hall was a banner with the words of Mrs. Nellie McClung: "All we women ask of this war is that our sons may die sober." At the other end a banner declared: "We can equip one soldier to fight the Kaiser on what we spend for booze in Ontario every minute."

Billy Sunday's Help.

In announcing the collection, Mr. G. A. Warburton, the Chairman, said that Mr. Sunday had come to Toronto at his own expense, and was receiving nothing for his services. He had given one hundred dollars to the collection that afternoon.

Mr. Homer Rodeheaver, who led the singing, sang a negro temperance ditty, the refrain of which ran:

"I'm a temperance engine don't you see,
Dem big breweries horses can't run over me."

The tune had a vaudeville swing about it, and amused the audience who were invited to join in with whistles and railway noises.

The band of the 48th Highlanders played various Scottish airs in honour. It was stated, of Mrs. Sunday, who claims to be a Scotch woman.

The hall was literally besieged at both meetings, and great crowds were unable to get near to the entrance. Special excursions were run from outside districts, but many of the people came in vain, as they were turned away.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

Ald. Stratton has returned to the city after an absence of several days.

Aldermanic Candidate.

Ex-Ald. G. H. Duncan will in all probability contest one of the aldermanic vacancies at the coming municipal elections.

Special Committee.

The special committee appointed to consider the proposal to purchase the exhibition grounds, met last evening in special session.

Court of Revision.

The Court of Revision will meet this evening at eight o'clock to consider a number of appeals against the assessment respecting some of the new pavements.

Committee Meeting.

The Finance committee of the Patriotic Fund will meet this evening at eight o'clock.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

The Brantford City Council by a unanimous vote, decided to submit a local option by-law in this city in January. Mr. James Haverson of Toronto, on behalf of the hotelmen, urged that no vote be taken, on the ground that many men were at the front who could not vote, and that the local hotelmen had lived up to the law.

THRASHED THE KAISER.

Boy of Fifteen Who Mastered a Bully of Nineteen.

References have recently been made to the fact that Emperor William II once received a thrashing in Devonshire, England.

It was in 1873 that the present Kaiser was staying with his suite at an English hotel, and in practising rifle shooting used as target letters on a sign belonging to T. F. Price.

Mr. Price's son, the present owner of the hotel, tells the story. He saw what was going on, and told the young Prince to stop, as he was damaging his (Price's) father's property.

"Do you know who I am?" asked the present Kaiser, insolently.

"No, said the lad, then only 15 and he struck the royal guest, aged 19 and knocked him down. "I could have killed him," said Mr. Price recently, "but his friends saw what was going on and pulled me off. I wish I had the same opportunity again."

Mr. John Doris Hurt in Fall From New Scow

FUNERAL OF THE LATE T. E. BODDY

Former Peterboro' C. P. R. Ticket Agent, Who Died From Asphyxiation

The funeral took place in Streetsville yesterday afternoon from the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Pope, of the late Thomas E. Boddy, former C.P.R. ticket agent, who died on Thursday last from gas asphyxiation. Deceased, who had just returned from Leamington, had rented a room on Wilton avenue, and was found dead early on Friday morning with the gas turned on full.

A superannuated official of the C. P. R. the late Mr. Boddy represented the company as ticket agent at the Union station, a position which he received through having been first train despatcher on the old Credit Valley Railway at Streetsville Junction.

Mr. Boddy went from Toronto to Peterborough, where he was city ticket agent of the company for over 20 years.

One daughter survives.

PATRIOTIC ADDRESS TO BELMONT CLUB

About forty members of the Belmont Club were favoured with a splendid after-dinner address in their rooms last night, delivered by Mr. H. R. H. Kenner. He spoke on "Patriotism," and as was anticipated handled the subject in a most inspiring and instructive manner. Rev. Canon Davidson, Honorary Major and Chaplain of the 93rd Battalion, also made a short address in which he congratulated the Belmont Club on their splendid showing in connection with recruiting. Fifteen out of a membership of sixty have enlisted and most of these men are now overseas.

Dr. Frank presided over the banquet for which Hooper was the caterer.

OXO

In the Kitchen

OXO CUBES are a most efficient aid to the cook. They are handy and uniform in size, flavour and food-value so that the right quantity to use can be judged to a nicety. It is surprising how quickly a cook can prepare her soups and savouries with OXO CUBES. The OXO CUBE way of cooking is as great an advance on old-fashioned methods as the electric cooker is on the coal-fire.

PRIMEAU BROS. ARE RETIRING FROM BARBER BUSINESS OF 43 YEARS

The announcement that Primeau Brothers have sold their barber business to Mr. Archie Moffat draws attention to the passing of another of the few remaining concerns that have linked the old with the new Peterborough and witnessed the transformations nearly fifty years have produced.

Mr. Joseph B. Primeau and Mr. John J. Primeau opened their first barber shop in 1872 in the store now occupied by Mr. Jas. Lynch, or in that immediate vicinity. In 1877 they moved into the premises they are now vacating. Forty-three years is the entire span of their business experience, with a record of 38 years in one place. But these citizens have pursued the even tenor of a regular trade year in and year out, but with minor business variations. They have made many friends and a good reputation. It was natural that many of their customers were citizens who had reached the river years with them. In a casual recollection Mr. J. J. Primeau said that Mr. J. C. Sullivan of Ashburnham was the only merchant who was in business here when the Primeau barber shop was first opened. There were six barber shops.

How to Increase Vitality

The coarse, dark specks of grains, so food scientists declare, contain the elements that build bone and muscle, blood, brain, and increase vitality. Therefore it naturally follows that a coarse, dark cereal like Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal is the food par excellence to increase vitality and put new life and vim into the system. Ask your physician about this food.

Positively do not stir Roman Meal porridge after making it. Set in a second basin or double boiler and keep your spoon out of it.

Sold by grocers at 10 and 20 cents.

IMMENSE SUM DUE FROM COX ESTATES

The Province of Ontario will receive nearly $700,000 richer when the Cox estates, those of the late Senator Cox and the late F. W. Cox, pay the succession duties due the Treasury.

From the estate of the late Senator, as revised by Justice Middleton, the province will receive $425,000 in duty, or a little less than ten per cent. of the estate. The estate of his son, F. W. Cox, will be called upon to pay $251,000, a total of $676,000. The saving to the province by the refusal of Hon. T. W. McGarry to accept the statement of assets first made and the consequent investigation, will be approximately $550,000.

Mail and Empire.

ADDRESS ON "SWEDEN" BY MR. J. W. WORTH

Before the Members of the A. Y. P. A. of All Saints' Church

A very enjoyable time was spent by All Saints' A.Y.P.A. last evening in the Parish Hall.

Mr. J. W. Worth, president of the Society, gave an interesting address on "Sweden," which was enjoyed by all present.

Other items on the programme were:
Piano solo—Miss Flowers.
Vocal solo—Miss Williams.
Violin solo—Sgt.-Major Hart-Horn.
Vocal solo—Mr. Melton.

The usual social half hour took the form of a contest on Canadian Trees, for which a prize was given and after which refreshments were served.

Committee Met Last Evening

To Consider the Proposal to Purchase the Exhibition Property

The special committee appointed by the City Council to consider the proposal to submit a by-law to the people at the January elections respecting the purchase of the Exhibition Grounds met last evening. Alderman Green, who is chairman of the committee had summoned a number of prominent merchants with a view of ascertaining their view of the proposal. After some discussion it was decided to wait upon the present owner of the property and see if he would remove all restrictions covering the sale of the property. As matters stand Mr. Morrow will not sanction the sale of the property unless the prospective owners agree to preserve it for exhibition purposes or for a park.

A Swedish scientist has advanced the theory that bearded grain, such as wheat, draws electricity from the air and that the plant is aided in its growth thereby.

FISKE O'HARA

The Popular Irish Tenor Coming in a New Play

Manager Augustus Pitou, Jr., who has richly gained a reputation for producing clean and wholesome dramas, has written another delightful play to his already long list on the road. The play in which he will shortly present his popular star, Fiske O'Hara in this city, "Kilkenny," is the play wherein the well-known Irish tenor will be exploited this season, and it is said to be the best play in which he has yet appeared. The locale of the piece is Kilkenny, Ireland during the early part of the nineteenth century, when that famous Irish city was the gathering place for the gentry of the country and its annual carnivals the social event of the year in the Green Isle. Mr. O'Hara has a budget of splendid new songs which he will render during the action of the play.

Two Magazines At Nobel Works Blown to Atoms

Parry Sound Rocked by the Explosion Like an Earthquake --Troops Sent to Scene

PARRY SOUND, Nov. 23.—The whole town was in a ferment of excitement last evening owing to two terrific explosions which rocked the town like fierce earthquakes at about 7:30 last evening. At once it was known that the explosions occurred at the Nobel plant of the Canadian Explosives, Limited, situated 7 miles from here. For a time the greatest apprehension was felt by the people owing to the large number of men from here employed at Nobel.

Telegraph and telephone communications are intact, and the latest and most authentic news from the works is to the effect that two or more magazines have been blown up, probably, designedly. The buildings were literally blown to atoms.

The magazines are located from a mile and a quarter to a mile and a half from the works proper, and as no men are at work in the magazines after dark the only loss of life, if any, may be one or two night watchmen.

It was impossible to obtain further particulars last night, but to-day the full extent of the damage will be known.

Major Storey, in charge of the overseas contingent in training here, is sending 150 soldiers to Nobel, and will throw a cordon around the entire works to keep them from further entry.

Has No Idea as to Cause.

Montreal, Nov. 23.—Mr. G. A. Staples, superintendent of the Canadian Explosives, Limited, Montreal, received a message tonight stating that an explosion had occurred at the Nobel plant, in the gun-cotton drying stove, that the building was wrecked, but that no person was injured. Supt. Staples said the company was manufacturing explosives for war purposes, and that no enemy aliens were employed at the plant. There are 1,500 employees.

Mr. Staples stated that he had not received any details of the explosion and he did not know whether or not it had been caused by an alien enemy.

An Old, Family Cough Remedy, Home-Made

Easily Prepared—Costs Very Little, but is Prompt, Sure and Effective

By making this old-time cough syrup at home you not only save about $2, as compared with the ready-made kind, but you will also have a much more prompt and positive remedy in every way. It overcomes the usual coughs, throat and chest colds in 24 hours—relieves even whooping cough quickly—and is excellent, too, for bronchitis, bronchial asthma, hoarseness and spasmodic croup.

Get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and tastes good.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. It quickly loosens the dry, hoarse or painful cough, and also heals the inflamed membranes. It also has a remarkable effect in overcoming the persistent loose cough by stopping the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes.

The effect of pine on the membranes is known by almost every one. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements.

There are many worthless imitations of this famous mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Lost Finger and Maybe Thumb in An Accident

Walter Barlow, an employee of the Peterborough Hamilton Co. lost his little finger of his left hand, which was deeply gashed across the palm in an accident yesterday. While adjusting a belt he slipped in some manner, and his left hand came in contact with a saw. The thumb was severely cut and it amputation may be necessary.

THREE IRISH BRIGADES FOR THE FIRING LINE

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The Daily Chronicle yesterday announces that the 16th all-Irish) Division, commanded by General Sir Lawrence Parsons, made up of Catholic Nationalists and Ulster Protestants, has completed training and is ready to go to the front in three brigades, which form the division.

The officers include the brother of John Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, Captain Wm. H. K. Redmond, M.P.; his son, Lieut. Wm. Archer Redmond, M.P., and his nephew Lieut. Wm. Raymond Redmond; Captain D. D. Sheehan, M.P., Captain Stephen Gwynne, M.P., Captain J. D. Esmonde, M.P., and Lieut. T. M. Kettle, M.P. The division was eager to enroll the services of Lieut. Robert Emmet, but his untimely death prevented it.

Captain Wm. Redmond, who is a nephew of the late General Patrick William Redmond, is in the Royal Irish Regiment, in which he served thirty-three years ago before entering the House of Commons. Two of his nephews—James and Thomas Dalton—are Lieutenants in the New South Wales contingent fighting in Gallipoli.

A Answer for the Kaiser.

John Redmond, who returned from the western battlefront, and will tomorrow night address a great recruiting meeting in London for the Irish Rifles, who covered themselves with glory at Loos, says:

"The completion of the new Irish division proves that the Kaiser made a flagrant miscalculation when he counted upon the hostility of the Green Isle toward Britain.

"Ireland," Mr. Redmond adds, "for the first time in history is eager to do her full duty to the Empire, which no longer stands for oppression, but for the independence of Belgium, Serbia and the small nations of Europe and for the freedom of the world."

The Last Resort.

"There's something in the world besides money."

"Yes? Just the other [illegible] possession."

Company Looking For Payment

Another Echo of the Arbitration Proceedings Between the City and Power Company

Mr. W. N. Tilley, K.C., and Mr. S. Johnston, K.C., representing the Peterborough Light and Power Company, yesterday made formal application at Osgoode Hall for payment out of the $100,000 paid into court by the city in connection with the arbitration between the city and company, in which the company was awarded $1,400,000 for their distributing system. Counsel for the company has also moved for a speedy hearing of the appeal of the city. Mr. M. K. Cowan, K.C., appeared on behalf of the city.

The motion was adjourned until the appeal is reached for argument.

150 GERMANS LEFT THEIR TRENCHES AND SURRENDERED

LONDON, Nov. 23.—"If we are having a bad time," writes a member of the Dominion emigration staff from the front, "the Germans are having a worse time. One night 150 of them came over and give themselves up, and told us that they were shelled out, flooded out, and could not get food. They were in a sorry state, thoroughly fed up. We have been supplied with Jack boots, jerseys and ski caps. These are marked 'Made in Canada' and are first class."

The writer says that before entering the hospital he was in trenches where the water was well over his knees. The trenches were continually falling in and exposed to an enfilading fire.

War Loan Will Be Largely Over-subscribed

OTTAWA, Nov. 23.—Several large additions to the Canadian war loan were announced by the Finance Department this afternoon. The Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada has subscribed $500,000. Large cash subscriptions from citizens of Ottawa so far total [illegible] amount to $2,000,000. Among the subscribers are understood, are Sir Henry Pellatt, Messrs. E. C. Whitney, and J. R. Booth.

Mr. Mark Workman, of Montreal, has subscribed $100,000, while the Gazette Printing Company has announced its intention of investing a similar amount. Earlier subscriptions included $1,000,000 from the Montreal City and District Savings Bank, and $500,000 from the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company of Montreal. Heading the whole list is a subscription from the Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught for [illegible] amount.

By to-morrow it is expected that all members of the battalion will be fitted out.

The 93rd Battalion signallers were hard at work on the parade ground with their flags this morning. The members of the section are very enthusiastic over their work.

The local portion of the 93rd Battalion is growing steadily. B Company has now a strength of nearly one hundred men, while the signalling corps and pioneers of the battalion have been organized. In addition to the 350 recruits here, Capt. Bygott and Lieut. Carter have secured a number of men in the northern part of the country, while twelve Warkworth recruits were sworn in as members of the battalion on Saturday. If the Lindsay battalion, as well as the Durham and Northumberland battalions, are proceeded with, as announced, Peterborough will be in a fine position to go ahead with the completion of the 93rd Battalion. It is estimated that the staff of A and B Companies will be fully completed before the end of the year, judging by the steady influx of new recruits coming in.

The machine gun section will be the next department of the 93rd Battalion to be organized. Many of the members of the battalion are anxious to join the machine gun squad when it is under way.

Capt. Neilson, the officer in command of "B" Company, Cobourg, of the 93rd Battalion, paid a visit to the Armouries to-day.

The Roy Studio will take a number of photographs of the officers and men of the 93rd Battalion for the Christmas number of the Examiner at 10.15 to-morrow morning at the Armouries. This notice is published for the benefit of the members of the battalion who may be off duty to-morrow and who might like to be included in the pictures. The Examiner's Christmas number this year will include a number of interesting military features, and nearly 300 pictures of Peterborough soldiers at the Front, in England and in training in Canada will be published.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Saunders, 208 Westcott St., was the scene of a pleasant gathering last evening, when the members of the A. S. K. Young Men's Bible Class of Knox Church said farewell to Pte. Sam. Saunders, one of their number who has answered the call of duty and is now a member of the Machine Gun Section of the 59th Battalion. Twenty members of the A. S. K. Class have been accepted for overseas service, including Pte. Jewell, who is now reported as being ill in a hospital in England. This is surely a proud record for a class with a membership of about sixty, one-third of the number in uniform.

Pte. Saunders is one of the many young men who were born in the United States, but who are now in the line for the country of their adoption. He was also five years in the United States Navy. Last evening, on behalf of his mother and father, he was presented with a handsome wrist watch, Mr. Harvey Henry, secretary of the Young Men's Class, reading a short address, and Mr. Stanley Byers, the president, making the presentation.

Pte. Saunders leaves on the evening train for Kingston, after three days' leave of absence. At present he expects he will be wintering in Brockville.

Rumour has it that a band will be organized in connection with the 109th Battalion.—Lindsay Post.

The Lindsay Post says: Lieut.-Col. Fee has lost no time in getting into harness as C. O. of the 109th Victoria and Haliburton Battalion. He is already mapping out a big recruiting campaign, for the two counties, and it will not be his fault if the recruits don't come in thick and fast. "Let your next suit be khaki," will be the slogan, and a strong appeal will be made to the young men to rally to the colours.

Provisional Lieutenants Max Hamilton and Grant Mowat, the latter a son of School Inspector A. Mowat, and Sergt. Walter Wagstaff of the 57th Regiment will attend the next provisional school of infantry at Kingston which opens on December 1st.

Sergt. Major Sucese of the 57th Regiment, who has been on instruction-al duty at Barriefield camp during the training season, has been posted to the 77th Regiment, Ottawa, to carry on instructional work there. Sergt. Instructor Dawes of the 57th Regiment, will be stationed at Belleville for some time.

Eight Battalions Now.

An organized recruiting campaign by the Militia Department on a larger scale than ever before planned is being arranged. It was suggested that the 3rd Division, which extends from Cobourg to the Quebec border be divided into districts, possibly eight in number; and that a battalion be authorized in each of these districts. The officers of the battalion, known locally, would be able to recruit the 1,100 men for each battalion Battalions are being authorized at several points and while the district idea has not been definitely used, the plan is based on the district idea.

From now on every officer appointed will have to act as a recruiting officer until his battalion is brought up to strength and every officer will therefore try to enlist his personal friends. This will bring men from the same district into the same company and battalion, whereas previous to this time men were liable to be drafted into any unit that happened to be mobilized at the time.

There are now eight battalions authorized in this division, the numbers and locations being: 59th Kingston, 77th Ottawa, 80th Belleville, 93rd Peterborough, 109th Lindsay, 130th Perth, 108th Durham, and 139th Northumberland. It is understood that battalions will also be authorized for Hastings to replace the 80th in Lennox and Addington, Frontenac and Leeds to replace the 59th, and in the Ottawa district to replace the 77th. These three battalions will likely be sent overseas in the spring as part of the Third Canadian Division at the front.

Some officers are of the opinion that too many battalions are being authorized and it will be practically impossible to secure the necessary number of recruits. If a battalion is authorized for Frontenac county alone it will be impossible to secure the required number of men without conscription and depleting the farms and industries.

There is a scarcity of senior officers in the country and in some cases officers on the reserve have been called out. Since the war broke out there have been large numbers of field officers sent over and this has practically depleted the ranks. In the Militia List practically all of the field officers' names are followed by an (E) meaning that they are serving in the Expeditionary Force. Hundreds of men from the civilian ranks are qualifying in the military schools as officers, but these men can not be given the experience necessary for the field officer, and so while there are sufficient subalterns what is now needed are officers of the higher ranks.

The Department will do its utmost to secure recruits from now on, and it is up to the public to help in the great undertaking of having every available single man between the ages of eighteen and forty-five put on the uniform to fight for his country.

The soldiers are well fed and are well quartered. The hospital, sanitary and other requirements are taken care of by experts and there are none but chronic knockers who can complain of the soldier's life. Every man who does his duty receives every consideration for it must be remembered that the officers are in it for exactly the same reason as the men, and with so many officers and men the former spectacular side of the officers' life is gone.

SIR SAM'S COMMENT.

OTTAWA, Nov. 23. — Commenting upon the disturbance between soldiers and police at London, Ont., last night, and on the recet developments in connection with purchase of supplies for the 33rd Regimet in that city, Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, this morning said:

"It is up to the men to trim the officers who have disgraced the regiment rather than venting their feelings on the police, and it is for the honest and self-respecting officers to purge themselves of those who have proved dishonest."

Sir Sam also intimated that there was likely to be a big shake-up of the officers of the 33rd Regiment.

Majors Cameron and Eastwood had a busy time this morning when they innoculated for the second time a large number of the 93rd. The same squad was also vaccinated this morning. With the exception of a few recruits, nearly all the men have now been innoculated and vaccinated.

The battalion cooks, with the exception of Sergt. Cook Wride, are on three days' leave of absence—merely a little rest before they tackle the job of handing out three meals a day to Peterborough's soldiers.

In pursuance of yesterday's orders all the maple leaves, numerals, and shoulder badges were missing from the uniforms of 93rd this morning. All these things will be issued to the men and they are not allowed to wear the badges they purchased on their own account.

The Kingston Standard says:

The band of the 59th Battalion will most likely be augmented by the addition of a saxophone trio of alto, bass and tenor variety. The band is rather short of reed instruments, and Captain McLaren who has charge believes that the presence of three saxophones would improve the balance of tone greatly. Certainly the presence of the instruments would be of great value to the organization.

ALLIES ADOPT MEASURES TO FORCE GREECE TO LIVE UP TO HER OBLIGATIONS

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The Athens correspondent of the Hague News Agency in a despatch filed yesterday confirms the report that the Entente powers have declared a commercial blockade of Greece. The announcement to this effect, made in the form of a note issued by the British Legation at Athens, is given as follows.

"Because of the attitude taken by the Hellenic Government in regard to certain questions touching closely the security and liberty of action to which the allied troops have the right under the conditions of their disembarkation on Greek territory, the allied powers have deemed it necessary to take certain measures which will have the effect of suspending the economic and commercial facilities which Greece has received from them heretofore.

"It is not the intention of the allied powers to constrain Greece to abandon her neutrality, to maintain which, in their eyes, is the best guaranty of her interests. The allied Governments have been somewhat disturbed by certain allusions to eventual measures which, if taken by the Hellenic Government, would appear to them to be contradictory to assurances they have received.

"As soon as their doubts on that subject—due, no doubt, to a misunderstanding have been dispelled, the powers will be happy to remove the obstacles now opposed to the arrival of merchandise in Greece, and to accord any facilities which result from normal relations."

An Athens despatch to the Times says it is confirmed that the Entente Powers have imposed restriction on Greek trade. The allied fleets, it is added, have already begun searching all steamers flying the Greek flag in the Aegean and Mediterranean.

An Athens despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company says that Earl Kitchener, after an audience with King Constantine lasting more than an hour, conferred with Premier Skouloudis and left Athens at 6 o'clock Saturday evening.

All the London morning papers make a feature of an interview given by Eleutherios Venivelos, the former Greek Premier, in Athens, Nov. 9, in which he said:

"Two things seem quite clear to me—first that Germany is bound to lose in the long run; second, that the new battleground in the Balkans offers favorable conditions for the allies."

Talked With Staff Chiefs.

An Athens despatch to the Havas Agency says:

"After Premier Skouloudis called on Lord Kitchener, the British Secretary for war, at the British Legation yesterday, th Field Marshal had a two hours' conference with General Dousmanis, chief of the Greek general staff, and Colonel Metaxas, chief assistant on the general staff, at which the officers accompanying Lord Kitchener were present.

"Great importance is attached to this conference in political circles. The Government organ Embros affirms that the King and the Greek Government yesterday gave Lord Kitchener formal assurance that Greece in no case would take measures hostile to the Quadruple Entente, and that a conciliatory solution of the present differences would be reached.

"The Embros adds that those who had the opportunity of seeing Earl Kitchener after his visit to the King and Premier Skoulouds brought away the impression that the questions now in suspense have lost much of their acute character.

"The statement made by the Embros are not confirmed from any official course. Lord Kitchener and his staff left Athens late Saturday night.

The Greek Cabinet met to consider the situation, and a few hours should show that Greece's future attitude will be. The Greek Government again has affirmed its friendliness to the allies, but has not yet taken the the steps required to prevent Greece from being counted among the friends of the central powers.

MEETING OF GOLF CLUB

A meeting of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club was held on Saturday afternoon, when the following directors were re-elected: Messrs P. Campbell, D. Mulholland, B. D. Hall, A. H. Stratton and E. G. Patterson.

The club is closed for the season.

MATTER OF OPINION.

"Mary!"

Farmer's voice rolled down the stairs and into the dim and silent parlour.

"Yes, papa, dear."

"Ask that young man if he has the time."

A moment of silence.

"Yes, George has his watch with him."

"Then ask him what is the time."

He says it is 11.45, papa.

"Then ask him if he doesn't think it about bed-time."

Another moment of silence.

"He says, papa," was the very voice announced impersonally, "he says that he rarely goes to bed before 1.00 but it seems to him that it is a matter of personal preference merely, and that if he were in your place he would go now if he felt sleepy."

ming announced this morning that he had some fifteen positions on the St Lawrence Canals open and that they would be given to returned soldiers. All those in the Convalescent Home are to be examined, and if there are any who are fit for home duty they are to be given positions on the canals until the fifteen vacancies are filled.

He ordered that under no circumstances were the convalescent soldiers to be discharged until it was assured that they had some position to go to. Col. Hemming is determined that the men will be well treated and he will leave no stone unturned to give them a good start in whatever life they are to choose.

Corp. H. Wood of A Company, 93rd Battalion, is on duty at the recruiting office. Corp. A. Tobin, who has been on recruiting duty, has returned to A Company.

Mrs. T. J. Parker, Oxford Street, was hostess last evening at a social gathering at her home in honour of her son, Pte. Ernest Parker, and other members of the 93rd Battalion C.E.F., prior to their going into barracks for the winter.

About twenty young people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Parker, where they spent a very pleasant evening at cards and dancing.

Among the members of the 93rd Battalion who were present were Ptes. L. Franks, Gordon Davis, Norman Saxby, Victor Dallin and Ernest Parker.

Major Burritt, the Chief Engineer of this Division, was in Peterborough last night, and went to Lindsay this morning. He is expected back in the city to-night to take over the contracts in connection with the Armouries. All preparations for the housing of the troops in barracks are practically complete. To-day the new recruits were busy in filling their ticks with straw, and each man's bed is now ready for use. Blankets for the men are in the stores, the kitchen staff has been appointed, and examination through the feet satisfactorily last week, and little remains to be done when the word comes to take up quarters in the Armouries.

From present indications the 109th Battalion at Lindsay will be "Victoria and Haliburton" in name only. The officers of the battalion are being sent out recruiting in all directions and two of them passed through to-day on their way to Brockville, where they will recruit for the "Lindsay" Battalion. Lindsay and Cobourg are in a class by themselves when it comes to grabbing men from all over the map and then claiming them bona-fide home brews.

ATHENS, Nov. 23.—Another conference has been arranged between King Constantine and Denys Cochin, the special French emissary in Greece, it was announced to-day. Cochin is armed with fresh arguments why it will be hopeless for Constantine to attempt to resist the Allies' demands.

LONDON, Nov. 23. That any Greek ships are being seized or held at British ports or that any blockade of the Greek coast has been established was officially denied by the Foreign Office to-day.

PARRY SOUND, Nov. 23. It has been proven that nobody was hurt at the Canadian explosives plant at Nobel last night, when seventy thousand pounds of gun cotton blew up from some mysterious cause, although the earth shook as from an earthquake for a fifty miles' radius. Soldiers who went out to guard the ruins returned this morning. The plant will be rebuilt immediately.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 23.—"Let us send our enemies back with bloody heads until they are on their knees, which promises to be soon," the Kaiser is quoted in Berlin despatches to-day as urging the troops in an address at an inspection of the forces under General Woyrsch.

The scene of the inspection is not mentioned, but Woyrsch, according to latest advices, is serving with Marshal Von Mackensen in the Serbian campaign.

ROME, Nov. 23.—The Italians are closing still more closely around Goritz to-day. All efforts have been concentrated on the city's capture. The Austrians have strengthened their ranks, but the Italian troops continue to take position after position. Austrian batteries have been silenced in various places.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Tod Sloan, former jockey, was arrested here to-day on a deportation order from the Home Secretary, under the Defence of the Realm Act. He will be sent back to the United States immediately.

LONDON, Nov. 23. The British War Office has denied the story from Berlin that the Turks have repulsed forces of 170,000 British, including Canadians and Australians, who had reached within ten miles from Bagdad, and were driven back thirty miles. The War Office says no such force was ever near Bagdad, and what ground has been taken in that neighbourhood is securely held by the British. It is not believed that the Canadians are with this force except, possibly, a field hospital.

FUNERAL OF LATE ALEXANDER OLIVER

Took Place This Morning to Little Lake Cemetery—Mrs. Oliver Was Present

The funeral of the late Alexander Oliver, whose death occurred in the County Gaol on Friday morning last, took place this morning at eleven o'clock from Comstock's undertaking parlours to Little Lake cemetery. Adjutant McElhiney of the Salvation Army officiated. Mrs. Alice Oliver, who was released yesterday from the County Gaol was present at the obsequies. She will be removed to the County House of Refuge to-day or to-morrow.

Practices For The 57th Band

The officers of the 57th Regiment have secured practice quarters for the 57th Regiment Band, and the rehearsals will be resumed on Thursday night of this week. Although many members of the band are now wearing khaki, some new members have been added, including Mr. A. Poole, a trombone player from Ottawa.

WHO BEATS THIS?

Here's a question worth answering. What Ontario cities, towns, and villages have the best records of recruits who at the time of enlisting were actually resident? Williamstown, Glengarry believes it holds the record for small villages. Out of a population of 250, Williamstown has already sent 25 men, and will send more. What will be better than that?—The Globe.

Peterborough hasn't quite reached the ten-to-one rates of recruiting, but it has done pretty well. Taking out population at 20,000, we have enlisted one soldier to every fifteen of the population.

PRICES THAT AMAZE

Swartz's Fire Sale a Regular Holocaust of Prices

Judging by the handbills printed in fiery red ink, telling all about the Fire Sale at A. Swartz's Clothing Store, George street, it looks as if you might never be able again to buy clothing, dry goods and house furnishings as favourably as you can during this sale, which starts to-morrow. The fire, which broke out over the store, did very little damage, but what little water and smoke was all that was found to exist. But all the same, Mr. Swartz realized that his stock was not as valuable to him after a fire as before a fire, and his greatest loss was that shoppers would not pay the same price for it. And he decided to sacrifice the stock, holus-bolus, and quickly, and put in another assorted, new stock in its place. To amazing prices in the red light will the rest of the story be due.

WEDDING BELLS

DORIS—QUINN.

The marriage of Miss Mary Quinn, and Mr. Nicholas Doris, both of Keene, was solemnized at St. Peter's Cathedral this morning at seven o'clock, Rev. Father McGinnity officiating. The bride was attended by Miss Annie Boland, while Mr. Michael Kennealey supported the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Doris will reside in Keene.

O'DONAGHUE—HEENAN.

At eight o'clock this morning at St. Peter's Cathdral a very pretty wedding took place, when Miss Lilian Cecilia Heenan, daughter of Mr. Patrick Heenan, 799 Water street, was united in marriage to Mr. Robt. Leo. O'Donaghue of this city. The ceremony was performed by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, who also celebrated the nuptial mass. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Pearl Heenan, while Mr. Joachin Anglesey was best man.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Donaghue will reside in Peterborough.

WENT—McENTEE.

St. Peter's Cathedral was the scene of a pretty wedding this morning at nine o'clock when Miss Mary McEntee, daughter of Mrs. M. McEntee, 641 Reid street, became the wife of Mr. John H. Went, of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Phelan in the presence of many friends of the bride and groom. The bride looked very pretty in her tailored suit of navy blue with at to match. She was assisted by Miss Margaret Dwyer, as bridesmaid, who was similarly attired. The groom was ably supported by Mr. Alex Barker of Toronto. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold pendant and to the groomsman a pearl tie pin.

After the ceremony a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's mother. Mr. and Mrs. Went leave at 5.30 p.m. for Toronto, where they will reside. Out of town guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Went, and Misses Mabel and Autumn Went, Orillia, and Mr. Donald McArthur, Orillia.

WALSH—DORRIS.

A quiet but pretty wedding took place this morning at the Church of the Sacred Heart, at 6.15, when Miss Hanna Dorris, of 232 Wescott Street, daughter of Mr and Mrs. William Dorris, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Captain J. J. Walsh, of Young's Point, Rev. Father J. V. McAuley, officiating.

Miss Mary Fitzgerald, cousin of the bride, was the bridesmaid, while Mr. Austin Walsh, brother of the groom, was the best man.

The bride was married in her travelling suit of navy blue with black velvet picture hat, with white fur trimmings, and wearing mink furs.

After the ceremony the bridal party adjourned to the home of the bride, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served by Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Dorris, Mrs. J. Daly assisting, after which the bride and the groom left by the 8.20 G.T.R. train for Toronto.

On their return they will reside at 232 Wescott street. The bride and groom received many beautiful and costly presents, also cheques from her brothers and sister at a distance, and also from the Walsh family.

OBITUARY

MRS. ALBERT E. METHERAL.

The death occurred Sunday night in St. Nichols Hospital of Mrs. Albert E. Metheral, 268 Reid street after a short illness. The deceased, who was fifty years of age, was formerly Miss Eleanor Annie Fuller, she had lived all her life in Peterborough.

The late Mrs. Metheral was a woman of many estimable qualities who endeared herself to all with whom she came in contact. Her death will be regretted by a host of friends who will extend their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family. The late Mrs. Metheral was an ernest and faithful member of All Saints' Church. Her husband, one son and one daughter are left to mourn her loss. The son is Sgt. Max Metheral, with the 39th battalion now at Shorncliffe, England, and the daughter is Miss Helen Metheral, residing at home. Three brothers, Messrs. Mortimer Fuller in Wisconsin, and Hugh and Percy Fuller of this city, and one sister Mrs. J. Tully, Calgary, Alta., also survive her.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday at 3 o'clock from the late residence to Little Lake cemetery, service at the house at 2.30.

Used To Pick Victims

A Toronto chauffeur furnished the best for this anecdote:

"Having run over and killed a number of people and presented his company with a number of lawsuits he was finally discharged from reckless driving. He then became a motorman on a trolley line, but did not take kindly to the new work. One day as he was grumbling over his fallen fortunes a friend said:

"'Oh, what's the matter with you? Can't you run down just as many people as ever?'

"'Yes,' said the exchauffeur, 'I can, but formerly I could pick and choose.'"

London Soldiers Have Bad Clash

their batons, in breaking a few heads, succeeded in landing four soldiers in the cells. Another was arrested by the military police, a large squad of which was sent from headquarters.

Police Efforts Ineffectual.

The military police were totally inadequate to meet the situation. They were able to form a strong picket at Carling street and to prevent the rioters from reaching the police station, but they were powerless to break up the crowd. In subsequent clashes with the city police the rioters were driven down Richmond street, but were soon back at the call of the ringleaders. The city police, however, had no more fights up to midnight. Four large plate glass windows were broken.

The military police had most of the trouble toward midnight, making several ineffectual attempts to arrest men who refused to move on. At 11 o'clock a bugler appeared on the scene, but neither the bugle call nor the commands of Col. McCrimmon, Chief of Staff, and the 43rd and other officers had any effect for half an hour, the rioters demanding the release of the prisoners. At 11.30 the bugle call was responded to by one company, and this was the beginning of the end of the disturbance. The others soon afterwards dispersed.

A Family of Brothers.

"Yes" said the principal of the young ladies' seminary, to the proud parent, "you ought to be very happy, my dear sir, to be the father of so large a family, all the members of which appear to be so devoted to one another."

"Large family! Devoted!" gasped the old gentleman, in amazement. "What on earth do you mean, ma'am?"

"Why, yes, indeed," said the principal, beaming through her glasses. "No fewer than eleven of Edith's brothers have been here this term to take her out, and she tells me she expects the tall one with the blue eyes again to-morrow." Tid Bits.

Mentioning His Name.

Mark Twain was lunching one day with a friend in a cafe. Two overdressed young men entered, and the first said, in a loud voice:

"Waiter, bring me some lobsters, a bottle of white wine, and a chop. Just mention my name to the chef, too, so that everything will be done to my liking."

The second said:

"Bring me some soup with peas, and tell the chef who it's for."

Mr. Twain gave his order a moment later. He said, with a wink at his companion:

"Bring me a half dozen oysters, and mention my name to each of them."—Tit-Bits.

WAR IN SNOW AND ICE OF THE ALPS

Tyrolean Country Offers Picturesque Setting, with Danger Behind Every Boulder.

The correspondent of the Prager Tagblatt, who is on the Italian front with the Austrian troops, sends a graphic word picture to his newspaper of the fighting in the snow and ice of the Tyrolean Alps.

"I am in a hut surrounded on all sides by natural fortifications, and here the Italians have tried to break through for many months. Others are playing cards. A captain of the patrol is singing a song and accompanying himself on the guitar. A patrol of four men enters, halts and salutes. One of them, a carpet manufacturer in civil life, wears a silver medal conferred for bravery in the campaign against the Russians in Galicia. Three rifle shots can be seen in his coat, and it is a miracle that he was not even wounded. Another of his men has his face covered with blood. They relate their experiences.

"It appears that the four men were surprised by several hundred Italians, and taking refuge in the dark behind big boulders, they returned the fire of the Italians so effectively that they put them to rout. Only one of the patrol was wounded, and that was due to a splinter of stone which embedded itself in his nose."

A metal brace to correct the form of a person's unsightly-shaped jaw has been patented in Pennsylvania.

WHEN the Christmas Boxes are singing round the camp fires in England, France, Belgium and other theatres of war, what a delight to your soldier friends to receive a PICTURE of some dear friend to gaze upon!

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Further advances by British troops in German East Africa are reported.

AS WE GROW OLDER

our minds are quite as active as in former years but our strength does not respond when we need it most; perhaps the kidneys are weak, the liver torpid, rheumatic pains or stiffened joints beset us, and we cannot easily throw off the colds that winter brings.

What we need is the rich cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion to renew the blood and carry strength to every organ of the body, while its glycerine soothes the respiratory tract, and its hypophosphites strengthen the excitable nerves.

Scott's Emulsion is a scientific oil-food, of unusual benefit to those past fifty years particularly during the colder seasons, it imparts warmth and creates strength. One bottle will prove its worth. No harmful drugs.

Have Taken Two Forts on the Isonzo Line

GENEVA, Switzerland, Nov. 24. — Carrying the Austrian positions between Salventino and Podegra by a smashing charge, the Italians have taken two forts defending the Podenora bridge, on the Isonzo line, according to news received here to-day from the front. A thousand Austrian prisoners fell into the Italians' hands. Besides the two forts captured, two more were demolished by the Italian artillery. A terrific bombardment of the whole Austrian-Isonzo front continues to-day. Every day sees an increase in the violent Italian assault on Goritz. Shells have literally been showered upon the Austrian position at the bridgehead. Both sides are steadily strengthening their forces. The losses have been enormous. The Italians have suffered more heavily than the Austrians, fighting in defended positions.

TROOPS FOR GALLIPOLI

Constantinople Reports the Arrival of Allies' Transports

CONSTANTINOPLE, via Berlin and Amsterdam, Nov. 24. — Efforts by the allies to land reinforcements on Gallipoli peninsula have been checked, apparently by guns of heavy calibre sent to the Dardanelles front according to an official report which says: "Near Anafarta our patrol destroyed trenches being constructed by the enemy and captured 500 bags of sand and a quantity of wire.

"Our artillery drove off transports approaching the coast at Ari-Burnu. On Sunday we drove off an enemy torpedo destroyer attempting to enter the Dardanelles."

ZURICH, Nov. 24 — A telegram from Bucharest states that the Germans are sending two 42-centimetre guns to Turkey for use at the Dardanelles.

To Be Benevolently Neutral is the Hope of Greece, Says the King

Political Situation Seems Easier as Result of Kitchener's Audience With King Constantine, Although Tension is Not Altogether Relaxed.

LONDON, Nov. 24—King Constantine told Earl Kitchener that he wished to continue an attitude of benevolent neutrality toward the Allies. So says the Athens correspondent of the Chronicles, who adds that he learns the British War Secretary was impressed and gratified by his interview. The despatch says:

"One result of his visit, his audience with the King and his interview with the Premier, is that the political situation seems easier, although the tension is not entirely relaxed. While the Government has not made any official communication on the subject, it is certain that an accord can be reached between Greece and the Entente Powers. Athens is optimistic, and says that serious misunderstandings will be avoided. The Greek Cabinet, it is reported from trustworthy sources, is ready to assure the Allies that a safe retreat will be given to British, French, or Serbian troops if they are forced back over the border."

Safeguard Retreat.

The London Mail correspondent wires:

"M. Rallis, Minister of Justice, who is the guiding spirit of the Skouloudis Cabinet, informed me on Nov. 18 that in the event that the Serbian, French and English troops were forced across the frontier, no attempt would be made to disarm them. 'We will even go to the extent of establishing a cordon of troops to safeguard the retreat of the troops,' he said.

"I asked M. Rallis if no German menace would alter that resolution. With great excitement and gesticulating M. Rallis replied: 'It would be senseless to imagine it when you have the guns of your fleet levelled at our cities.'

"But suppose, I asked, Allied troops do not wish to retire to the interior of the country?'

"M. Rallis replied: 'They can dig trenches and defend themselves.'"

British Attitude Annoys.

Rallis and Greece would demobilize in 24 hours if the Allies left Salonika. He also complained of the "disgraceful attitude" of the British GoGvernment and press toward Greece. He said: "The only thing we want is peace, and you force us to make war. You are starving us. Two more wheat vessels were stopped by you to-day. You want us to succor you when no English soldiers shed their blood for Serbia, when scarcely an English rifle has been fired. Your Government has piled fault on fault, delay on delay, and now when you have only a few thousand troops to help us, you want to force us to step in and die. We do not wish to be another Belgium or Serbia."

Greeks Are Afraid.

"Every day I spent in Greece," states the correspondent, "it was made clear to me that the whole situation might be summed up in a single word of fear. From the most ragged boatman in the Piraeus to King Constantine himself, the Greek people get up in the morning with a prayer, 'Let there be no war to-day.'

"The King does not love Germany. He offered to join the Allies in April, when Germany had her hands full and the Serbians were able to cooperate, on condition that the Dardanelles expedition should not be undertaken, but instead, an advance be made through Thrace. This suggestion was not accepted, so it should, in justice, be remembered that the position to-day is different with German and Bulgarian troops approaching Monastir. The King has now gained implicit belief in German power.

Comforting Thought.

"They tell me," he said, "I am between the devil and the deep sea, and may as well throw in my lot with the Allies, whose pressure can be immediate. That is all very well, but France and England, whatever happens, will never be too severe with my country, and Germany will be implacable, and my duty is to save my country the horror of Belgium."

Hastings Boy Returns Home From the Front

Pte. Stephen Hawkins Arrived Home on Saturday Evening—News of Hastings and Vicinity

HASTINGS, Nov. 23.—Lieut. W. Thompson has been spending a week in the surrounding district endeavouring to secure recruits for the 93rd battalion.

Despite the inclement state of the elements on Friday night, a goodly number turned out to the patriotic concert in the Town Hall, Westwood, and report a good programme.

Pte. Stephen Hawkins, who has been invalided home from the front, arrived here on Saturday evening and was met at the station by a goodly number of the citizens, but owing to the lateness of his arrival, the demonstration was not as enthusiastic as it would otherwise have been. However his friends are glad to see him once more.

As the result of the severe wind and rain storm on Friday the Bell Telephone Co. have found it necessary to send out workmen to repair the rural lines.

The I.O.D.E. are putting on a ballad concert on Friday evening of this week. A good programme is being prepared.

The November meeting of the W.M.S. of the Methodist church was held on Thursday last in the parlors of the church. The ladies are preparing a number of quilts, etc., to be sent to some needy mission.

Dr. T. B. Edmison is in Kingston for a few days, prior to sailing for overseas service. The Dr. is breaking up house and expects to sail for the front in the course of a week or ten days.

Four large barrels of pies were packed and sent to the boys at the front by members of the I.O.D.E. recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace have returned from their honeymoon trip and are preparing to settle down to the realities of housekeeping.

The news has come to hand that Corp. Ben Hicks has been wounded and is now in the hospital as a result.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Gibson of Campbellford, visited in town last week.

Constable Moore of Peterborough gave us a call last week.

Rev. V. K. Edmison of Keene, spent a day last week with his brother, Dr. Edmison here.

Mr. F. Hill of Washago, spent a few days last week with friends here.

Mr. John Warner returned last week after spending the summer in the west.

Mr. J. V. Cameron of Peterborough, paid us a visit during the week.

Miss C. Shorter was in Campbellford on Tuesday.

Mr. J. B. Smith of Bethesda spent Wednesday in Hastings.

Mr. Stephens of Campbellford was in town on Sunday.

Private Andy Lawson of Toronto, spent the week end with friends here.

Mr. Tom Hill of Peterborough, spent Sunday with his parents here.

Dr. Hayeke of Carleton, was in town during the week.

Mr. Runciman, representative of the Bissell Co. of Elora, was in this section a few days ago in the interest of the firm.

Mr. J. Crosby took a business trip to Buffalo during the past week.

Mr. M. Elliott of Dummer gave us a call a few days ago.

Mr. Aubrey DeSoto is laid up with a sore hand, having received a severe burn while at work in the planing mill. It is hoped, however, that nothing serious may follow.

The members of the Methodist Sunday school are beginning practice for the annual Christmas concert to be put on on Christmas night.

A number of our people are suffering from severe colds, due no doubt to the changeable weather.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

LAKEFIELD NEWS

LAKEFIELD, Nov. 24.—Professor Oswald Smith, of Toronto, was the guest of Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Mackenzie at "The Grove" on Friday last.

Private H. G. Simpson, of the 34th Battery, Kingston, spent a few days last week in the village visiting his mother, Mrs. Thos. Simpson.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Cassan, having disposed of their property in Lakefield, have moved to Campbellford, where they intend making their future home.

Mrs. Jas. Long left last week to visit friends at Apsley and Coe Hill.

Private S. Mahood, of the 93rd Battalion, Peterborough, was in the village on Sunday visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Mahood.

Mr. Fred Dunford returned to the village last week after spending the past three months in the west.

Miss Traill spent a few days last week visiting friends in Peterborough.

Prof. Michael Mackenzie of Toronto, was in the village on Saturday visiting his brother, Rev. A. W. Mackenzie at "The Grove."

Mrs. H. L. Hewitt, who for the past two years has been occupying Major LeFevre's residence "Uplands," leaves this week to spend the winter at Des Moines, Iowa.

Mr. John Holmes left last week to spend the winter at San Diego, Cal.

The Bishop of Toronto will hold a confirmation service in St. John Baptist Church on Sunday, Dec. 5th.

Mrs. A. W. Mackenzie gave a very enjoyable tea at "The Grove" on Tuesday afternoon in honour of her sister, Mrs. Hewitt, before her departure for Des Moines.

Mr. and Mrs. Marling are moving this week into "Uplands," where they will reside for the winter.

POTATOES MAY SELL FOR TWO DOLLARS A BAG

The Toronto Trade Looks For Much Higher Prices Before February—New Brunswick Supply Shows a Falling Off

This remarkable price has not yet been realized on Toronto market, but it is the opinion of one man who is close to the potato trade of this city that before February $1.75 per bag, and probably $2 will be received by the fortunate few who have any of the tubers to sell.

It is several years since there has been such a scarcity of potatoes throughout the land. There are not nearly enough for the demand, and the best quality of tubers may bring unthought of prices. There is a lot of poor stuff that will be worked off, and will tend to keep the prices down, but before spring it is quite certain that those who have to buy will have to peel off a larger layer from their roll than will be found pleasing.

Alberta may supply us with some potatoes, though we naturally look to New Brunswick for the supply. Unfortunately the same conditions prevail in New Brunswick as in Ontario, but in some parts of Alberta a good crop was secured.

"The conditions governing the production of potatoes have this year been as bad as last year they were good," reports the Dominion Government. The yields are as follows:

	Bushels	Acres	Yield Per acre
1915	62,604,000	478,000	131
1914	85,672,000	475,900	180

"Not since the average of 110 bushels in 1910 has the rate per acre been so low as 127 bushels, being the average of 158 bushels for the five years 1910-14.

"In Ontario, where the record yield of over 167 bushels per acre was obtained last year, the average yield per acre this year is not more than 92.6 bushels, the lowest yield on record for the Province.

"In other Provinces the potato yield is also poor, excepting in Alberta and in British Columbia. In the former Province the total yield is 155,000 bushels from 27,300 acres, an average of 1866 bushels per acre; in the latter the yield is 3,950,000 bushels from 16,000 acres, an average of 247 bushels. In both Provinces the yield per acre is larger than in any year since 1911, when the respective yields were 211.6 and 252 bushels.

"For all Canada the quality is 84 per cent of the standard as compared with 90 per cent last year, but in Ontario the quality is down to 66 per cent as compared with 101 per cent last year. In Prince Edward Island the quality is 81, in Nova Scotia it is 76, and in New Brunswick 88 per cent. In Alberta the quality is good with 97 per cent and in British Columbia 94 per cent.

"The acreage under potatoes in the growing season of 1915 was 478,000 in Canada, 76,000 less than in 1914, and 22,000 acres in Alberta. Potatoes are very generally grown and are affected with rot and blight, especially in Ontario, and the reduction in acreage was probably a voluntary one."

What Does it Mean?

Suppose potatoes actually do sell at $2 a bag in the Toronto market, what will be done? What will the Government do? Will it seize the potatoes and ship them to the prairies for storing at reasonable freight rates, or will it close down the East and the West together? Will it help the potato crop reports and lighten the burden where there is a burden, and help the producer out where there is a surplus crop?

There is a great opportunity here for the new Marketing Commission to do something practical and helpful. The British Columbia Government sends fruit across a continent to sell its supplies. That is practical

On the Ontario Government and its appointees not find something practical in the potato situation to lure it away from exhumation for a while?

The U. S. Situation.

In the United States the crop not acre has been about average this year being 96.3 bushels, but the total crop was over 45,000,000 bushels below last year. Potatoes sold on Nov. 1st at 60 cents per bushel. Weekly Sun.

ITALIAN TROOPS WILL STRIKE FOR SERBIAN FRONTIER

LONDON, Nov. 24 — Italian troops now landing on the Albanian coast will strike at once across the country for the Serbian frontier, according to Swiss advices to-day. The Italian plan is understood to be to strike at the flank of the Austro-German forces engaged in the southern drive through Serbia. Montenegrin forces are expected to co-operate with them. The march across Albania is but forty or fifty miles, but will be attended with great difficulty owing to the mountainous country, and the absence of roads.

It is said that at most 30,000 persons will cross the United States have taken out citizenship papers during this year.

Kidney Trouble?

The waste material which the Kidneys are intended to remove from the blood, it allowed to accumulate in the system, poison the blood and thus produce deleterious effects.

If from over-work, exposure to cold, or some local injury, the kidneys become congested or inflamed and cannot perform their functions, the system becomes filled with uric poisons.

Whenever a dull, heavy pain is felt over the region of the kidneys for any length of time accompanied by a sallow complexion, loss of appetite, decrease of weight, and a pasty condition under the eyes and in the ankles, a chronic inflammation of the kidneys must be suspected and if not relieved promptly chronic Bright's Disease will certainly develop.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt used everywhere at 25c and 60c which is a Diuretic as well as an Aperient, will carry out of the system the poisonous material which the kidneys cannot get rid of and will tone up the system of the kidneys.

Gordon Craig

Soldier of Fortune——by Randall Parrish

Copyright, 1912, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

Possibly even now I was under surveillance. The negro would be left the cabin I knew, but where was Herman Bronsard was in charge of the deck and hence this would be the first mate's watch below. Impressed with these unconverting thought I emerged again into the main cabin. The stateroom doors were all closed, and I had to guess which was the German's. I was sure however, as Bronsard occupied the next on the port side. I had heard him open that door while talking to the steward, and it was highly probable the first mate had the starboard opposite. Judging from the position of the doors, those would be larger than the other staterooms, and if Herman was the real master of the boat he would require good quarters. I listened at the door, but heard nothing then, resolved desperate to the delay, trust the steward entirely. The door was unlocked opening noiselessly. A glance revealed me the room was unoccupied. I stepped within.

Possibly my first conclusion was not confirmed the first mate was not on board he was asleep with the boat party, and Henley was entirely alone. He had taken advantage of the opportunity. But what could I do? If I broke down the door into his cabin the noise would be heard on deck, and besides, the fellow was armed. The only result of such an effort would be my own imprisonment, leaving her in more helpless than before. Without knowing why I peered into the bath room connected with Herman's state room. It was small, but perfect in arrangement and, to my surprise, revealed a second door. In an instant I understood—this was not Herman's private bath, but was also used by the captain. That second door led to the after cabin. I was there in two strides, my ear at the crack listening. Nothing reached me but the murmur of a voice, the words indistinguishable, yet this was sufficient to convince me that I was on the right trail. The two were together, and here was an opportunity for me to reach them unobserved. Slowly, using every precaution to avoid noise, I turned the knob and opened the intervening door a scant inch. I caught a glimpse of the interior.

"You have trapped me here—you—you brute!" I heard her say.

"Well, what of it?" insultingly. "Why shouldn't it be me, my dear, as well as the other?"

"What do you mean? Do you connect me with Gordon Craig?"

"Of course," and he laughed. "Why shouldn't I, please? You came with him from the north, did you not—traveling as his wife? I happen to know your history."

She took a deep breath, standing straight before him, her cheeks burning.

"Perhaps you think you do," she said, now in full control of herself. "But you are going to learn your mistake. I am here under unpleasant circumstances, yet I am not subject to your insult. I refuse to answer you or remain in your presence." She stepped aside, leaving free passage. "You will unlock that door."

"Hardly that," and I could see his fingers shut down on the top of the desk. "It takes more than a few words to change me. Really, I like you better than I did. You are decidedly pretty now you are angry. Besides, what have I to be afraid of? There is no one but us in this part of the ship; I fixed that up before I went after you; even your friend Craig is mooning around somewhere on deck. I'm captain of the Sea Gull, and there's not a rapscallion on board who would risk his skull to help you. Even Craig wouldn't; he even told me himself you were nothing to him."

"He—he told you that?"

"He certainly did—in this room. Come, now, what is the use of being such a cat?" He took a step forward, but she never moved.

"Don't touch me," she said in a tone that stopped him. "I am a woman, but I can defend myself."

"That is the worst thing you can do—threaten me," he said sharply. "I never take that from man or woman. See here! Do you realize where you are—how completely you are in my power? The door is locked, and you haven't any weapon. Don't try to fool me!"

"I have told you once," she said earnestly, "not to touch me."

"I'll take a chance. You're worth it!" I saw her struggle to break free, and then out of the shadow I leaped at him, both hands seeking his throat. There was to be no alarm, no shooting, if it could be avoided. The very impetus of my rush sent him staggering and left her helpless on the deck, yet I got grip on his collar, choking back the first cry and struck him once, a half arm jolt, which would have sent him sprawling but for the cabin wall. Yet he rallied so quickly as to overcome this advantage. Judging him from his size, I felt considerable fighting ability, for he was all muscle, swift in movement as a cat, squirming out of my grasp before I could close firmly. My fingers were wrenched from his throat, yet the fellow made no outcry, realizing, doubtless, it would not be heard. His eyes blazed with hate, mercilessness, vindictive, and he struggled like a fiend to break free. I saw the girl, still dazed from her fall, struggling to her feet, with face uplifted, then my every consideration was riveted on my antagonist. This was to be no boy's play, no easy victory. His muscles were like iron, his movements so quick and unexpected as to put me on the defensive. I could only hold tight, braced for the strain, yet forced back, in spite of every effort, inch by inch across the floor, my feet tangled in the rug. Neither could strike nor kick. I was weaponless, and I dare not release his arms for fear he might possess a gun. But I managed to swing him sideways, the two of us tripping over the chair, and coming down heavily on the deck. By some luck I landed on top and before he recovered from the shock had wrenched one arm free, locking my fingers in his throat.

He squirmed under me, but could not break the grip, his face purpling, until he lost all power. Fierce as the battle had been, I retained sufficient sense to loosen my death grip while the man still breathed, lifting my head sufficiently to glance about. My own breath came in sobs, and the perspiration almost blinded me.

"Bring me something to tie him with," I said brokenly. "Anything; yes, that belt will do."

She tore it from the hook on the wall and thrust it into my hands. With a single movement I had it buckled securely about his arms, and was free to sit up and stare about. A cord from the portiere curtain draping the bathroom entrance completed his bindings.

"By ——, Craig," he snarled, "you'll both wish you'd killed me before you're done with this job. What chance have you got to get away?"

"That is for me to decide," I answered. "But if you open your mouth again I'll gag you. Now, stop it. The first word you utter will mean a handkerchief in your mouth."

I stooped down and dragged him to one side. As I straightened up again she was facing me.

"How did you get here?"

"I found my way through the connecting bathroom yonder."

"Then—then, we can escape in the same manner."

"I hardly think that will be necessary. I'll go through our friend's pockets for his keys." I turned him over and began the search. "Ah, a revolver! I thought probable—in protection against a woman, you curl. Here are keys; now let's see what they fit."

The third one tried unlocked the door, but even as I tried them in the lock my mind swiftly reviewed the situation. It must be open war from now on. Henceforward we could expect no mercy on board. Yet how was it possible to escape, or avoid discovery? To attempt leaving the Sea Gull before dark would be suicidal. Yet there was a chance that what had occurred in this cabin could be kept concealed for a few hours, until darkness gave us better opportunity for successful action. The memory of what Henley had said to me the evening before—that he was only technically in command; that for days at a time he never appeared on deck in daytime, gave me the clew. If he could be kept absolutely secure in his cabin, unable to create any alarm, we would be free to plan our escape. There were but two points of danger to be guarded against—Herman and the steward. The former, when he returned from shore, might seek him for final orders, and the latter, if he failed to appear in the cabin for the regular meal, would endeavor to learn his desires. I would have to guard against these contingencies, and, with the first in mind, I stepped across to the bathroom, and was gratified to learn that the door, leading into the mate's stateroom, could be locked on the inside. With this private approach barred, I felt confident of being able to guard the single entrance remaining.

"Well, what can we do?" she asked when I returned.

"Keep the, fellow tied and wait for night," I answered soberly. "That is our only chance. The mate is ashore. We are lying in the cove of a small island off the Florida coast waiting for darkness and a chance to slip through into southern waters."

"Do you know where this boat is bound?"

"Yes; Spanish Honduras. We are loaded with munitions of war," I laughed. "I was to be a general down there. I had to play a part. But you received my note?"

"Yes, and it helped me wonderfully, although even then I scarcely comprehended why all this pretense was necessary. Surely you do not believe this man is Philip Henley, that—that I have told you a lie?"

"No, I do not," I answered earnestly. "But he has shown me evidence of his identity which would have convinced me under other circumstances—letters and pictures. I will show them to you, for I know where they are kept in the desk. No evidence would shake my faith in you, and I am certain now there is fraud here, some devilish plot concocted to steal Judge Henley's fortune."

"What letters? What pictures were they?"

"Letters from the judge to his son—intimate family letters, and a photograph of the father and this man taken together."

"And were the letters addressed to Philip?"

"The envelopes had been destroyed, and no name was mentioned, but the photograph was indorsed in the judge's handwriting."

He Squirmed Under Me Like an Eel.

A SUFFERER FROM KIDNEY TROUBLE FOR TWO YEARS.

When the kidneys get ill the back gives out. But the back is not to blame. The ache comes from the kidneys, which lie under the small of the back.

Therefore, dull pain in the back, or sharp, quick twinges, are warnings of sick kidneys—warnings of kidney trouble.

Plasters and liniments will not cure the bad back, for they cannot reach the kidneys which cause it.

Doan's Kidney Pills reach the kidneys themselves. They are a special kidney and bladder medicine. They heal the diseased surface of the kidneys and bladder, and help them to act freely and naturally.

Miss Mary A. Northrop, Cole's Island, N.B., writes: "I have been a sufferer from kidney trouble for two years. I tried quite a number of remedies, but they did me no good. My mother got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they did me so much good that I got the second one, and when I had taken that I was completely cured."

Doan's Kidney Pills, are the original kidney pills. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is on every box. Price, 50c per box, 3 for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Thickness and Lustre at Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant; remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready to use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of mess.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

An old miner once visited a lawyer to make his will. The old man's property consisted of two small cottages which had cost him $400. The lawyer asked him how he wished to dispose of it.

"My auld woman is to hev all so long as she's a widow."

"What age is your wife?" asked the lawyer.

"Seventy-two," was the reply.

"And how long have you been married?" was the next question.

"Over fifty years," was the reply.

The lawyer suggested that under the circumstances he should let his wife have the little property during her life whether she remained a widow or not.

"An' wumun!" exclaimed the old man. "An' hev me ain wey."

But surely, expostulated the lawyer, you don't expect an old woman, seventy-two, would ever dream of marrying again?"

The miner looked the lawyer full in the face and answered very solemnly:

Why those Pains?

Here is a testimonial unsolicited:

"If I had my will it would be advertised on every street corner. The man or woman that has rheumatism and fails to keep and use Sloan's Liniment is like a drowning man refusing a rope."—A. J. Van Dyke, Lakewood, N. J.

LIFE'S OPPORTUNITY.

In the midst of fire, smoke and roaring,
A shot and a scuffling cry,
And another soul from battle
Has gone to God on high.
Oh, God of truth and justice!
In his heart was a wish divine
In the face of the raging foeman,
The cause he espoused was mine.

In the fight which on earth is waged,
Grant me the power to give
The grace that an ending others
Leaves me the right to live.
The right to meet my Master
Who has given all for me.
The love that gains in dying
Eternal life in Thee.

C. E. Burns.

Sir William Lund Stevenson, president of the Anti-tipping league of Idaho, said at a league banquet in Boise:

I visited New York last month. I put up at a fine hotel there—$4 a day in fact for room and bath. But what service!

I went into the hotel restaurant the evening of my arrival to order dinner. I ordered a simple enough dinner, according at least to our Idaho standard: a platter of clams, cold consommé, rolled brook trout, fillet of beef with mushrooms, chicken a la broche and soon on. I soon got enough Idaho dinner, but no clams. They kept me waiting in the lobby and the noise and smells all unconscious had gone. I missed number.

Finally I called the maître d'hotel and said:

"Is it the rule to tip the waiter here?"

"Yes, sir," said the man, "yes, sir."

"Then send it, gave me a good big tip. I've been waiting close on to three hours."

A Poor Reward.

"I see you have your arm in a sling," said the inquisitive passenger. "Broken, isn't it?"

"Yes, sir," responded the other passenger.

"Meet with an accident?"

"No, broke it while trying to put myself on record."

"Quit it, Scott! What for?"

"For minding his own business."

A GRADUATE NURSE RECOMMENDS COPELAND'S C. C. C. For Tonsilitis and Quinsy

READ THIS

Copeland Medicine Co., Ltd., Toronto. Dear Sirs,—Seven years ago I had a severe attack of Tonsilitis which developed into Quinsy. The doctors said my tonsils were badly ulcerated so operation on my throat, which I kept, declined no benefit. I suffered for three years each day throat, and for eight weeks at a time had to be propped up in bed with pillows in order to sleep. I heard of your medicine and decided to give it a trial as all else had failed. After taking one bottle I found it eased my throat, so continued taking it until I had taken six bottles. Since that I have had no trace of the old trouble. I would advise all suffering from throat, bronchial or lung trouble, to give your medicine a fair trial.

Wishing you every success, yours sincerely,
(Sgd.) IDA TOMPKINS

Sam's Honesty.

"Well, what can I do for you Sam?" asked Jones, as the colored waiter who usually served him at the restaurant entered the office.

"I got a chance to change meh position, boss. Kin yo' say a good word to me? Say I'se honest an' such?"

"I know, of course, that you're a good waiter, Sam, but how do I know you're honest?"

Mr. Brown was waiting in his room on the first floor of a fashionable boarding house, when his landlady came to him with a troubled look on her rather plain face.

"Why, what have you been doing with it?" he exclaimed, angrily. "It's all ruined."

"I put it hanging on the clothes line at the back six and a—"

"Oh, you left it on the clothes line at the back, did you?" he bawled. "I suppose by the look of it, I should get a bill for it had been hanging on the line all the front."

GERMANS BAN ENGLISH WORDS

French and American Terms Also Being Eliminated From Language by Committee of Experts.

In order to eliminate all foreign words from the German language, a special committee under Dr Lehmann is holding daily sessions in Berlin. This committee is considering carefully every American, French and German word that has become affiliated with the German and in its place is giving the German term which hereafter is to be used. At a recent session there was considerable discussion over the word "monogram" and it finally was determined to let it stand.

The word "automobile" is banned, and in its stead "Kraftwagen" is to be used. "Garage" is replaced by "Kraftwagenhalle" or "Kraftwagenstand." "Eau de Cologne" is to be "Kolnisches Wasser." It no longer is permitted to say "American bar," but "amerikanische Schankstube," and "American drinks" will be "amerikanische Getranke." The French word "billiard" is changed to "Billiard." The word "etablissement," so universally used in the shops of Berlin has been stricken from the vocabulary, and Germans in future will say "Wirtschaftsunternehmen."

When it came to the word "hotel" the committee was not entirely in accord regarding its elimination. It was resolved, however, to suggest to hotel proprietors that the German words "Haus" or "Hof" would be more desirable.

The committee's labours are by no means finished, as there is still a large number of foreign words to be considered. The changes that are made are put into effect at once, and already in the hotels and restaurants "Speise-carte" has replaced the word "menu" and all French dishes and French names are barred from the bills of fare.

CONSTANTINOPLE

There is still a settled conviction predominant in Constantinople that Germany is going to win. Perhaps the presence in the city of so many Germans and the fact that they control the sources of information accounts for this, but it is a conviction which makes itself felt. The question that is in most people's heads however is 'What good is it going to do Turkey?' The Turks do not want the Germans to control Constantinople. They are not popular with any element of the population.

A German officer in a moment of hour confessed. "As long as we have been here and as much as we have done I have to admit that these people still like the English better than they do us."

Nobody can escape knowing that; you get it everywhere from all kinds of people. One noble Turk—a pasha no less—has spoken about "the strong clean hand of England," and a warning Jewish servant, in the same connection of the topmost height of a well swept watchtower, has pointed out my ears his and his people's great unhappiness and their hopes of deliverance "when the British will at last take hold of things."

What Dr. Chase is Doing for Our Soldier Boys

At Home and Abroad---To Every Soldier a Full Sixty-cent Box of Dr. Chase's Ointment Free---Greatly Appreciated by the Boys.

Realizing that ointment is one of the prime necessities to the soldier, both in training and at the front, it was early decided to supply all Canadian recruits free of charge.

That this offer was appreciated by the military authorities is best evidenced by some of the replies received from Headquarters, as well as from individual camps.

Brigadier-Gen. Sir Sam Hughes wrote — "This is indeed a most useful and acceptable donation and for which please accept my most sincere thanks."

Lieut.-Col. Murphy, in charge of Valcartier Camp, wrote — "I would be very glad to receive donation of Dr. Chase's Ointment and feel sure it would be acceptable."

One Major reports — "The Ointment arrived on the day the Battery completed 4 weeks on the march. Feet and Leathers [illegible] Ointment was very beneficial and much appreciated by those with sore feet."

For the 31st Regiment, Owen Sound, Q.M. Sergt. Miller writes — "I have been directed by the Commission to tender to you our hearty thanks for your splendid gift of Dr. Chase's Ointment to the members of the Overseas Contingent. I can assure you it was appreciated by the men, and if the quantity had been doubled we would have had a hard time to give it back. The men swear by it."

From Niagara Camp Q.M. Sergt. O. M. Stevenson writes for the 37th Battalion — "The Ointment has been distributed among the [illegible] companies and is highly appreciated by them. I am sure you will be glad to know that the men find it very useful both here and at the front."

Further distributions of Dr. Chase's Ointment will be made to the recruits assembling for training at the various towns and cities throughout the country. Officers in charge are requested to advise us how many boxes they can use, allowing one for each man. In a score of ways this Ointment is useful to the soldier, and it is our desire that every man shall be supplied free of charge. Address Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

FIVE TONS OF OINTMENT

Weekly Supply for the 1st British Soldiers Upon Their Feet.

"London, Feb 10.—An "eyewitness" at the British general army headquarters in France pays a tribute in an article given out yesterday by the Official Press Bureau to the work of the army supply departments. He calls the Ordnance Department a "military universal provider." He says in part:—

"The vastness of the work of training a modern army may be gauged by the fact that during the past month the supplies furnished included 450 miles of telephone wire, [illegible],000 sand bags and 10,000 pounds of shoe blacking, while in ten days the Ordnance Department supplied 120,000 for waistcoats and 200,000 flannel belts. The average weekly issue of ointment for feet is five tons.

"The complexity of the work is illustrated by the fact that the index of the stores include 50,000 separate kinds of articles. Most of these articles are obtained from England, but some are being manufactured by the Ordnance Department in its own [illegible] shops in France.

FIND HALF STARVED GIRL KEPT IN BARE ROOM EIGHT YEARS

Incarcerated in Punishment for Love Affair and Reported to Neighbors as Dead

Parents Detained After Tragic Picture of "Death on Earth" is Found by Chance Visitor.

EASTON, Md., Nov 20 Because at the age of sixteen years, Grace Marshall, a daughter of Frank Marshall of St Michaels, fell in love with a young man to whom her father and step mother objected, she was placed in a room eight by ten feet in circumference, and has remained there suffering and half-starved for the last eight years.

The girl, once pretty, was a tragic picture of suffering when removed from her home to day by order of the Children's Aid Society She is twenty eight years old, but she looked like a woman who had survived fifty years of suffering. The case is declared by the Children's Aid officials to be the most shocking in their experience

Ever since the time the girl has been incarcerated in her tiny and filthy room she has suffered agonies because of a broken leg which was improperly set the first few months she was held. In an effort to escape she leaped from the window on the second floor more than seven years ago and suffered the injury.

She was placed back in her room, the windows were covered over with heavy boards and without an appeal to a physician the limb was set in such fashion that it was four inches shorter than it had been. The day of the fall is the last she knew of open air until to day, when she swooned upon stepping out into the sunshine on her crutches.

A peculiar feature of the case is that the parents allayed the suspicions of the neighbors regarding her by asserting she had died six years ago. At the funeral of her sisters who came from as far away as Kent Island, Md., and her body was brought home around a motor boat at night. The following day there was a funeral, and the parents of the child told their neighbors the nearest of about two miles away that Grace had died of heart disease.

Heard Girl in Next Room.

The discovery of the pathetic circumstances came through information offered by the girl's uncle, John Hancock, of Wilmington, Del., who has been stopping at the Marshall home for a week. He was assigned to a room next that in which the half-mad girl was dragging herself about, and the morning after his arrival he heard her screams.

The father of the girl is known for his violent temper and because of this fact the uncle, determined to solve the mystery of the room, made no mention of what he had heard. But each night before retiring he spent a considerable time in widening a hole behind a picture, so he might eventually peer the wall and see.

As the walls between the rooms became less solid Mr. Hancock could scarcely rest such were the groans and cries that reached his ears. Friday morning he cut the last piece of mortar away and saw in the wasted figure before him the traces of the mere wisp disappearance had been something of a family mystery. He closed up the aperture under the picture and without saying a word about what he had seen, went to the Children's Aid Society and reported it

Today Miss Emma Davies, Assistant agent of the Aid Society, went with five men to the Marshall home and were soon in the rooms which had been closed to the world for years. Within an hour J. E. Fletcher Clarke, a lawyer, had obtained a writ of habeas corpus before the Circuit Court for Talbot county, and late this afternoon the girl and her father and mother were taken to the court room. The day session was adjourned, but the Judges were still in their chambers, and after the doors had been locked by the bailiff the investigation began, after which the mother and father were detained at the Court House.

Had Little Clothing

Before the girl could be taken to court it was necessary for Miss Davis to find clothing for her as she had only a patched and shabby apron There was found in her room an old fashioned straw mattress, with two ragged blankets to cover the ill and starving girl. It was so cold in the room that those who had taken off their wraps on entering the house were compelled to put them on again.

Dr Clarke, F. David [illegible] who attended the girl when she was taken to court, declared she was the most frightful being physically he had ever examined. Every wound the slightest line to her body other than that formed by skin and bone and he asserted, she had scarcely enough blood to keep her alive. She was found to have the [illegible] of six ailments due to incarceration.

Marshall was defiant when placed on the stand and the girl when called to say why they should not be committed to jail, nodded her head slowly and fell in a faint. There were tears in the eyes of Mr Hancock as he told the circumstances of which he had been [illegible] girl's "death on earth."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE GRURING VILLA.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

[Copyright, by American Press Association.]

"Whose is that villa?" asked a tourist, pointing to a residence on the Lake of Como. The person questioned replied by a story. And this is the story:

Two men stood on the steamboat landing at Menaggio, on the northern shore of the lake. Herman Trupp, the elder, said to the other, a youngster of twenty:

"Martin, I have something to say to you. You know how near us is the boundary line of Switzerland. Well, for years I have been smuggling goods over the border to the lake and once across it have had no trouble in selling them in Italy. But the government revenue boat which they have recently put on the lake turned its searchlight on me last night while pulling a boat load from shore to shore. I was stopped and arrested. I will be tried, fined and imprisoned. I made a mistake. I should have divided my profits with the revenue officers."

"Well?" said the other.

"You wish to marry Sophie Reusser, but you and she are both too poor to marry. I will enable you to wed. I have bribed the officers to give me but six months' imprisonment and to accept a substitute. If you will serve my term for me I will give you 5,000 francs."

Martin Gruring was thoughtful for a time, then said, "I will talk with Sophie about it."

"That I must forbid," said Trupp. "I would not trust a woman with such an important secret."

"But what will she think?"

"Oh, you can tell her you are going away for a short time to earn the wherewithal to set up housekeeping."

The result of this proposal was that Martin acted as Trupp's substitute in prison, first telling Sophie the story that had been suggested. He had no sooner been imprisoned than Trupp told Sophie that her lover was deceiving her—that he had committed a crime for which he was being punished. To prove what he said he took her to the prison where Martin was confined and showed her her lover behind bars. Then he held his wealth, 500,000 francs, up before her as a bait and succeeded in catching her for his wife. Soon after the marriage the couple disappeared from the Como region.

One summer an elderly American gentleman and his wife rode up in their automobile to a hotel in Interlaken, Switzerland, and called for a guide. One was introduced, and the American engaged him to conduct himself and wife to the summit of the Jungfrau. Then the landlord said that he had been a mountaineer in his youth and only one guide was needed. He would himself act as such. The party after proceeding on the mountain railway to the snow line started from there to make the ascent of the peak, the guide in front, the lady next, and the husband in the rear, all bound together by a rope.

At one place in the ascent their path led along the edge of a rock that sloped nearly straight downward on both sides. Suddenly beneath the American's feet the ice gave way and he went down. His wife fell on her face, and the guide, realizing that she would be pulled down by her husband, let himself over the other side for a balance. Suspended thus he at once set about cutting steps and soon secured a foothold. But the American was a heavy man and the rope was greatly strained. At one point it crossed a sharp rock and the efforts of the man hanging over the chasm to save himself gradually wore it thin, and at last it broke. He slid down thousands of feet below to his death.

Meanwhile the guide, foreseeing what must eventually happen, and knowing that when the rope broke the shock might dislodge the lady, had been backing the ice with his ax and climbing until he had secured a firm position. When the rope parted she fell toward him, and, catching her, he lifted her again into position. Then, when she was sufficiently recovered to stand, he cut his way up to the edge of the rock and the two began to descend. Reaching a point of safety, the lady fell in a faint. The guide caught her in his arms. Placing his flask—all guides carry flasks—to her lips, she revived and met the two eyes of the guide looking down into hers. But she saw only the horror of her husband suspended over that awful abyss. She shuddered and moaned.

"Sophie," said the guide with a world of sympathy.

There was something in the voice that, striking a familiar chord, served to turn her vision from the horror so recently experienced. She saw a young face grown to middle age. Then the expression of pain returned, but this time from a different cause. She saw the lover of her youth as she had seen him in a felon's prison. He divined her thought.

"Do you know," he said, "that I went to prison voluntarily to serve the term of another?"

"No. Whose term?"

"Never mind that. To take the place of a smuggler I was paid a sum of money which would have enabled us to marry."

Another look of infinite pain passed over her face. Instinctively she knew the story as it has been told. The guide took her by the hand to lead her down; but, seeing that she was unequal to the task, he took her in his arms and carried her to the railway station. Then, after a brief rest, they proceeded to Interlaken.

Later, as husband and wife, with the Trupp fortune they built the Gruring villa.

RENTED SCENERY.

It Was a Parisian's Idea, and It Suited the Thrifty Peasants.

M. Georges Moreau one beautiful day, in the course of a walk at Villiers-Saint Benoist, greatly admired three magnificent oaks which towered from the edge of a field.

"You'll not see 'em much more, citizen," growled the owner of the land. "They make too much shade. I'm going to cut them down."

"What a sacrilege! Cut down those magnificent trees! Better rent them to me."

"What'll you do with them?"

"I shall look at them as I pass by. Will you give to me for 15 francs a year the right to admire them?"

"Agreed! It's only a Parisian who could have such a funny idea!"

The story spread abroad, and now whenever M. Moreau takes a walk in that district the peasants hail him with: "Hey, citizen, will you rent those trees there of me? If not I'll cut 'em down. Yes or no? One, two, three"—

M. Moreau yields and pays to save the lives of the trees that delight his view. The little birds would be ungrateful did they not salute with their most harmonious roulades the preserver of their nests.—Cri de Paris.

An Expensive Lesson.

"Now, Thomas," said the teacher severely, "how many times must I tell you not to snap your fingers? Put your hand down and presently I'll hear from you."

Five minutes later she said, "Now, then, Thomas, what was it you wanted to say?"

"There was a man in the entry awhile ago," said Thomas serenely, "and he went out with your new silk umbrella."—Ladies' Home Journal.

PERSONAL.

St. Catharines, Ont.—"Two years ago I was in a very nervous, generally run-down condition, so that I awoke in the morning more tired than when I retired. The doctors thought I had heart trouble and treated me for it but I got no benefit. I heard of Dr. Pierce's remedies through a friend who had been to your Invalids' Hotel for an operation (which proved entirely successful) and I at once got the 'Favorite Prescription.' I took three bottles altogether and at the end of three weeks I felt entirely cured and have been well and strong since, without a single bad spell. I stopped taking it about three months ago and am glad to tell any one how splendidly your medicine has healed me."—Mrs. JOHN LEWIN, 53 Niagara St., St. Catharines, Ont.

The mighty restorative power of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription speedily causes all womanly troubles to disappear and brings back health and strength to nervous, irritable and exhausted women.

It is a wonderful prescription prepared only from nature's roots and herbs with no alcohol to falsely stimulate and no narcotic to wreck the nerves. It banishes pain, headache, backache, low spirits, hot flashes, worry and sleeplessness surely and without loss of time.

FRENCH PAYING MORE TO LIVE

DUE TO CONDITIONS CREATED BY WAR. ARTICLES OTHER THAN FOOD-STUFFS ADVANCE MOST IN PRICE.

PARIS, November 22—The rise in the price of various foodstuffs in Paris has several times been mentioned lately but it is not in articles of consumption that there is the greatest increase in cost, although it may be felt to a greater extent. The primary reason is certainly the deficiency in the supply of the made in Germany objects most used in everyday life, which were in ways of a cheap sort. There is not so much a want of these articles as a lack of the inferior classes in the line.

While the German and the Austrian article has disappeared it is not possible yet to replace it from either England or America for many reasons. First and foremost, the forbidden list from England now is so extensive that hundreds of categories of goods cannot be exported at all, and when special licenses have to be obtained the process is so tedious that it is scarcely possible to do business. Add to this the cost of freight and insurance from England and America and it is comprehensible that prices should rise.

France is practically thrown upon her own resources for the necessaries of private life and while so many of her industrial centres are occupied by the enemy in the North, there is a natural scarcity of skilled labour for ordinary industries because all the available sound men are mobilized and such as can be spared from the front are employed in the manufacture of munitions. Consequently, although France has all her ports free and plenty of money, all the markets of the world except those of the hostile Powers are of little avail in keeping prices at the usual levels. It is not from the same causes that are at work in Germany that the cost of living and the difficulty of procuring certain articles are increased, but the increase is very marked, and there appears every chance of it lasting until the end of the war and perhaps after.

Have a Good Complexion! The Flower of Good Health

The true secret of complexion lies in the blood. Keep it rich, pure, nutritious, and, above all, keep the system regular. No aid to complexion compares with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They tone and enrich the blood, clear the system of waste products, promote good digestion, and, in short, establish sound health, which, after all, is the keynote to all happiness and well-being. Don't delay; the charm of a lovely complexion and all the blessings of health are yours, once you employ this old-time family remedy. All dealers sell Hamilton's Pills in 25c. boxes.

DUCKING A SCOLD.

Punishment a Long Tongue Used to Win In Old England.

It is interesting in these days of woman's rights and woman's progress to conjure up a picture of a "ducking" as practiced in England at the end of the eighteenth century.

When the "scold" had been properly tried and convicted she was escorted by a crowd of her neighbors—in fact, by the whole village—to the nearest pond, and the greener and slimier the pond the better. A long plank was produced, at one end of which was the ducking stool, and in this the screaming, struggling victim was securely pinioned.

The chair end of the plank was then pushed far over the edge of the pond, and at a signal it was tilted deep into the green ooze until the scold was completely immersed.

When the dripping, half drowned woman was raised to the surface again to the jeers and laughter of the onlookers it can be imagined that her tongue wagged to some purpose. After a second dose she emerged more subdued, and after a third or fourth she was as penitent a woman as the village contained and was allowed to proceed home, a sadder and wiser woman until the next time.—London Tit-Bits.

Was Troubled With BOILS ALL OVER HIS BODY.

When the blood becomes impure the first symptoms manifesting themselves are a breaking out on some part of the body of various sorts of bad blood troubles, such as boils, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, etc.

How many times have you met a friend with a handkerchief tied around his neck, and have asked him; "What is the matter with you?" "Oh! I have a boil on the back of my neck; I guess I will have to take something for my blood."

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters, and the speediest and most thorough method of expelling all the useless and corrupt matter from the blood is to use this old and well tried remedy that has been on the market for the past forty years.

Mr. W. E. Corkerill, Colden, B.C., writes: "I was troubled with boils all over my body, and my blood was very bad. I tried all kinds of medicines and salves, but got no relief. I had to quit work, as I could not stoop to do anything. My boss told me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, after I had told him I had tried nearly everything else. I got one bottle of B.B.B., and before I had finished it the boils were all gone. It is the best blood cleanser I have ever taken. I have told several others who were suffering with boils, and they all say it is great medicine. I am forty-seven years of age, but I feel like sixteen since I got rid of the boils."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

VIOLENT ATTACKS OF DYSPEPSIA

Suffered Tortures Until She Tried "Fruit-a-tives"

ST. JEAN DE MATHA, Jan. 27th, 1914.

"After suffering for a long time with Dyspepsia, I have been made well by "Fruit-a-tives." I suffered so much that at last I would not dare to eat for I was afraid of dying. Five years ago, I received samples of "Fruit-a-tives" and after taking them I felt relief. Then I sent for three boxes and I kept improving until I was well. I quickly regained my lost weight—and now I eat, sleep and digest well—in a word, I am fully recovered, thanks to 'Fruit-a-tives.'"

To Wax or Not to Wax.

"Dear me, now!" exclaimed the nervous old lady with the seventeen packages and the parrot, bound for Cockle-on-the-Shell. "What did the guard say was the next station? Did he say Cockle-on-the-Shell?"

"Excuse me," remonstrated the girl from Girton. "You mean what is the next station. It's still a station, you know."

"You're wrong, madam," interposed an octogenarian. "What is was, isn't it?"

"Is is was?" asked the Girton girl sharply.

"Don't be ridiculous!" snapped the nervous old lady. "Was may be is. But if was was is, then is isn't is or was wasn't was." She passed her hand across her fevered brow. "If was is, was is was, isn't it?" she continued. "But if is is was, then"—

"Listen!" interposed a fifth. "Is is, was was, was was is, is is is."

"Oh, well, anyway," cried the old lady, "is the next station my station—Cockle-on-the-Shell?"

"No, madam," replied the octogenarian. "But it was. We have just gone by it."—London Scraps.

A Candid Retrospect.

"Why are you in this prison, my friend?" asked the philanthropist.

"It was the result of my own folly."

"In what way were you foolish?"

"I didn't employ the right kind of a lawyer for my case."—Washington Star.

Eating Before Sleep.

"Is it safe to eat before going to sleep?" asks Sibyl.

"Oh, yes, much safer than eating afterward, we should say! It is so hard to see what you are eating when you are asleep, you know!"

RAILROAD IRON CROSSES IS AMUSING GERMANS

It is remarkable, writes a correspondent in Germany to the Paris Temps, how democratic the corps of officers in the German army is becoming. If the war lasts another year there will not be a single trade that is not represented by one or more members in lieutenants' uniforms. And yet it is only a few years since the vanity of the military elite was grievously wounded by the presumption of one Wilhelm Voight, a cobbler by trade, who had the audacity to don an officer's uniform and play the principal role in the world famed adventure of the Captain of the Koepenick.

Another thing which is the subject of everyday comment is the excessive and rapidly increasing number of heroes. It has come to such a pass that nowadays one considers it a real distinction not to be a hero. The Iron Cross has been distributed in profusion right and left. Even Ferdinand of Bulgaria has received one. Wicked tongues pretend that one cannot escape being honoured with the decoration except by sudden death. Banterers have divided the recipients of the Iron Cross into three imaginary classes. First, the Lohengrin category, with the motto: Nur soldat du mich befragen. You should not ask me why! Then the Lorelei group whose motto is: Ich weiss nicht, was soll es bedeuten, I don't know what this means. The third class is called after the inventor of many remedies, Dr. Ehrlich, whose name in German means honest. In this category to which no serious question is made are contained all those who have really deserved their iron crosses on account of some duly recorded deed of valour.

Mgr. Canon Sheehan, the Irish-man preached New York recently in the interests of the Irish Relief Fund. It is believed they came to avoid conscription which the British Government may adopt soon.

HOW GERMAN NEWS IS SENT TO NEUTRALS

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—For the purpose of facilitating the transmission of news from Germany to the neutral world, the German General Staff has established a "Neutral War Press Headquarters," through which thirty-one recognized and accredited correspondents in future will operate.

The news bureau came in existence during the last days of October. Such members of the General Staff as have in the past been handling the material of foreign correspondents—censors, officers, etc.—now form its personnel, and are quartered in a building at Luisenstrasse 31A, a few blocks from the General Staff building.

Three times a week at most, that is to say, Major G— confers with the correspondents, explains the reports of the General Staff, and gives out such items of news as are available. In addition, there is issued, daily, a summary of the foreign news which concerns Germany and the war.

Care has been taken to include in the conferences only newspaper men who represent established and recognized papers, and, in the main, men who are permanently assigned to Berlin. The representatives of American news associations, the special correspondents of various American papers, as well as a number of Swedish, Dutch, Roumanian, Spanish, Greek, and Argentinean newspaper men, are included in the list.

The censors in the neutral press headquarters assume jurisdiction over all dispatches of a military nature, and all trips to the Front are to be arranged through the new department. Unlike the censorship arrangements in many other countries, in this case the correspondents are kept exactly informed of the "fate" of their "stories." Two extra copies of everything written must be submitted to the neutral press headquarters censor, one of these he retains for reference. The other eventually is returned to the writer, with annotations showing just what changes if any, have been made in his copy.

To the end that an exact control may be exercised over the various newspaper men, they have been asked to enter an agreement which is equipped with a photograph of the writer. A duplicate of this picture is kept on file so as to make it impossible for any unauthorized person to represent himself falsely as the correspondent of any paper. A countersigned agreement also equipped with a photograph, serves identification purposes.

The agreement includes the stipulation that the reporter will transmit information secured by him through the press headquarters only to the newspaper or newspapers which he represents; that he will submit what he writes to the censor; that he will see to it that his paper or papers do not misrepresent the contents of his articles by means of false or misleading headlines, additions, or omissions, and that he will furnish headquarters with two copies of the paper or papers which print what he has written.

It also stipulates that the newspaperman shall publish no pictures without the permission of the censor, and that he shall in addition turn in two extra copies for the files.

On trips to the Front the direction of officers in charge is to be followed unquestioningly. The correspondents must promise that they will not leave Germany before the end of the war except with the express permission of the press headquarters. This last stipulation, it is pointed out, is not intended to restrict any man from going home if occasion requires, or from making a journey to a neutral country, but merely to prevent him from doing what a few correspondents have done during the war—travelling on the strength of a passport from a neutral country from one battlefront to another, on opposite sides of the struggle.

Peeling the Skin is Better Than Bleaching

Every since the discovery that mercolized wax would absorb and remove a discolored complexion, its use by the ladies as a substitute for bleaching creams has grown rapidly. A perfect complexion can be maintained indefinitely if this remarkable substance is used. Its beneficent cleansing, clearing and preservative action is quickly apparent, and ladies who have been paying high prices for "special bleach" from beauty specialists, soon recognize that mercolized wax outranks them all. It has become so popular that it can be obtained at all druggists, who have it in original one-ounce packages. The favorite way of using it is to apply it like cold cream, before retiring, washing it off in the morning.

The saxolite lotion for wrinkles and the facial contour has also become extremely popular. One ounce powdered saxolite to be dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel. Bathing the face in this has a splendid effect in erasing wrinkles and improving contour.

HARD TO HIT.

"I'm prepared to have my character blackened in a good cause," said the candidate.

"Hear, hear!" shouted one of his staunch supporters.

"Yes, my friends, I expect a great deal of mud to be thrown in my direction."

"Don't worry about that," cried a man in the rear of the hall. "They won't be able to hit you. Nobody knows where you stand in this race."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

This model offers one of the plainer styles for a wash dress—one which is just as suitable for large women as for those who are more slender. All the lines of construction are simple. The blouse closes in front and has a wide collar edging and open neck. The sleeves follow the shape of the arm, and may be made full length or cut off below the elbow with a cuff finish.

The skirt has three gores. It may have either the raised or the regulation waist line. The opening is in front, and there is a small pocket on one side. This also may be omitted if desired.

At the waist there is a belt which is straight across the back, but divided into slashed tabs in front. A plain girdle may be substituted.

We see many of these dresses in voile. This is perhaps the favorite summer material. When used for such a style as this plain white generally forms the main portion of the dress, while some sort of fancy stripe of figured variety is employed for the trimmings, and not infrequently a deep piecing of the same is used at the lower part of the skirt.

Pongee silk is also appropriate for this style, and linen, beach cloth, gingham and the like, not to mention the numerous cotton novelties, many of them mercerized until they bear a close resemblance to silk.

The dress pattern, No. 7289, is cut in sizes 34 to 46 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 4½ yards of 36 inch material, with ⅛ yard of 36 inch silk to trim.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

BALES OF STUFF FOR CANADIANS LIE ON THE DOCKS

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The Daily Sketch recently suggested that there has been lamentable mismanagement in connection with arrangements for sending comforts to Canadian troops. Thousands of cases of woollen underclothing, socks, etc., some sent from Canada so far back as twelve months ago, are still lying at London docks, untouched save by pilferers.

"Quite a number of these cases had been pried open," says the correspondent, "and contents extracted, and dockside workers have been seen wearing pilfered articles. Apparently dock authorities can accept no responsibility. The goods are consigned to England, and with their delivery at London docks the shipping company completes the contract."

It is not suggested, he adds, that the wearers are pilferers, but goods seem to have been traded through second hand dealers in the East-end.

Sent by Individuals.

"This can't be our stuff at all," said Mrs. Plumptre, of the Canadian Red Cross Society and the Canadian War Contingent Association. "Our stuff is all sent over in bales which are numbered, and lists are sent to the point where they will be landed. Our agents meet the ship and return the lists which have the contents, and the number of goods in them. We have a record of what we have sent, and not one package has been lost. We send mostly for the sick, the wounded, and the prisoners.

"That stuff on the docks is probably shipped privately by people who think they can do better by shipping 'right through,'" continued Mrs. Plumptre, "and the addresses might have been either lost or the persons to whom they were sent cannot be found or the freight on the packages has not been found.

"Some of our packages have been delayed as much as two months in being sent over owing to the slow freight before they have been acknowledged, but eventually they are acknowledged. We couldn't lose things in that wholesale way, for everything is numbered and we get a return on every package sent. The advantage that we have in sending things is that we have people at both ends to look after shipments while private people have not."

Mrs. Plumptre said that some scarfs sent by the Red Cross Society had been held over from last year owing to so many being knitted by Canadian women, but these were now being given out. However, they would not be on the docks, as the despatch says, but they would be safe in a warehouse.

In Season.

"You ought to take Willie in hand," said the boy's mother. "This afternoon he and some other boys dressed up in feathers painted their faces a hideous red and swooped down on the boys around the block."

"What did they do to the other boys?" asked the head of the family.

"They tied a lasso around the Jones boy's heels, dragged him around the yard and threatened to scalp him. This certainly must be the silly season for boys."

"You're wrong, mother. It's merely the beginning of Indian summer."—Exchange.

GIRLS! THICKEN AND BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR AND STOP DANDRUFF

Try This! Your Hair Gets Wavy, Glossy and Abundant at Once

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you can not find a trace of dandruff or falling hair, but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp. Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and fluffy in just a few moments, and the delightful surprise awaits every woman who uses this.

JOHN WAS A CUID MAN.

She was a poor body widow once more, for she had just buried a husband for the third time. Calling to condole with the bereaved parishioner the minister touched on the many gifts and graces of the departed, and said he was of a saintly soul. "Deed it is, minister," said the bereaved lady, drying her eyes. "He was a guid man, was John; but I'm not that auld yet, an', as you say, I've still the hopes o' getting another one."

ALFONSO GIVES WAR INTERVIEW

Spanish Monarch Sees No Hope of Permanent Peace When Present Conflict is Over.

BERNE, Nov. 22.—The Argentine historian, Roberto Levilier, now in Switzerland, has given an account of a recent conversation with the King of Spain, which took place at Madrid. King Alfonso, who discussed several questions connected with the war with great freedom, said:

"Long before hostilities began it was easy to foresee the inevitability of the war, but it is impossible to form any opinion regarding its termination. Do not imagine that there will be anything like disarmament after the war. On the contrary, when this war is over, preparations for another war will be carried on more actively than ever.

"I do not think that the Socialists and the working classes of the different countries will bring such pressure to bear on their governments that the latter will be unable to create new armaments. My opinion is that the Socialists of all countries will become more and more friendly with their governments, and that their legitimate aspirations will be satisfied as a matter of good business policy. They will also develop, and they will realize that some of their leaders, who have preached universal peace, have deluded and misled them. After the events of this war the Socialists of all countries will be obliged to understand that so long as human beings retain their human instincts there can be no better protection for a country than the creation of armaments which enable it to use organized force in self-defence. And that organized force must always be ready. Facts are facts, and this earth will never become Utopia."

Discussing the effects of the war, King Alfonso said:

"Very hard times will come for South America. There will be a rush of Russians, Italians, French and Germans now living in South America back to their home lands to help in building up what the war has destroyed. There will be no emigration from Europe for some time to come. Many Spaniards who would otherwise have gone to South America will find employment in France and Italy."

WHO SAYS THE ALLIES' BLOCKADE IS A FAILURE?

Forty thousand Parisians died of starvation during the siege by the German armies in 1-70. Metz was taken only after the supply of food for army and civilian defenders had been exhausted.

From somewhere behind the recent attacks being made upon the blockade of Germany by Great Britain and France there pops up every now and then the suggestion that the blockade ought to be abandoned "because it's a failure." Is it?

Statements published by newspapers on the Spree the only evident cause for anything. Official denials are always worse than valueless. What have the newspapers of Germany been saying about the effect of the blockade?

Bitterly attacking those who have scribed as traitors in food supply, the Kölnische Zeitung declares that the rigors of the late potato harvest have become unbearable. The document is unmasking the sufferings of the people.

"Let us frankly admit," says the Zukunft, "that the German people are in distress."

The Tageszeitung takes other newspapers to task for what it terms the "freedom bordering on license" in telling of the food shortage and the increasing prices, and then proceeds to admonish them in a characteristic officially-inspired way that "it is highly unpatriotic to let foreigners believe that the starvation of Germany is possible." And, further, as if scenting approaching storm, adds: "Such manoeuvres are becoming very dangerous and might provoke a government crisis, which of all things is to be most avoided under the present circumstances."

The Frankfurter Zeitung digs even deeper into the situation. It sees a ray of hope in its prediction that hatred will nourish and sustain us and inspire us to hold on until finally we hack our way through." Hatred will prove a pretty poor article of diet, however, if the situation is as this newspaper describes it. "While our troops are fighting like the heroes of the classical ages," it says, "want is growing acute at home, where people are beginning to attribute the miserable existing conditions to defeat of the empire. We jeered at the blockade, but to-day we laugh no longer!"

Evidently the German people do not echo the cry that the Allies' blockade is a failure. Mr. Balfour seems to know what he is talking about when he says:

"It is the lull before the ebb of the tide!"—New York Herald.

A thousand useless offices have been discovered in the state of New York by a budget committee.

The United States Census Bureau reports that 1,317,398 native New Yorkers now live in other states, while only 607,616 natives of other states live here.

The report of the Superintendent of State Prisons for 1914 shows that of 4,357 inmates of four State prisons, only 521 were illiterate.

The John Street Methodist Sunday school, said to be the oldest existing Sunday school in the United States, celebrated its 100th anniversary of continuous service on Sunday last.

Walter K. Mitchell, head of the firm of Walter K. Mitchell & Co., Philadelphia, died at his home at Monaco, after an illness of several months. Mr. Mitchell was born in Glasgow in 1866 and lived in Pittsburg before going to Philadelphia in 1895, as the representative of the firm of Best, Cox and Co., mechanical engineers. In 1899 the firm of Walter K. Mitchell & Co. was formed and in 1909 it was incorporated. The firm built the power plant at the Union Station, Washington, and many other large plants throughout the country.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the prescription of this wonderful free prescription. One man says after trying it: "I was almost blind, could not see to read at all. Now I can read anything without glasses, and my eyes do not water any more. At nights they worked pain dreadfully, now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy without my glasses, but after using the prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and many others will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets; dissolve one tablet in an ounce bottle with warm water. Allow to stand for about one hour, then use as an eye wash. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should note how your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start, and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take it in time to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail if your druggist cannot.

WHAT TO DO TO GET FAT AND INCREASE WEIGHT

The Real Cause of Thinness

Most people eat from four to six pounds of good, solid fat-making food every day and still do not increase in weight one ounce, while on the other hand many of the plump, chunky folk eat very lightly and keep gaining all the time. It's all bosh to say that this is the nature of the individual. It isn't Nature's way at all.

Most thin people stay thin because their powers of assimilation are defective. They absorb just enough of the food they eat to maintain life and a resistance of health and strength—stuffing won't help them. A dozen meals a day won't make them gain a single "ounce" of flesh. All the fat producing elements of the food just stay there in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste. What such people need is something that will prepare these fatty food elements so that their blood can absorb them and deposit them all about the body, something too, that will multiply their red blood corpuscles and increase their blood-carrying power.

For such a condition it is well to recommend eating a sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is not, as some believe, a patented drug, but is simply a carefully combination of six of the most effective and powerful, assimilative and flesh building elements known to chemistry. It is absolutely harmless, yet has been wonderfully effective and a single tablet eaten with each meal often, according to reports of users, has the effect of increasing the weight of a thin man or woman from three to five pounds a week. Sargol is sold by all good druggists everywhere on a positive guarantee of weight increase or money back.

He Went Off in a Hurry

The old gentleman who was trying to learn what boys were not what they used to be, stopped on the street a small child. "Well, Tommy, you're the old gentleman. How are you?" "Very well, sir," replied the child shyly. "And how are your folks?" "What your mother?" "Yes." "Oh, she's all right." "And why aren't you at school?" "Because I've got the measles." "And what do you suppose the measles are for?" "Because I've got them." The old gentleman looked at the embarrassed little boy for a moment, and then hurried down the street, making long strides.

Czar's Troops Are Making Continued Progress Towards Teheran---Mining Operations on the Western Front Are Favourable to the Allies---German Post Entirely Destroyed by Mine Explosion

LORD DERBY FLAYS THE GRUMBLERS

PARIS, Nov. 24. (Official statement). Mining operations are being pushed vigorously by the French in the Argonne region with favourable results, to-day's official communique reports. One German post was completely destroyed in the vicinity of Bolante by a mine explosion.

A German attempt to capture one of our posts was repulsed in the Vosges, in the vicinity of Celles-sur-Plaine, the statement says.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 24. Continued progress toward Teheran by Russian troops operating in Persia is admitted to-day by the Cologne Gazette. The German, Austrian, and Turkish Ministers are said to have left the Shah's capital, evidently believing it must soon fall into the invaders' hands. The American Minister at Teheran has taken charge of the German Legation.

LONDON, England, Nov. 24. In a speech to the Stock Exchange to-day, where he was given an enthusiastic reception, Lord Derby, chief recruiter, flayed Lord St. David's and Lord Ribblesdale for their recent attacks in the House of Lords, and intimated that strict censorship should be placed on utterances in that venerable assemblage to St. David's, who said General French and staff were incompetent. He gave the lie direct, and he insinuated that Ribblesdale was a spy or traitor for giving away the Government secrets in the House of Lords. The speech caused a great sensation.

ATHENS, Nov. 24. According to Salonika despatches Premier Asquith yesterday sent to the Serbian Government a telegram reassuring the Serbians that Great Britain and France would carry out their promise to release them from the invading Bulgars and Teutons, and do so very shortly. It is said Asquith stated that the Allies were preparing surprises in the Balkans and efforts in a new direction which would surprise the world.

LONDON, Nov. 24. The view of best informed observers here now is that barring some wholly unexpected development, we have turned the corner in the war. This view takes account of possible setbacks in the Balkans and at the Dardanelles. It does not mean that any one expects the war to be over soon. On the contrary, the outlook is for a very long spell of war ahead, but (saving serious developments of an unexpected nature) with the balance steadily increasing in our favour.

ATHENS, Nov. 24. The Greek attitude towards the Allies' troops in the Balkans was the subject of further discussion on Tuesday between the Entente Ministers and the Athens Foreign Office, it is admitted in official circles to-day. No definite agreement appears to have been reached, but the general impression is that progress is being made. There is as yet no sign of any step toward demobilization. Constantine thinks it would be dangerous for the Greeks not to be prepared to resist aggression from the Bulgars.

VIENNA, Nov. 24. Bulgarian troops have occupied Pristina, and it is expected that a big battle will shortly be fought in that vicinity.

OTTAWA, Nov. 24. Sir Sam. Hughes, Minister of Militia, in returning this morning to complaints as to the manner in which returning soldiers were handled, said on both sides of the Atlantic everything possible is done for the comfort of these men, and it they have been thirsty, considering that everything is found for them at the front, they ought to have a few hundred sacred up.

PARIS, Nov. 24. As far north as Veles, the Bulgars are reported falling back upon Istip, and Veles itself is said to be in imminent danger of recapture from them.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24. War weary millions in Europe are beginning to heed the peace urgings of millions of neutrals. Mme. Rosika Schwimmer, the Hungarian peace advocate, will tell President Wilson on Friday afternoon. "The time is now ripe," said Mme. Schwimmer to-day, "for neutral powers to end the war. We women peace leaders have information, though it is unofficial, that both sides are ready to stop fighting." Mme. Schwimmer will be accompanied to the White House by Mrs. Phillip Snowden, wife of the member of the British Parliament and Henry Ford. They will present the peace resolutions adopted at the Women's Peace Congress at The Hague and ask the President to call a conference of representatives of neutral powers to frame peace proposals.

"Delegates to The Hague conference," Mme. Schwimmer said, "were generally agreed that no territory should be acquired by any power at the close of the war except on the consent of the majority of its inhabitants." She said that such a programme, if carried out, made it practically certain that Belgium and Northern France would not be retained by the Germans. Henry Ford to-day announced he had chartered the liner Oscar II as a peace ship to sail from New York on Dec. 9th, carrying American delegates to a peace conference to be held in Europe.

Explaining his peace ship project, Henry Ford said he expected it would carry the American delegates to the peace conference to be held probably in Holland. He had talked to President Wilson. "We shall try to have the men out of the trenches by Christmas Day," he said, "and end all this war and preparedness for war forever. Mr.

WOULD PURCHASE SUPPLY OF POWER AT PRICE NAMED

Hydro Power Commission Replies to the Offer of the Dickson Company of Peterboro'—Cheaper Than the Present Price

A NEW DAM TO BE BUILT

Some days ago the Dickson Company of Peterborough offered the city a supply of electrical energy at sixteen dollars per horse power, delivered at Peterborough, or thirteen dollars per horse power delivered at Lakefield. At the suggestion of a number of the aldermen this offer was submitted to the Ontario Power Commission and it is understood that a reply has been received to the effect that the Commission is prepared to purchase a supply of power at the price named. The Dickson Company claim to be in a position to supply at least three thousand horse power when a new dam to be erected at Lakefield by the Government, is completed.

The price now being paid by the Commission is eighteen dollars per horse power for about twenty-five hundred horse power. The matter will in all probability be discussed at the next meeting of the City Council.

SALE OF SEATS

Opens Saturday Next—Some Favourite Players

The sale of seats for Fiske O'Hara's engagement in this city at the Grand Opera House Thursday evening, Nov. 30, will open on Saturday next at 9 a.m.

Kilkenny, the play of Mr. O'Hara's fellow player, Augustus Patou, was written to be the most successful play in which Mr. O'Hara has yet appeared. He will sing five songs during the evening.

The scenes of the play are set in Kilkenny, Ireland, in 1840. Such attractive opportunity for very rare scenic display, Mr. O'Hara's supporting company is one of unusual excellence, which comprises the following: Mabel Leslie Scott, Mary Quinn, Mary Dewes, Anna Nelson, Lucie Bridgeford, Eliza Mason, W. T. Mercaine, J. P. Sullivan, James Lee, Walter Hoyle Duff, J. C. Mc... and W. T. Scott.

RECRUITING FOR 93rd BATTALION IS CONFINED TO COUNTY

Lt.-Col. Johnston Receives Official Notice From Col. Hemming That Peterborough City and County are Expected to Complete the Establishment of the 93rd Battalion---Boots Being Served to the New Recruits---To-day's Military News

The task of completing the establishment of the 93rd Overseas Battalion has at last been officially put up to the County of Peterborough. Yesterday afternoon Lt.-Col. Johnston was notified by Col. Hemming, the officer commanding the Third Division that recruiting for the 93rd Battalion must henceforth be confined strictly to the County of Peterborough. As announced yesterday both the Lindsay and Cobourg companies are now transferred, so that the 93rd will be in fact as well as in name, a Peterborough city and county battalion.

To-day's Orders.

The following battalion orders by Lt.-Col. T. J. Johnston, Officer Commanding 93rd Overseas Battalion, C.E.F., were read to-day:

FALSE ALARMS.

It is always well to be ready to meet eventualities; but it is not well to be shaken off our base, by false or imaginative alarms. The enterprising newspaper correspondent, has a way of making sensational "copy" out of probabilities, or even possibilities. We were put to shivering in our beds over reports of raids upon our peaceful soil by Germans and Austrians from the United States. When we had settled down to hope that the danger was imaginary, we were re-shocked by a thrillingly sensational report of a Bulgarian atrocity at Parry Sound, or the vicinity, where there are big high explosive works. There was an explosion there; but it was fortunately followed by over-imaginary outrages, and conjuring up sleep-wrecking fears, out of the most unsubstantial materials—pure accident in the process of manufacture.

EMBARRASSMENT OF RICHES.

The new Canadian war loan is likely to prove a serious disappointment. Not that there will be an unsatisfactory demand, but that an extraordinary demand will lead to the disappointment of many who apply for bonds, who will in one way suffer from an embarrasse des riches. For instance, the City Trust of Peterborough, which has placed an order for $20,000 of bonds, was told by the brokers that it was doubtful if even fifty per cent. of their application could be covered. So many banks—bursting with liquid assets—and wealthy financial institutions, and wealthy individuals have subscribed for large amounts, that the probability is that, the issue, being oversubscribed, the allotments must be scaled down to permit of the smaller investors getting their share. As these are to get first consideration, according to the plans of the Finance Minister, the "big fellows" will have to be satisfied with a smaller allotment than that applied for. It is our first national, home-brewed war, or any other kind of domestic, loan, and it appeals to the public, both on the grounds of patriotic duty, and as a good investment. It is to be hoped, though there may not be much ground for such a hope, that this loan will be all that will be necessary. Otherwise the people will have another chance to apply the principle of home patronage — keeping their money at home instead of letting the profits from its use go outside the country. The Examiner was the first to suggest the short term debenture for Peterborough, and the success of loan raised under the plan confirms the wisdom of adopting it to a larger extent than we have already done. The first domestic war loan is an elaboration of the same principle of keeping our money at home by borrowing from ourselves.

THE SOLDIER AS A MAN.

Some time ago a correspondent paid a compliment to the excellent and even exemplary behaviour of the men of the newly enlisted 93rd Battalion; and since attention has been called to the matter closer observation has justified the encomiums of the correspondent. The men continue to show admirable behaviour, and they could not have done better if they had been purposely enlisted to show an example of good deportment. Such an example seems to be needed. In other places enlisted men are not doing credit, or are not allowed to do credit, to Canadian manhood and the service. In London, Ontario, there have been disturbances that almost take on the gravity of riots. Referring to these the London Advertiser says:

> The seriousness of the clashes which have occurred between the city police and the soldiers in training for overseas service must have come home to citizens by this time. A woman seriously injured by being struck with a stone, several soldiers and policemen with broken heads, eight or ten store fronts broken in, and a large number of men filled with savage resentment—there are the results of some condition in London that is wrong. Many soldiers and civilians maintain that the root of the trouble lies with the appointment of miliary police from the home guards. Gen. Sir Sam Hughes ordered that the soldiers be policed from the home guards, revoking the previous order that each unit should care for its own soldiers.
>
> An action like this, though well intended, is sure to provoke a spirit of resentment; be considered as a slur upon the men of the battalions in training in London.
>
> There does not seem to have been any trouble under the old order that the men should police themselves; keep themselves in order. This put them upon their mettle, and was a mark of confidence they would be likely to, and did, live up to, till the order appointing military police from the home guards was issued. As well behaved as our boys are, we know they would resent an interference that would imply that they were incapable of policing themselves—making themselves behave. The London affair is a small matter, and is less of a reflection upon the deportment of the men, than a reflection upon the judgment of the military authorities. A force raised by voluntary enlistment is not like a force raised on the principle of compulsory service as in Germany. It is composed of a different class of men—men with higher ambitions; and in general it may be accepted as a fact that men who have the spirit of duty strong enough to voluntarily enlist, can be counted upon to carry that spirit into their training, and into their deportment among citizens, unless, as in the London case, lack of confidence is shown, and irritation caused by taking the question of securing good behaviour out of the hands of the soldiers themselves. Military police composed of men outside the battalion, would probably have an exaggerated sense of their authority, and probably would, to justify their appointment, be apt to magnify boyish pranks into disorderly conduct, and by injudicious interference, provoke the disorder that, with good sense and discretion, they might prevent. Technically, enlisted Canadian soldiers are under strict military discipline; but in another sense they are civilians in uniform and deserve a degree of deference due to citizenship, that by the act of voluntary enlistment, receives its highest form of expression.

THE WEALTH OF THE EMPIRE.

LONDON, Nov. 24—At a rough estimate, the capital wealth of the British Empire is £25,000,000,000 ($120,000 million dollars sterling, and its yearly income £4,000,000,000 ($20,000 million dollars). Reginald McKenna, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told an deputation in the House of Commons today.

THE MODEST SCOTCH.

A recruiting officer for the London Scottish visited a beer house in London from the other day and asked for volunteers. "Now, men, if you like," said the manner, "but I'm afraid you won't get much of a thing here. We have very few Scotchmen on the staff, and I suppose you'll have to do as Scotch Officers." replied the recruiter. "each of you has a Dutch Manchester Guardian.

PARCELS POST.

The Canadian Grocer attacks the parcel post system, partly because, as it asks, it is so conducted as to greatly benefit mail order houses, and partly because it is not paying its way. It says:

> Those who use it are the ones who should pay for it. Eventually the cost is to be met by an extra expense on the people of the country as a whole. It is not paying to-day something about 40 cents on the dollar and not a benefit.
>
> The parcels post system may materially operate to the advantage of small order houses, possibly because they have not been able to make a study of its advantages and to take these advantages to their own account. That is a matter of opinion, and probably a matter of fact. But from an immediate point of view at the present time it would be better from a financial point of view at the government could withdraw the parcels post service and leave it to be carried by express companies rather than to continue the present deficit.

A Glance At The Mightiest Fleet Ever Concentrated Upon The Bosom Of The Sea

A veil of diaphanous haze hung on the near horizon as, at the head of a green bay, we embarked on board the Janet Geddes, and through the mist islets, rocks, and ships loomed large and mysterious. The Janet Geddes is a drifter from a little fishing town in Banffshire, transformed into one of the multitudinous subsidiary vessels that serve the great fleet that guards the heart of the Empire. In their hundreds men who followed the herring shoals have left their nets, and now patrol the seas—sweeping mines and hunting submarines. Numbers of boats of all sorts are engaged in this hazardous work, and their crews, erstwhile peaceful toilers of the deep, are now swept into the eddies of war. But they have not parted with their serenity nor lost their cheerfulness. The sense that they are in the forefront of the battle has transfigured them.

From the polished deck of the Janet Geddes (for the drifter is now as spotless as a yacht) we surveyed the mightiest fleet that has ever been concentrated in the history of the world. From the mouth of the bay along the shore extended a long line of Dreadnoughts. As we steamed slowly past, name after name, redolent of all the romance of great battles won long ago, leaped up before our eyes. The colour of the ships blended with the colour of the waves, and the great guns pointed in every direction. Now and again, through an eddy in the mist, other ships came into view. And if one turned a field glass on the haze, lo! through the veil still more ships rose before the vision. And beyond the Dreadnoughts we passed the cruisers and beyond these the destroyers, low and narrow and evil-looking, with every grace architect to speed. Further still came a heterogeneous mass of ships that baffle all description—great liners, yachts, trawlers, tramps, drifters, colliers, hospital ships with the Red Cross blazing on their sides, motor boats, and fishing boats with the brown sails not yet wholly superseded. They were there in clusters in groups, in units—each with its own place in the mighty organization which feeds a fleet in being.

And over all this great host of ships here brooded the spirit of ceaseless activity. Motor boats went rushing past on their ceaseless errands; brown sails tacked in the breeze, heavily laden ships unloaded their cargoes into lighters; and there broke ever on the ear the ceaseless boom of the guns. For there, in the sweep of the guarded sea, gun practice never ceases. A trawler tows a target along and each ship trains its gun on the shadowy submarine as it passes, and all round it the sea spouts up as the ball hisses into the waves. And out to sea through the boom there come and go the sentinels of the Fleet, for this mighty fleet is ever in action. And through the air from all the seas there come ceaseless messages to the room where the brain of the Fleet controls it all. It is that telegraphy of the air which has transposed the centre of the world's mightiest Empire. That centre is no longer London—it is now in the circuit of lonely isles, desolate and rock-bound. Did the nerve-centre here fail—the Empire would pass as the baseless fabric of a dream.

From every funnel of Dreadnought cruiser, and destroyer there rises in to the warm, still autumn air the smoke lazily curling. For in every ship the fires are burning ceaselessly, and at a moment's notice the Fleet can sweep out to sea. That smoke rising up incessantly from Dreadnought and cruiser is the security of the Empire. It is the power to smite instantly, and that power has saved us. When we read of thousands of square miles in the East overwhelmed by the enemy, and of the rush of the torrent of devastation over plains and villages and cities, the heart is apt to be discouraged. But there can be no discouragement for him who sees this. For this power has captured the seas of all the world, through it the ends of earth pour their riches into the midst of our streets; by the might of it a whole continent has been delivered from the withering blight of Germanic culture, and save for a force shut in and imprisoned by sea in East Africa the might of Germany is crushed in Africa. From the great North-West to the long wash of Australasian seas not an inch of territory is left to that culture which trod the Cross under foot that it might dominate the world with the mailed fist. And the heart of that power which has wrought the deliverance of the world is here.—Norman Duncan in the "Scotsman."

COURT OF REVISION HEAR ASSESSMENT APPEALS

The Court of Revision met last evening to consider a number of appeals respecting the special assessment made to pay the cost of constructing pavements on parts of Charlotte, Simcoe, Aylmer, Water and Brock streets, as local improvements. The following appeals were heard:

W. H. Hamilton claimed that he was overcharged one foot on 188 Simcoe street. Judgment—assessment was reduced by one foot and one foot added to the lane and charged to the city.

Dr. McCulloch, that he was overcharged at 312 Charlotte street. Judgment—Dr. McCulloch's assessment was reduced to 40 feet; Mr. White's increased to 39 feet and 10 feet charged to the city for a lane.

The case of Mrs. S. Jinks, who claimed he was overcharged at 58 Charlotte street was laid over until Thursday afternoon.

Case Was Adjourned

W. H. Bradburn said he was overcharged at 167 Brock street. Appeal was dismissed. The appellant also said he was overcharged for property on Simcoe street. The case was adjourned.

T. McCuaig said he was overcharged at 215 Simcoe street. The case was adjourned.

Mr. Jos. Wearing claimed that Mrs. E. Patterson was overcharged on Brock street. This case was also adjourned.

J. W. Butcher said he was overcharged on 136-138 Brock street. Judgment—five inches was added to W. H. Bradburn at 140 Brock street and seven inches added to George street and charged to the city.

C. Westlake said he was overcharged at 189 Brock street. The case was adjourned.

T. Brightman claimed that he was overcharged on Aylmer street. The appeal was dismissed.

Asessment Transferred.

D. H. Burritt said he had sold his property on north side of Brock street to Dr. Hammond. The assessment was transferred to the latter.

D. W. Dumble said he was overcharged on north Simcoe and east of Water street. The case was laid over, charged at the corner of Hunter and Water streets.

The following other applications were dealt with:

J. H. McClellan applied for remission of income taxes for 1914. This was granted to the extent of $17.55.

E. Bartlett applied for remission of business taxes for 1914-15. The taxes will be remitted providing Mr. Bartlett files a declaration that he did not receive any benefit from the practice of his profession in these years.

Splendid Discipline of Troops When Torpedo Hit Tranpsort

LONDON, November 24—Details of the perfect discipline maintained by the Australian troops when the transport Southland was torpedoed some time ago, have been forwarded by Captain C. E. W. Bean, to the official press representatives with the Australians at the Dardanelles.

The transport was carrying men to Lemnos when a torpedo tore a hole 40 feet by 12 feet on the port side. The men were turned out immediately, ran straight to their proper places, and lined up. Officers were shouting "Steady boys, that's the one thing, steady."

The Southland was listing heavily to port, but afterwards the list changed with a lurch to the starboard while the men stood there under perfect discipline. In the forward part of the ship they could see the hatch broken in and water washing about the dark space in the hold, with the bodies of some of their comrades who had been killed by the explosion floating in it.

"It's bad luck that two and a half months in the desert should end like this," said one.

"Are we downhearted?" called another.

"No!" they all shouted.

"Are we afraid to die?" called another.

"No!" they shouted again.

"Are there enough boats for all?" one of the men asked his officer.

"I don't know," was the reply. "The best thing we can do is to cut down some of these horse boxes in case they are necessary."

So the party set to work, night and main, chopping down part of the temporary fittings. Meanwhile some of the boats were launched, but owing to the haste one of two were overturned. The order came: Six men are wanted to pump into the sea and right an overturned lifeboat. Six men came forward, instantly dived over, righted the overturned boat and then baled her out.

By 1 o'clock the last boat had left containing the general and his staff. During the long wait the men amused themselves by singing songs. There remained on the Southland the Captain, the officers, some of the members of the crew and several Australian officers, an dmen, who volunteered to stoke the ship and bring her to port. The vessel eventually reached Mudros.

HOW GENERAL LINTON DIED

One of the officers who saw the incident states that while General Linton was seen in the water swimming someone shouted to him. "Well, how are you getting on, sir," he answered. "I am doing well, save the others first."

The rescuers unwittingly continued to pick up others leaving Linton, who was a strong swimmer among those the last to be picked up. When taken from the water he was alive but much exhausted and he died soon afterwards from the shock and exposure.

LONDON'S HOME GUARD.

Over-age Men in Financial District Organize Splendid Corps.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 23—The Home Guards, composed of brokers, clerks, agents and other men exempt from active service working in London's financial district showed themselves a well trained and physically fit body of troops at a recent inspection.

When the civilian troops received permission from the War Office to organize, they encountered ridicule in many quarters. But they bought their own uniforms and went to work with a will. Every afternoon squads drilled in the courts and buildings and in the public parks, and on Saturday afternoons and Sundays the men either went to the country to practise trench digging or harden themselves with marching. Volunteer corps have sprung up all over the country, and could face a hard campaign as well as or better than the second line troops in conscriptionist countries. Its members are generally over forty years of age.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

ENGLISH BILLIARDS ARE GROWING IN POPULARITY

NEW YORK Nov 24—One of the surprises of the early billiard season not yet fairly under way is the readiness for English billiards to have developed Two years ago, when Melbourn Inman made his first visit to this country to play his game against William Hoppe, English billiards was practically unknown to American players They had certainly had seen men of English or Canadian birth toying with miniature pellets on a huge stretch of green cloth in the few public rooms where one of those monstrous tables was kept for the benefit of these chaps But the refinements of the French carrom game with its American variations had seemed sufficiently satisfactory to them, with an occasional venture into pocket billiards or "kelly pool."

Inman's manipulation of the balls with his skill at losing hazards, rather appealed to them, particularly as Hoppe also showed considerable skill at it and privately indorsed it as a game that was full of possibilities Three cushion carroms had too many stretches of dreariness without a count, to satisfy the desire of players looking for something novel Rather hesitant ventures at the game, which combined pool with billiards over a vast acreage, with its novel possibilities or combining carroms with "losing hazards off the red or white" rather caught the fancy of the novices Withal, there was a chance for constant scoring by twos and threes at a time and so the resultant string of buttons that looked good to the player. There were new and unexpected combinations to be mastered in the playing of the cue ball and in making and avoiding pockets, which seemed to excite the curiosity of the player.

The result has been a revival of the game, both in the public rooms and in the clubs, until now it is quite the thing to take a turn at English billiards for an hour or two after dinner An instance of the growth of the game is that at one of the largest rooms in the city where there was one table two years ago there are now six, and the proprietor says they are the busiest tables in his rooms with frequent "waiting lists" for turns at the tables. Pool players have taken a particular fancy to the new-old game and are developing into the best hands at it, as it does not seem to interfere with their stroke so much as with that of the man who has been in the habit of playing carroms exclusively, with the necessary daintiness of stroke the 18.2 game calls for.

As one result of this increased playing of the English game more interest is felt in the contests for the Dewar trophy, which is competed for each Winter by bona fide amateurs, a trophy presented to America a couple of years ago by Sir Joseph Dewar of England in order to develop American players at the sport which has always been a fad of this Englishman. This competition is a mid-Winter event open to all players in the United States Billiardists expect to see the largest entry ever had for the competition this year.

POE BROTHERS GOOD FIGHTERS

Of course Princeton misses Johnny Poe. Although he was graduated 20 years ago, because it was Johnny and his brothers Edgar Allen, Nelson, and Arthur, who made Princeton football famous. Although his playing weight was only 140 pounds, and he was never fortunate enough to run single handed a Yale or a Harvard game, Johnny Poe was always a little error, and constantly worried an opposing team with his speed and grit and natural ability to bob up at the right place at the right time to do the unexpected things He played on a team of giants and against giants in all the big games and the bigger they came the better he liked them Newspaper accounts of the games in which he played at half back in the early '90s are full of references to his great runs and headlong plunges into lines where the men averaged 200 pounds between tackles For instance in reporting the Yale game on Thanksgiving day, 1892, on Manhattan field an writer said

"Johnny Poe, wearing a shin support, who up to this time had not handled the ball but who had taken lively part in the interference, was now called upon to carry the leather. He plunged headlong through Yale's centre and only stopped wriggling when Cline towards the Yale goal when still seven Yalers and a few other 200-pounders set upon him."

At another point in the game the same writer on Johnny Poe grab the ball and almost get away while the crowd yelled "A touch down. Johnny! Give us a touch down!" This gritty 140-pounder tried hard enough but again the 200-pounders interfered and "jumped on his neck."

He was always "up against a tough physical proposition," but kept right on without wavering until the odds were three or four to one against him, and then he squirmed a little before he finally gave up

And when he went to fight for the Allies after an unusual life of adventure following his graduation, it was Johnny Poe's lot still to be up against heavy odds He was as cast to the Black Watch Regiment which saw hard fighting from the first, and finally was practically annihilated No news has been received in this country about Johnny's last hours but there is not a doubt in the world that he stood up nobly to his task and did the very best he could to the last.

The four Poe brothers were at Princeton over a period of 10 years from 1889 It was Arthur Poe, following Johnny at the university, who had the distinction of having beaten Yale single handed It was at Princeton in 1898 that he grabbed up a fumbled ball just as it looked as if Yale would score and ran 95 yards to a touchdown and the six points that won the game The accounts of that struggle say that he got an almost unbelievable lead of 10 yards instantly, and never permitted a man to get any nearer to him on the long run to victory He was a hero on the spot and it seemed to bother him because of his great modesty To congratulating friends he invariably said, "Oh, all I had to do was to pick up the ball and sprint"

FAST TENNIS PLAY DUE TO HARD COURTS

A comparison of the Eastern and Pacific Coast styles of tennis play discloses a marked difference, which has attracted widespread attention this season because of the series of victories of William M. Johnston, Maurice E. McLoughlin, John C. Strachan, Clarence J. Griffin, and other Western exponents of the game.

Up to 1909 the tennis public was educated in one universal tennis style. This was the deliberate, conservative, backcourt game, with occasional incursions to the net. Originally this style, adopted at the time by all Eastern players of ability, came from an imitation of such English exponents as the Doherty brothers. It was natural that the Eastern States players should fall in line with adoption, because of their intimacy with the English game, due to their witnessing the Davis Cup matches, and also in competing against the invading foreigners in large sectional and invitation events

So the English style was adopted by the Eastern players, and because they constituted the larger majority it was considered universal up to 1909. This was the year in which the new tennis style was inaugurated before the public, introduced by the leading internationalists, McLoughlin, Bundy, and Long Other exponents of the same style followed in the trail of this famous trio between 1911 and 1915, including R. L. Murray, Elin Fottrell, and Strachan

It was evidence that the influence of the English game had not played a significant role in the development of the Pacific Coast style The contrast of their unique attack as opposed to the Eastern or English style was proof in itself. The important question was then as to what was responsible for this development For nobody who saw these men in action could help but wonder why their tactics were of the opposing variety, as compared to those of the English and Eastern exponents For this very reason McLoughlin was the subject of much interesting sporting gossip about the Wimbledon courts in the summer of 1913, when the Comet was instrumental in bringing back the Davis Cup to the United States

To avoid a too detailed discussion, the reason for the dissimilarity of style can be grouped under two headings: One, environmental conditions of play; two, influence of the so-called Eastern and Western atmosphere For in contrasting these two styles it is just as essential to portray the difference in temperament as it is critically to analyze their playing abilities

In deducing a logical reason for the prevailing back court style of the Easterner and his English cousin, we must account for it in their adherence to turf court play For nothing is more conducive to baseline playing than a grass court First of all, the ball takes a slow rise from off the turf, permitting the stroker to take an advantage-position for a perfect manipulation And then, again, the uncertainty of one's footing on turf prevents a player from forcing the net position in too aggressive a manner This has special reference to English players who, forbidden to use spikes, is likely to be fearful of aggressive tactics, and so prefers to remain along the baseline Consequently playing on turf courts was accountable on good share for the prevailing back court game of the English exponent and his Eastern States cousin

In like proportions the playing conditions of the Californian asphalt court are accountable for the development of the new tennis style ushered in by McLoughlin, Bundy, Strachan Murray, and Fottrell The aggressive net play and highly developed break service, with speed as a dominating note throughout; this is the California playing form that took the East by storm in 1909 and caused a revolution in style

The dry atmosphere of California has rendered asphalt surface impracticable The upkeep of turf has been attempted, but with deplorable results The Californian owes his hard hitting aggressive game to the fact that he has been forced to play on a hard surface For one thing in direct contrast to turf playing, it would be folly to attempt to play in the back court on asphalt The ball rises too quickly off the hard surface for a deliberate manipulation This fact has been instrumental in developing the forehand drive of such players as Champion Johnston and McLoughlin Knowing the uselessness of a setting game against the advantage of the ball-striker's turf and to take every advantage of the court surface, the Californian has developed as the safest game for success

The strong exist service is the most exacting factor in the Californian's game which was developed to its present degree on the asphalt For the object is to take the ball on the volley whenever possible Other strokes that are part of the Californian's game are the half-volley and the lob

S. O. E. Benevolent Society To Discontinue Paying Insurance On Members Who Enlist

Applies Not to the Ordinary Members But to Those Who Are Insured for $1,000—Ruling of Supreme Executive—107 Members Will Receive Full Benefit of Their Policies.

TORONTO, Nov. 23—That no longer will death claims be paid on the lives of members of the Sons of England Benevolent Society who enlist is the ruling of the Supreme Executive of that Order. It was conveyed to the subordinate lodges last October that all beneficial members enlisting thereafter must come under that section of the constitution which provides that military duty is an extra hazardous occupation and that such risks cannot be carried.

"War claims are not ordinary claims," said Supreme Secretary J. W. Carter, "and no provisions has been made for them in the constitution. You will understand that we have two classes of members, ordinary and insurance. The ordinary members participate in sick benefits and funeral funds. The insurance members, in addition to these benefits, are insured for $1,000 each. An ordinary member who enlists does not forfeit his benefits in any way; and an insurance member who enlists does not forfeit any of the benefits accruing to an ordinary member, but when he enlists he immediately comes under that class of risks which are specified in our constitution as extra hazardous and cannot be carried.

Is An Old Rule.

"It is an old rule, and has been accepted although perhaps not read, by every member who joined. Quite a large number of our members enlisted prior to the ruling of our supreme executive in this matter. The strictly legal view is that, upon facts, this throws them out as beneficial member, but we are not taking that view, and it is to provide for the situation thus created that our levy of $1 per member has been made."

The levy of $1 per member is being made to raise $35,000 to assist in guaranteeing payment of 107 policies, who had previously enlisted before the order was made, and to look after the widows and orphans of those totally debarred from receiving insurance. Of this amount about $18,000 has been collected.

Mr Carter said that the 107 members would receive the full benefit of their policies, but the other 25 who have enlisted since have their policies lapse completely.

Carried at Nominal Rates.

"That expresses our attitude," said Mr Carter. "Although it is quite within the power of our executive to refuse to pay any death claims on the lives of enlisted men. As I have said, we take a lenient view of the extraordinary situation which has arisen, and it must not be forgotten in connection with the cancelled policies, we have carried the risk at very nominal rates.

"The relief fund created by the 1c a day levy will be applied not only to struggling to position members of any relative to the paying of war claims, but more particularly to aid the widows and orphans of soldiers according to their needs. The executive has power to make certain levies on the whole membership in case extraordinary benefits and in practically every case the benefits paid will exceed the premiums already paid in on the cancelled policies. Five beneficial members have already died in military service."

Other Societies Pay Policies.

Similar action is being considered by fraternal and benevolent societies which are taking the stand that only a person who was a member prior to the outbreak of the war, but who has since enlisted, will receive their policies. The policies remain in force, without any increased premium, while in some cases the organization is taking the responsibility of keeping up the premiums, as well as paying the policy to the family in case the member is killed.

The Ancient Order of Foresters are continuing all their old policies on the terms existing before the war, but in case a member goes to war and is not able to keep up his payments, the organization keeps the policy from lapsing. In case of death during the war, the amount of the policy less the amount of premium the organization has had to pay will be turned over to relatives. No new war risks are being taken on, although for a short time after the outbreak of the war new risks were accepted upon payment of an additional $50 premium.

The Ancient Order of United Workmen have not increased their rate, the policy continuing upon the same terms as existed before the war.

The Independent Order of Foresters have not made any change in their policies or premiums, though new war risks are refused.

In the case of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, the grand lodge keeps up the policies of all war members, regardless of whether or not the men are able to do it themselves. In all other ways the members get full benefits, the policies being paid in full at death. As about 1,000 men are now in the army, no new war risks are being accepted.

With the Canadian Home Circle the onus falls upon the policyholder or his relatives to keep up his policy upon the old terms. If the policy is allowed to lapse, the holder then becomes the loser. No new risks are accepted.

The Royal Templars of Temperance are carrying their members upon the same conditions as before the war.

Syndicate of Kings in the Balkans Formed By The Kaiser Before the War

By DR. E. J. DILLON.
Foremost European Authority on Balkan Politics.

ROME.—The Balkan Peninsula will remain the centre of political interest until the danger of further treachery from the neutral states there is definitely dispelled.

I write with first hand knowledge of the facts, not all of which are yet realized, or even known. For example the circumstance is not yet apprehended, nor generally believed, that a league of monarchs was prearranged by the Kaiser and was completed in principle before the war broke out, and that the original conception was more comprehensive than the final achievement.

This falling off between intention and realization was due in great part, not to resistance on the part of the monarchs tempted, but solely to the veto of certain of their influential subjects.

The promptitude and thoroughness of Germany, who forestalled the unsuspecting Entente Powers, formed a syndicate of kings, and she began by obtaining assurances that none would harm her while some would help her.

Teutons Knew the People.

But with this success the Teutons were not contented, for they knew what slippery customers the Balkan people are and how little worth stipulations have in their eyes if their interests beckon them in an opposite direction.

Thus judging them according to their own standard, Germany successfully strove, by co-operating military action with diplomatic pressure, to keep them to their engagements with the Kaiser and detach them from their liabilities to his actual or potential enemies.

Acquaintance with this plan, with the methods whereby it is being realized, with certain of its results and with the mental and normal fibre of the personages experimented on, has emboldened me to affirm ever since the war began that the Entente policy of chivalrous kindliness and delicate tact was wholly displaced.

For the only principle respected by the Balkan personages in question was the putting of interest before duty, and the only way by which the Entente could at any time thwart the Teuton schemes was by deploying greater military and naval forces than theirs.

To-day more peremptorily than ever, is the adoption of this method postulated by events. The assurances by benevolent neutrality lavished by Premier Skouloudis are less solemn and less binding than the formal treaty obligations assumed by all Greece towards Serbia.

There are far less solid than the promises made by Venizelos, who was backed by the King, the Cabinet, Parliament, and the nation at the time, but who is now being systematically disavowed.

Skouloudis is not the spokesman of Parliament or of the nation. He is the mere nominee of a field marshal of the Prussian army, who is systematically doing violence to Greece's constitution and sacrificing her national honor in order to redeem his promise to his Prussian brother-in-law.

Skouloudis will disappear into private life to-morrow, but King Constantine, who represents no national dynasty, will remain. Venizelos who was laboriously educating the anarchic Greek people and who possessed the confidence of the nation, is to-day a mere private individual.

How can the Entente States accept the assurances, however solemn, of any Minister of Cabinet appointed by the King for the special purpose of carrying out Germany's designs against themselves?

Venizelos Out of Power.

If there were any truth or honor left in the governing circles of Greece Venizelos and his colleagues would not be in power, but there is none.

The King is determined at all costs to create a Germanophile parliament hostile to the Entente powers.

Yet he expects these Powers to rely upon the oral promise of a Provisional Minister that the allies need apprehend no stab in the back. Venizelos himself is alleged to have replied two days ago to a number of merchants of Athens and Piraeus, who exhorted him to allow his party to take an active hand in the elections:

"I am of the opinion that abstention is advisable under the prevailing circumstances, for even if the Liberals won the electorate campaign and were returned to Parliament in a majority, they would still find it impossible to realize their programme."

That means that even if the Greek people again announce their determination to do their duty and eschew disloyalty the Field Marshal of the Prussian army would none the less execute his brother-in-law's designs.

Effective constraint, in Greece's interests and our own, is the only method that can now be employed with any hope of success.

MASON AND DIXON LINE DATES BACK 151 YEARS

In 1763, 152 years ago, two English surveyors, Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon, began the surveying of what came to be known as the Mason and Dixon line, between the states of Pennsylvania and Maryland. This line afterward became famous as the supposed boundary between the North and the South, or between the free and the slave-holding states.

The line was surveyed at the instance of William Penn and Lord Baltimore. The surveyors were three years in making the survey from the northeast corner to the foot of Savage mountain. In 1767 the work was finished from the latter point to Virginia, now West Virginia. The line is said to have cost $300,000 and the surveyors employed an army of 100 axemen and a road of 30 feet wide was cut through the dense forest.

A mixture of sand and lime stones of light brown grayish color was brought over from England to mark the line, and these stones were set up at intervals of a mile wherever it was possible to erect them. They weighed 600 pounds each, and were 4 feet high. On some parts of the line the country was so rugged that mounds of dirt and rock had to be substituted for these stones.

To-day the Mason and Dixon line has been resurveyed and remarked and divested of its chief erroneous traditions. In 1849 a revision of the line was made by a joint commission from Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware, and it was then found that the change involved by the correction amounted to less than two acres, which were added to Maryland. In 1903 Pennsylvania and Maryland each appropriated $5,000 for restoration of the line.

Many of the peculiar English stones had disappeared and the commission made an exhaustive search for them. The identification was an easy task, for on breaking them the stones emitted a sulphurous odor. So thorough was the search that some were found in people's cellars. One was taken from the wall of an old stone church, where it had done service for many years. In the places of those which could not be found, new stones of marble were set up.

On every fifth stone the coat of arms of William Penn was cut on the Penn-sylvania side, and on the Maryland side the escutcheon of Lord Baltimore was placed. On the other the monogram of P. and M. was cut. The stones are now set so near one another, even in the mountain regions that the traveler may stand at a stone and see the next one.—New York World.

IN DREAD OF CROUP.

Every mother dreads croup unless she knows about Dr Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Given in frequent small doses at the first indication of trouble, this treatment loosens the cough and affords relief and comfort. Its use should be kept up until the child is entirely recovered.

The Weekly List For The Tobacco Fund

The following is a list of the amounts remitted during the week ending November 13th. It will be seen that the total is $4,031.11. This provides for approximately 16,000 packages of tobacco and cigarettes, but the number of men at the Front is 80,000, and that number is increasing every day. Contributions will be received at any bank or post office and by a large number of newspapers throughout the Dominion.

Communications should be addressed to the organizing secretary, Mr. Francis R. Jones, at the offices of the Overseas Club, Windsor Hotel, Montreal.

WILL PRESENT NEW PLANS OF SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANT.

Deputation Going to Toronto on Friday With Hope That Board of Health Will Sanction Proposed Location.

What is expected to be a final interview with the Provincial Board of Health will take place in Toronto on Friday when Peterborough's plans for the location of the sewage disposal plant will be presented.

Ald. Green has authority to take with him whatever deputation he deems necessary, but Mayor Butler stated to-day that he did not think a large number was required. In fact it is likely that Ald. Green and City Engineer Parsons will make the trip.

The Mayor and his associates hope that the new plans will be accepted by the Board that the city may close the last of the preliminary details in connection with the sewer construction.

G.T.R. Gatehouse Was On Fire

About $15 Damage Done to Shack at Bethune and Sherbrooke Streets

The Grand Trunk gate-house at Bethune and Sherbrooke streets, suffered damage to extent of about fifteen dollars when a fire broke out there last night about 10:40. It is thought the fire was caused by a defective stove becoming overheated. The fire brigade was called and used ten gallons of chemicals in subduing the flames. The damage done was to the interior.

KAVALA VALUABLE TO THE ALLIES

"Back of Kavala," says a Bureau of Geographical Information, "where the Allies are reported to be landing troops for their operations in the Balkans, lies the historic battlefield, Philippi, upon which Brutus and Cassius lost all hope of inheriting the power of the great dictator whom they had slain. Kavala is a Greek port much nearer to the Bulgarian borders than that of Salonika, and one of the most convenient stations available to the Allies for the basing of a campaign against southern Bulgaria, with the objective of the Oriental Railway through Turkey-in-Europe.

"Kavala port crowns a promotory reaching into the bay. It is an insignificant little village, with a population of scarcely more than 5,000. The island of Thasos lies before its bay to the south and east. This island, also is a hilly vantage point for the guarding of the entrance of the harbor against attack by hostile ships. Altogether, the present favorable war-time geographical advantages of this obscure little town may conspire to give it back a greater fame than it possessed in Greek and Roman lines. Mehemet Ali was born here in 1769, which event is the greatest in the village's history of 1,000 years until the present coming of the French and English. In the country surrounding Kavala is grown some of the finest Turkish tobacco that finds it way into fancy cigarettes into the markets of England and America."

WELL TREATED IN HOLLAND

Interned British Soldiers Have Plenty of Food, Etc.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 22.—A correspondent writing on life in the internment camp at Groningen says.

"I have just returned from visiting the men of the Royal Naval Brigade interned at Groningen. They are entering on their second year of confinement with a vigorous and healthy camp life well organized.

There are, of course, grumblers and "slackers," as there must be anywhere in any part of nearly 1,500 men; and these write letters home telling of their miserable plight and of the inadequacy of their food is not inadequate, and the men their way into print and annoy the rest of the camp even more than they do the Dutch authorities. The food is not adequate, and the men are comfortable. So far from demanding sympathy, the camp takes pride in its independence and self-sufficingness. Parcels of "comforts" and other gifts from friends outside to individuals are a private matter and are undoubtedly always welcome; but for the camp itself, as a unit, it has nothing to ask of England. Old books or newspapers for its library and reading-rooms are acceptable; but, beyond that, its only appeal to people at home is: "Keep your money and help for the men in the firing line. We're alright!"

The University of Groningen has generously thrown all its lectures open to members of the brigade who care to attend. There are numerous classes at the camp for teaching languages and so forth as well as frequent lectures; and the Royal Society of Arts and London Chamber of Commerce have both made arrangements for examinations to be held at Timbertown, at which successful candidates will be awarded the appropriate certificates. The Government of Holland has, moreover, promised men to go away from the camp to take regular employment elsewhere, provided that in so doing they do not compete with native labor.

Hetherfield fellow exclaimed Jackson, on seeing him "what's worrying you?" "My wife and I had an argument the day before yesterday," said McSimpson "and nothing I can offended her so much that she hasn't spoken to me since." "I say," cried Jawkins, with pitiful eagerness, "would you mind telling me what you said?"

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr Hughson Johnstone, painter and decorator, 518 College street, will be answered on Wednesdays — questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, sign writing, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating may be sent to the Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

A Reader.—I read in the Examiner that a cheese box would make a nice tray to carry things from the kitchen to the dining room. I think it would be very nice if it was painted. Would you mind advising me as to the shades.

Ans.—I am glad to be a help to you. Cheese boxes are principally made of strips pine. Paint and varnish paint it. But rather prevent as it leaves. Smooth it with sandpaper, then dust thoroughly and stain with the following. Boil linseed oil and turpentine in equal parts, to which add Burnt Sienna until the desired depth of shade is obtained. In mixing always speak of English prepared Oxhams. Use to stretch the colour. Use a short one dinner. Apply it liberally all over stand an hour or so then wipe off which will bring out the grain. Let stand 24 hours and paper evenly with 00 sand paper, then shellac it one coat, and stain (or new varnish) two coats with some good exterior varnish. When thoroughly hard give it a very little rubbing with finely ground pumice stone and water on a piece of sacking or jute. Don't rub it much as the continual washing and using will soon attend to that.

Wondering Wife, Peterborough, Ont.—I bought a new oatmeal marble wall paper and followed the little paper instructions carefully about shading the paper, etc. But in one double I found after hanging, two shades, both in the one roll. Should the firm stand the loss, as it spoils the whole room? It is right in a premium place?

Ans.—I was last inclined to write her at the "would like" signature, of what I thought, must be the question of a wondering paperhanger, especially as it savors of familiarity of terms and handwriting of a male. Still, he may have written it for his wife and so I will answer it. But let me at once emphasize that the prerogative of the column is not that of a mutual advice instructor, to the trade-man or artisan but rather to be of assistance to the inexperienced, as the heading suggests. If after hanging two strips out of the same roll you discovered two shades, I would say to start in your room evidently either over-stretch the paper on the paste board, or did not when hanging it. It would be almost impossible to have two shades in one roll of pigment.

Whitefield, Lansdowne, Ont.—I will feel very grateful if through your very instructive "Arts and Crafts" column you will tell me how I can discover whiting or whatever it is that white lead is adulterated with. I am sure your many readers will welcome the information.

Ans.—I am neither a chemist nor an analyst and so cannot oblige you very much, but I do know what white lead is not adulterated, and I think I can safely say no lead is adulterated with whiting. I also know that many painters will not agree with me, space will not permit my reasons. Suffice it to say whiting would cost as much to

"THE TERRIBLE THREE" MADE REPORT TO THE MAYOR

When Ald Dobbin welcomed the delegates to the Boys' Conference last week, he asked them to inspect the city and report to Mayor Bulley if anything was found unsatisfactory. The Terrible Three reported for the delegates as follows

Peterborough, Nov. 22nd, 1915.

To the Mayor of Peterborough

We were told by your good friend, Mr. Dobbin, who so eloquently and elegantly expressed himself at our meeting on Friday night, that if there was anything in the town that we weren't entirely satisfied with, we were just to inform your Lordship, and you would have it attended to at once.

Now, the first thing is the turning of the lights out at half past ten. This we do not approve of. And when the sidewalks are taken in at half past eleven, we would advise you to have them well washed and cleaned before they are put out for the morning's work. We do not like the way the policemen all stand around one corner and do their knitting. He blocks the traffic, and we feel greatly embarrassed when passing. The street cars or at least boxes, should be made about six inches shorter, so you could get more of them on the tracks, and accommodate the people much better.

Now, kindly have all these attended to, and we will report again on our next trip to your fair city.

TERRIBLE THREE.

dents of Peterborough County, the others coming from points which, although close at hand, are not in the county. It is estimated that the city of Peterborough itself has so far supplied from 65 to 70 per cent. of the men.

Major Eastwood, who has charge of the work of examining recruits, has so far received no official word of the proposed modification in the sight test. If the standard in that respect is made less exacting a large number of men turned down before will be available.

Pte. Toume of No. 2 Platoon, A Company, 93rd Battalion, has been sent to Nicholls Hospital.

Another employee of the Examiner joined the 93rd Battalion yesterday in the person of Palmer Wylie of the bindery staff, who has been attached to the signalling section. He is the fifth Examiner employee to don the khaki recently, the others being Lce.-Corp. Albert Stanley of the 93rd, Gunner Fred Primeau of the 33rd Battery, and Ptes. L. Callendar and Maurice Dunkley of the 59th Battalion.

Revised figures in regard to recruiting in Peterborough show that seven per cent. of the city's population has joined the Colours. The average for Canada is two per cent. Fourteen hundred men have enlisted here since the war broke out. Allowing that 200 of these came from other points in the district, that number is balanced by the large number of Peterborough's sons serving in other units. Not only is the percentage of recruits high, but the calibre of the men has been uniformly good throughout.

Says the Kingston Whig: Captain S. J. Gilmore, of the 16th Regiment Picton, has been appointed to a captaincy in the 93rd Battalion now organizing with headquarters at Peterborough. Captain Gilmore is Deputy-Reeve of Picton and his firm, Gilmore & Ward, is a large business concern.

The Kingston Whig says: The wonderful recruiting ability of the officers of the batteries at the Drydocks Barracks has brought a good and a bad effect. There are so many men quartered there that space for sleeping accommodation is lacking and will continue to be until the drafts that were authorized on Saturday are sent overseas.

There are 220 men on the top floor, a great number sleeping on the floors. Men are now at work erecting 100 new bunks and this will help to relieve the congestion on this floor, but results will continue to pour in as they have been doing, owing to the attraction of the batteries for recruits and in the near future they will again be crowded before a draft can be sent overseas.

There are about 270 men in the 34th Battery, but this large number are to a great extent being taken care of as the 34th has the largest floor in the building.

The officers, formerly used by the Cereals Ltd., and now by the battery medical officer and supervisor of training, are on the second floor, that was used by 32nd Battery, and there are 217 men in this battery including the thirty-nine men whom Capt. Stothis brought down from Ottawa on Monday.

This is almost the first case in record where units have been able to recruit men faster than they can be trained and sent overseas. The normal strength of a battery is 142 and all of these batteries are over that strength. It also speaks well for the reputation of the batteries throughout the country by the way the men are coming in.

136th—Col. Smart, Port Hope, Ont.

130th—W. H. Floyd (R.E.), Cobourg, Ont.

140th—G. Fowler (2nd Battalion), Sussex, N.B.

141st—Campbell (62nd), P.E.I. Highlanders.

Capt. Burnham, paymaster, Capt. Browning of Lakefield, Lieut. Cook, Lieut. McNabb of Peterborough, Lieut. Quackenbush, and the machine gun officer, Lieut. Crisp, all of the 93rd Overseas Battalion, will report here on Saturday night, arriving on the evening train.

Owing to the fact that a number of the men were off on sick leave from yesterday's inoculation, and that uniforms had not all been issued to the new recruits, Mr. Fred Roy has postponed the photographing of the 93rd for the Examiner Christmas number until Friday.

The Belleville Ontario says: James Cecil Lardie who today joined the 80th Battalion, was a member of the First Contingent. He went to the front with one of the Canadian Highland Regiments and saw service, being wounded by the Huns and stabbed with a bayonet. He was discharged for the time being as unfit for service and returned to Belleville. However now having recovered he is able to join again.

Private Lardie was six year in the United States Army.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—In answer to suggestions in some quarters that Canada could afford to pay her soldiers at even higher rates of pay than now obtains, attention was drawn today by the Militia Department to the following comparative rates of daily pay for private soldiers allowed by the principal countries: Canada, $1.10; Great Britain, 25 cents; Italy, 20 cents; France, 5 1-2 cents; Japan, 2 1-2 cents; Russia, 1 cent; Germany, 10 1-2 cents; Austria, 2 1-2 cents; Turkey, [illegible] cents.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—A hundred and forty-five battalions have so far been authorized in Canada for overseas service. Of this number, 90 battalions have been fully recruited. Forty-seven batteries of artillery have been authorized, and forty-three raised. In regard to mounted troops, twelve units have been raised. At the present time there are, roughly, 67,000 troops in France, 55,000 in Canada, and 50,000 in England.

Ten of the new regiments are being raised in Toronto, three in Montreal, two from Hamilton, two from Brantford, and the rest are scattered. Not all of those listed as heading the regiments will go overseas.

Major Burritt arrived here last night and has inspected the contracts which have been finished at the Armouries, and also decided upon a number of changes made necessary to accommodate the office staff of the 93rd Battalion. One of these was to place the quartermasters' office of the 57th Regiment at the disposal of the 93rd paymaster. Majors Cameron and Eastwood will use the room just north of this room as their headquarters. It is not likely that the men of the 93rd will go into barracks until December 1st, one week from today.

Boots were issued to the new recruits of the 93rd Battalion today and the twenty recruits now wearing mufti will soon be equipped in the regulation uniforms. No. 6 Platoon is now nearly at half strength, and the men are picking up the drill rapidly under the instruction of Sergt. Clarke and the watchful eye of Company Sergt.-Major Calladine.

Capt. Muir, who has been on duty at Lindsay in connection with the 93rd, has returned to Peterborough for duty here.

The 93rd Battalion marched down to the Exhibition Grounds this afternoon to practice extended order drill. Exhibition Park was placed at their disposal by the president of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

A letter from Gunner Stanley Taylor to his mother, Mrs. Taylor, Mark Street, Ashburnham, this morning, states that the Peterborough boys in the draft from the 33rd Battery who have been at Ross Barracks, Shorncliffe, since reaching England, had been pretty well scattered to various places. Gunner Taylor and fifteen other boys have been sent to Westerhanger to fill a gap in another battery. Gunners Orme Girven, Osborne Doupe, and Milford Hardhill are qualifying for non-commissioned officers. Gunner Norman Laing has been sent to France, and Gunner Howard Chrowe is a signaller.

"CABIRIA"

A Great Military Film Spectacle

At a time when this country is talking of military matters it should interest all to see how battles were fought in the third century, B.C. In "Cabiria" the colossal photo-drama by Gabriele D'Annunzio, which is to be shown at the Grand Theatre, beginning Thursday, Dec. 2, the terrific naval battles, which for limitless ferocity and desperation, thrill the beholders with mingled awe and horror, awe at the massive agencies of destruction employed, horror at the relentless carnage which takes place. There is the destruction of the Roman fleet, which is realistic beyond description. The ships are burned to the water's edge and death is dealt out unsparingly. Similarly with the battle scenes where the combatants give and take no quarter. Hannibal's crossing of the Alps is wonderfully impressive as a military achievement. This operation is assigned to be one of the greatest of all time. It is interesting to contemplate the enormous material he availed himself of in that memorable attempt to penetrate the very heart of the Roman Empire. Men and animals were sacrificed recklessly and indiscriminately, crossing the Alps alone having cost him a thousand of his soldiers.

Machinery to sort oranges and lemons with running water, the idea being that sound fruit will sink and frostbitten float, has been patented and dedicated to the public by a California inventor.

Parry Sound Explosion Not Bulgarian Atrocity, But Process Accident

The alarming story that was telegraphed to Toronto papers and appeared yesterday regarding a tremendous explosion at the auxiliary plant of the Canadian Explosives Company, Parry Sound, with the inference that it was the work of Bulgarians, of whom many are employed in the vicinity, is not so alarming when the "shot is let out of it," as was done by Rev. Father Kelly of Parry Sound, who was in the city today.

He tells an interviewer: There was an explosion at Nobel [illegible] from Parry Sound, where the drying kilns of the company are located. These drying kilns consist of thousands of wood as chimney pots [illegible] as possible, but buttressed [illegible] with timbers, between which [illegible] placed to take up the shock in case of explosion, and prevent it spreading destructively in a horizontal direction. In case there is an explosion, the whole force is [illegible] and the other drying kilns and their contents are not so much endangered. The work of drying the cordite is a very delicate and dangerous operation and the least carelessness [illegible] permitting overheating to [illegible] produce an explosion by the action of the kilns themselves without any assistance from Bulgarians or anybody else.

Father Kelly says that one of those who knew was one of the explosion was caused by [illegible] and not by any outside agency. That is normal [illegible] the danger is [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH AND THE SINGLE TAX

Enjoyable Lecture at Murray Street Baptist Church Last Night Under Auspices of Men's Association.

FOR THE RED CROSS

Mr. Howard S. Ross, K.C., a prominent member of the Bar of Montreal, delivered a lecture last night in the Murray Street Baptist Church on "The Christian Church and the Single Tax," under the auspices of the Men's Association. Mr. F. C. Reid occupied the chair, and before Mr. Ross was called upon to speak, Miss Ida Sanderson gave a piano solo, and the Misses Harts-horn sang a duet.

Mr. Ross began his lecture by stating that the question of Single Tax was a moral issue. It was an attempt to get back the natural rights. These are four in number, the right to produce, the right to exchange what is produced and the right to enjoy the fruits of one's labour. Progress will be made when the "Christian Church" takes its place in the Single Tax movement. Politicians cannot be trusted. Neither can the Orthodox pulpit. Commercialism in our colleges be trusted. Boards of Governors are generally conservative. Textbooks historical. Only Lean scientific. Professor Leacock, a new professor at McGill University has made a strong appeal to young men to study living issues. On one occasion Professor Laski was delivering a lecture in Winnipeg when a man in the audience asked him if he allowed his students to study the works of the Socialist Karl Marx. Professor Laski said: "No, I have them study the proceedings of the meetings of the Manufacturers' Association."

The churches should take the lead in the study of living issues. The man who can master theology should make a first-class economist. The men in the pew should assist the clergy to grapple with these issues. In the past the opponents of what Single Tax have done too much scolding. What is needed is persuasion. Riches are only immoral with the rich man when he understands that his riches create inequalities. The trouble is that not many of the men who write on these questions are Christians. No man is a true Christian who would not suffer in order that a reign of justice might be brought about. He is true to God who is true to man.

Single Tax will come when other fundamental reforms have been introduced. Two of the fundamental reforms most needed are, first, Direct Legislation and second, Proportional Representation. Direct Legislation has been introduced in a number of the American States, and Proportional Representation is working to advantage in Belgium, Tasmania, and South Africa. The Home Rule Bill for Ireland contemplates the principle of Proportional Representation in order to give to the rights of the Protestant minority. The principle of Proportional Representation should be worked out first in municipalities and then extended to the State as a whole.

Mr. Ross then traced the progress of the principles of single tax, which he preferred to call the taxation of land values, has made in Canada, and indicated what might be expected in the future. As to Socialism he said that while he did not agree with Socialists generally he could not help but like them, and he told of Joseph Fels says that he, a Jew, had been converted to Christianity by Keir Hardie, a Socialist.

Mr. Ross's lecture was greatly enjoyed by the appreciative audience, which crowded to hear him. After he had finished speaking a hearty vote of thanks was moved by Mr. Harding and seconded by Mr. Wearing. The meeting closed with the National Anthem. The proceeds of the lecture are to be devoted to the Red Cross Funds.

ABUSED PRESIDENT, MUST FIGHT FOR KAISER

BERLIN, Nov. 22.—An emotional problem playlet was staged at the American Embassy to-day when a weeping, hand-wringing German woman unsuccessfully pleaded with "the villain"—Ambassador Gerard—to give back her hyphenated husband's passport. The Ambassador had confiscated it because of its holder's remarks about President Wilson and the American Government, which Mr. Gerard construed improper, insulting and verging upon treason.

The man is a naturalized American, an engineer, 55 years old, who has lived in Germany for the last ten years. He came to the embassy to get a passport but, as he was said to have admitted having made the offensive remark about the President, his passport was revoked in accordance with the State Department's instructions.

The woman made a tearful appeal to Mr. Gerard's "humanity," after her plea for "justice" had made no impression, and finally begged the Ambassador to restore the passport for only eight days in order to enable her husband to go to Holland and back. "Our whole existence is at stake," she cried. "You are ruining us."

The Ambassador finally fathomed the reason for the woman's agitation. Unable to prove his citizenship, her husband could not escape serving in the German army unless the Ambassador would give back his precious paper and save him. The woman was finally gently, but firmly, ushered out by the attendant, but without the passport.

DOURO COUNCIL

Minutes of the council meeting held at the town hall, Douro, on Monday, November 22nd.

Council met at the town hall, Douro, on Monday, November 22, at a call from the Reeve.

All of the members were present.

On motion of M. D. Kennedy and George Hamilton, the reading of the minutes of the last meeting was dispensed with.

This meeting was held for the purpose of granting a sum equivalent to one mill on the dollar on the total rateable property in the township of Douro, or approximately eight hundred dollars, to the Red Cross Society and the Patriotic Fund.

Some of the members of the council were in favour of this method of raising funds for these purposes and others were of the opinion that the amount should be raised by voluntary contributions. There being a large number of the ratepayers present who discussed the matter quite freely, and so strongly expressed themselves in favor of raising money for these societies by voluntary subscription it was decided that before levying a tax of 1 mill on the $ to make an effort to get the feeling of the ratepayers in general throughout the township by taking an open vote on the matter on Monday, Dec. 6 from 2 o'clock to 6 p.m.

Moved by George Hamilton, seconded by H. Malones, that a meeting of the ratepayers be held in the town hall, Douro, on Monday, Dec. 6, from 2 to 6 p.m., for the purpose of ascertaining by vote the general feeling as to the best method of raising funds for the Red Cross and Patriotic Societies, i.e., whether by a tax of one mill on the $ on all rateable property or by voluntary contributions.

The following accounts were paid: John Dan Leahy, two thirds value of sheep killed by dogs, $8; Michael Sheehan, half cost of wire fence, $9.0; Laward Swift, one half cost of wire fence, $7.50.

Moved by P. Mooney, seconded by Geo. Hamilton, that the council adjourn.

KENNEDY SHOWS WRECKED.

Many Lives Lost in Georgia—Wild Animals Roam Woods.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Nov. 23.—A death list of twenty-seven as a result of a head-on collision between a Central of Georgia passenger train and a special carrying the Carl L. Kennedy Carnival Shows, fourty persons are in hospitals. Fred Kempt, a showman, and his wife, were pinned beneath a pile of flaming debris and burned to death while scores looked on powerless to aid them. Their three-year-old child was saved. Tigers, lions, panthers and other wild animals, liberated by the wreck, took refuge in the nearby forests and are being hunted by armed men.

The Kennedy Shows occupied the Midway at the Toronto Fair.

Suited to A T.

"Want a job, sir?"

"Yes, sir. I am looking for a place where there is plenty of work."

"I am sorry, but there would not be enough work here to keep you busy an hour a day."

"That's plenty of work for me, sir."—Houston Post.

The League will be only too pleased to turn over the yarn. Yarn can be procured at Mrs. Joe. Knox, 481 Gilmour street or at Mrs. Mowat, 377 Aylmer street.

The League would also appreciate any donations in money to help buy more yarn, and can assure the givers that their money will be well spent in the supplying of comforts for the boys at the front.

WEDDING BELLS

WHIBBS—PAQUETTE.

At eight o'clock this morning in St. Paul's Church, Toronto, Miss Maud Paquette of this city was united in marriage to Mr. George Whibbs of Peterborough. Miss Emma Paquette was bridesmaid, and Mr. Thos. Whibbs of Midland, was best man. The ceremony was performed by Dean Hand.

CARPENTER—GORDON.

The marriage of Miss May Gordon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Gordon, 180 Perry Street, to Mr. John Carpenter of Toronto, was solemnized in the Church of the Sacred Heart by Rev. Father O'Brien at 7.30 o'clock this morning.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a navy velvet gown, with sable trimmings, and black and white picture hat, and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid, Miss Veronica Gordon, wore a navy suit and carried pink chrysanthemums. The groom was assisted by his brother, Mr. Wm. Carpenter, of Toronto.

The bride being a member of the choir, Mr. John Armstrong played the wedding march, and Miss Kaye Master-son sang "Ave Maria."

After the ceremony a reception was held and luncheon was served at 11.30, at which were present Rev. Father O'Brien, Rev. Father McCauley and near relatives and friends of the family. The rooms and table decorations consisted of white chrysanthemums and green foliage. The gifts to the young couple were many and useful. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a beautiful pearl crescent.

Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter left on the afternoon train for their future home, 14 Sudbury Avenue, Toronto, amid the congratulations and good wishes of a host of friends.

LAPP—KELLY.

The marriage of Miss Estelle Kelly, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Kelly, 374 Downie street, and Mr. Edward S. Lapp, of St. Mary's Ont., and formerly of this city, was solemnized at St. Peter's Cathedral this morning at seven o'clock, Rev. Father Kelly, of St. Peter's Church, Parry Sound, and brother of the bride, officiating. The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Annie Kelly, while her brother, Mr. Egbert Kelly, supported the groom. Owing to recent bereavements in the family, the wedding was of a very quiet nature.

Ford said he was not quite decided as to the method of procedure, but at any rate the effort would be made. "The movement should have the support of every wife and mother in the world," he said.

Assurances of support have been received from many peace advocates in European countries at war and in peace.

LONDON, Nov. 24. The Teutonic Allies are face to face with the Serbs' Northern army to-day. The final fight evidently is at hand. Official news from Vienna tells of the Austrian capture of Mitrovitza. Berlin Foreign Office announces Prestina's occupation by the Germans and Bulgars. The two towns are twenty miles apart, Mitrovitza at the north-west and Prestina at the south-east end of the Kossovo Plateau, the famous Black Birds plain. On this plain, stretching from one town to the other, the Serbs are entrenched. Whether the invaders have come up with the Serbs in sufficient force yet for an immediate attack is not yet known. It may even at to-day that there can be a delay of but a few hours before the main battle begins.

LONDON, Nov. 24. Premier Asquith told the House of Commons to-day it had not been considered advisable to place all the land forces on the Western front under one commander. This means that General French remains in command of the British forces.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24. A graphic story of a naval battle off the coast of Trinidad on the morning of August 28th, 1915, was told by Captain Fritze Falkenberg, of the steamer Berwind, when a German commerce raider, "Capt. Hatalgar," was sent to the bottom by the British cruiser Carmania. The Berwind escaped an attack, he said, because she was flying the American flag, although she was carrying supplies to German warships. Capt. Falkenberg was one of the most important witnesses in the charge that the Hamburg-American officials illegally supplied German warships from American ports.

LONDON, Nov. 24. A Reuter's message from Athens says the Entente Ministers presented a collective note on Premier Skouloudis, "demanding" that Greece define her attitude. The Cabinet was immediately called together. After the Council meeting, the Greek Ministers said the situation had been cleared by the presentation of the note, which gave the Government definite information in regard to what was expected by the Allies. These demands were not exceeding than had been expected. These Ministers added that Greece would not have refused requests for assistance of the Serbian army in Macedonia.

Terrific French Bombardment of Bulgars at Prilep

Advices From Bulgarian Sources Say the Bulgars Are Doing Their Best to Hold Ground But Allies Are Daily Increasing in Strength

DRIVING BULGARS BACK

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 25.—A terrific French bombardment of the Bulgars at Prilep is progressing today. The French artillery was detached from the Vardar River forces to help the Southern Serb army in its drive toward the north again. The fury of the Serbian infantry rush was driving the Bulgars backwards in the open field, but heavy guns were lacking to dislodge the invaders from the entrenched positions. Advices from Bulgarian sources say the Bulgars are doing their best to hold the ground they gained during their first rush into Serbia, but the Allies are daily increasing in strength. It is believed in Bucharest that the southern invaders will remain on the defensive until success of the Teutonic northern campaign allows the Austro-Germans to come south to help them.

Lord Kitchener's Journey Spurs Greece to Grant Concessions to the Allies

Threat to Withdraw Privileges of Trade With Great Britain is Believed to Have Resulted in a More Conciliatory Attitude on the Part of King Constantine.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Announcement by the Foreign Office that there is no blockade of Greece is generally believed to be the diplomatic way of informing the world that King Constantine, realizing at last the tremendous naval power of the Quadruple Entente, and continued by Lord Kitchener's weighty warning that the Allies are sure to win and that Britain will soon have an army of four million men, added to fourteen million men for Russia, France and Italy, has decided to grant all the demands of the Allies except intervention in the war, an act that, nevertheless, will be forced on Greece by Turco-Bulgarian capacity.

Despatches from Athens agree that the Serbians have resumed a serious offensive on Kossovo plain, that the Bulgars have been badly beaten by the French; that the Italians are landing in Albania, and that Russia has concentrated a well equipped army of 250,000 men in Bessarabia and that when the force is ready to strike Roumania, engaged by the tyrannical methods of Germany, will join forces with the Entente.

Instead of attempting a general blockade of the Greek ports the Allies have, according to a statement issued by the British Foreign Office to-day, withdrawn, or threatened to withdraw, the special privileges which Greek commerce has enjoyed since the outbreak of the war.

What these special privileges are is not specifically stated, but, as an example, Greece has been allowed to draw her supplies of coal from Welsh collieries. To do this Greek merchants requires special permits, as the export of coal from the British Isles is allowed only under a special license.

There are many other commodities the export of which is permitted only to certain countries. Invariably when orders have been issued against the export of such commodities Greece has been among the countries excepted. Now, unless she concedes the demands made by the Allies for assurances for the safety of their troops in the Balkans, Greece will be struck off the list of countries which have these privileges.

While the less vigorous attitude on the part of the allied governments has caused some dissatisfaction in quarters where stronger measures are advocated, it has quieted the situation, and the belief is now prevalent that Greece having been impressed by Lord Kitchener's visit, and the threat to its commerce, will concede the demands.

SOLD HIS BLOOD TO PAY FORGERY

NEW YORK, November 25. Henry Troller, chauffer sold one pint of his blood for $15 at a transfusion operation in the Presbyterian Hospital, in order to pay back part of the proceeds of a cheque which he was accused of forging last July. No one at the hospital knew that he was a fugitive from justice.

The detective had lost all trace of him. With the $15 in his pocket and his right arm in a sling he communicated with Miss Tina Seitz, telling her he was sorry she had been forced to pay the cheque, but that he had earned some money at last, and would make a payment. Miss Seitz told the detectives and ten an hour they locked him up at police headquarters.

Troller is twenty six years of age and has a wife and two children. He said that he owed $50 last July and that his creditor threatened to have him dismissed as a chauffeur if he did not pay it. To save his place, Troller said he forged the name of George Gerber to a cheque made out to himself. The amount was $36.75. He paid the debt with the money. Miss Seitz, a bookkeeper who cashed the cheque, had to pay it.

Dr. Caldwell of the Presbyterian Hospital, took the blood from Troller, and injected it into the arm of Miss Sarah Wilson.

WEDDING BELLS

CHITTICK—LITTLE.

The marriage of Miss Ethel Margaret Little, daughter of Mr. Robert Little, South, and Mr. Leslie Claire Chittick, son of Mr. John A. They left on the afternoon train for Toronto and Detroit. On their return will reside in Smith.

How to Make Your Hair Soft, Fluffy, Beautiful

[illegible] old-fashioned home recipe, consisting of bay rum, Lavoris de comfort and menthol crystals, is one of the best things to use for the hair and scalp. Get from any druggist six ounces of bay rum, two ounces of lavoris de comfort and one half drachm of menthol crystals. Dissolve the menthol crystals in the bay rum and then add the lavoris de comfort. If you prefer your druggist can mix these ingredients for you. A teaspoonful of your favorite perfume may be added if you like. Apply by putting a little of the mixture on a soft cloth. Draw the cloth slowly through the hair, taking just one small strand at a time. This cleans the hair and scalp of dirt, dust and excessive oil and makes the hair delightfully soft, fluffy and lustrous. To keep the hair from falling and make it grow again rub the lotion briskly into the scalp with the finger tips or a medium coarse brush. Apply night and morning. Try the simple remedy for a week or two and see if it does not do away with the hair dandruff and "split hairs." If your hair is dry, this recipe should keep it soft and glossy. If your hair is oily, use it every other day. Keep up the treatment regularly for a number of weeks. If your hair parting and follicles are very dormant this treatment should stimulate them, and thus make new hair grow and gradually thicken the hair over the whole scalp. Various coal tar preparations contain lead acetate which is poisonous and dangerous, and should be avoided. The simple recipe given above is entirely harmless.

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by its use flood the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefit.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Creole's Story.

SHE sank down on a locker, hiding her face in her hands. The pitiful dejection in her attitude compelled me to bend over her in quick sympathy.

She looked up into my face. "I am not afraid. Only I cannot bear the thought that you doubt me, even so little. I know I have been indiscreet that you might justly deem me an adventuress. But I am not, Gordon Craig; I am a good woman left to fight alone, and I must have your faith or break down utterly. Do you believe me all I have told you that I am really the wife of Philip Henley?"

"Yes," I answered through clinched teeth, struggling to control myself.

For a moment she sat in silence, and, while I dared not look at her, I knew her eyes were upon my face.

"Then I will do whatever you say, go wherever you tell me," she protested gravely. "I cannot decide for myself. I am too confused to think clearly, but I trust you as a friend.

I drew aside the curtain draping one of the after ports and peered out, eager for anything to distract attention. Through the clear glass I could see the curve of shore line forming the little cove. Just within the foam of the breakers a half dozen men were munching a small boat. I started at them an instant before realizing what it meant. Then I dropped the curtain.

"The mate is coming aboard," I said swiftly. "You must go to your room; here is the key; lock yourself in and only open when you hear my voice."

"And you"—

"I must take care of myself, don't worry about me."

Without so much as a glance at our prisoner she opened the door and with a swift look about the outer cabin, disappeared.

I must keep Henley concealed and silent until darkness rendered our escape possible. In order to accomplish this it would be necessary to prevent either the steward or the mate from entering the after cabin. All peril from the negro I dismissed quickly, confident that his knowledge of my standing on board would impel him to accept any explanation I might make. But with Herman the situation was not so clear. Whether or not the captain had informed him that I was a volunteer on their lawless expedition I did not know. I had him placed as a gruff, hard fisted sea dog who would strike first and investigate later, one in dealing with whom either diplomacy or force might prove equal failures. Yet I possessed this advantage: I could deal with him alone. With but two watch officers on board only one at a time could leave the deck, and Broussard, I felt assured, had no privileges in the captain's cabin. From what I knew of Henley I doubted if even the first officer felt privileged to invade the privacy of his chief without some special reason. There was discipline on board, strict discipline. There had to be, to control such a crew.

As I lifted the helpless captain into his berth, his eyes glaring at me in impotent rage, my ears could distinguish the sound of oars as the small boat rounded the stern of the Sea Gull. Much as I despised the fellow, I hated to gag him, yet our safety depended on his silence, and I dared not neglect the precaution. Even as the boat grated along the side I stepped forth into the main cabin and sat down to wait. To my surprise and relief, it was Broussard who came down the companion stairs, driving the steward before him.

"Var for you loaf, hey?" he snapped fiercely. "By gar, I teach you! I work four seek-hour, an' nodding to eat. You say ze captaine send you? Bah! Eet vas not so nevaire! Vat you have, hey?"

The negro mumbled something through thick lips, and the mate gripped him by the collar of his jacket, shaking the fellow as he might a dog and hurling him half across the deck.

"Sacre! I keel you for 5 cent! Queek now—jump! Put all on right way, by gar, or I show you! Here, you—ze brandy furst!"

The steward slunk into the passage leading to the pantry, and the creole, turning, saw me.

"Ah, m'sieur, I saw you not. Pardon ze roughness, but I lose ze temper, m'sieur."

"That is not to be wondered at," I answered, affecting good humor. "Has the first mate been ashore?"

"Oui, m'sieur—asleep in the sun, I bet you! Bah! Any man could watch the sea from the cliff. But job not need ze furst officer. Sacre, but 'tis a dog's life at sea!"

I nodded my head, too busily engaged with my own thoughts to give much consideration to his troubles. Still, this situation as revealed by Broussard's complaints would afford us a respite of at least four hours. If this was the creole's watch below, then Herman would keep the deck. Even lying there at anchor those fellows would not leave the crew alone. There was too much at stake, and, besides, there must still remain a lookout ashore. However, it was a relief to know that the German had nothing of importance to communicate to Henley, no occasion even to come below. Broussard sunk back into a chair, watching the frightened negro hurry back and forth. At last, satisfied the everything available had been produced, the former strode across to the table, jerked out a chair and waved his hand toward me in invitation to join him.

"The lazy dog! 'Tis likely all you will get, m'sieur. Maybe you eat with me, hey? Or would you wait for ze capitaine?"

"I'll take pot luck with you, Broussard," I agreed genially, speaking loud enough so the negro would overhear. "I've got to get accustomed to camp fare and am hungry enough to begin. Besides, Captain Henley is laid up in his berth with a sick headache and doesn't wish to be disturbed. He told me to tell you, Louis."

"Yes, sah. Shall Ah make you sum coffee, sah? Massa Broussard he don't nebber drink none."

"Yes. And, by the way, Louis, take a lunch into the lady. Fix up something neat if you can, and let me know when it is ready."

"You know ze capitaine before maybe?" Broussard asked.

"No," I answered, wondering what he could be aiming at, but willing to give him a free rein. "But he seems to be a pretty good fellow."

"You think so—hey? Maybe so while he get you with heem. Den he ze devil, I know, m'sieur. I see heem for long while on ze ocean, zat what you call' out."

"What has he done to you?" I asked surreptitiously.

"By gar! What!" flung up at the recollection. "Get out o' here, yer roon!" turning fiercely upon the steward, and then leaning across the table, lowering his voice, which yet trembled with passion. "Sacre, m'sieur, it was I do his dirty work five—seek—year. He no sailor, but I sail ze sheep for him—see? Tree, four time I sail ze sheep, an' he make se money. Vat he geef me? Maybe $100 ze month—bah! eet was to laugh. Zen he fin' zis Dutch hog, Herman, an' make of heem ze furst officer. I not like eet. I tells

"Never!" he went on, barely pausing for breath. "I show ze half breed. You see heem mother—she mulatto. Ze dog!"

"How do you know that?" I asked, surprised.

"I listen, I hear ze talk, but I say noddings, m'sieur. Vat I care while he treat me right? But now I show heem vat I know. He not lord eet over me ven ol' Sallie vas his mother—by gar, no!"

"Sallie! You cannot mean that mulatto woman back on the plantation?"

"Sure! The ol' judge was his father."

The whole thing came to me in a flash as I stared across at the mate, who scarcely realized yet the revelation made. He was brooding over his wrongs and how he was to be avenged.

"By gar, I forget," he said softly. "You vas after ze monies, too, hey? Bah! Eet make no difference vat you know. He haf you here all right, var' you keep still or"— And he drew the back of a knife across his throat. "I vonder he not keel you furst, m'sieur. Maybe he use you an' then have you shot in ze south. She Coughed Day and Night.

Mrs. Fred. Fear, Cedarville, Ont., writes: "I am writing you this letter telling what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. Two years ago I had a terrible cold. Every day I could not speak above a whisper. I coughed day and night. One evening I was so bad I went down to our storekeeper, and when I went in he said, 'You better get something done for that cold of yours.' I told him, as well as I could, that I had just come to get a bottle of the best cough medicine he had. He told me Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was the best he had, and said for me to take a little of it before I left the store. I took some, and in fifteen minutes I could speak as well as ever. I think 'Dr. Wood's' is the very best on the market."

That persistent cough must be gotten rid of immediately, for if it hangs on to you it may develop into some serious lung trouble, such as bronchitis, pneumonia and perhaps consumption.

Get rid of it by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for twenty-five years. A remedy that cures when all others fail.

When you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get what you ask for as there are many imitations on the market.

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 35 cents.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid—as a well known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from the overwork, they get sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys feel and act like lumps of lead, and you have stings pains in the back, or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night, when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach, or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning, and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. The famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending urinary and bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

The Best Treatment For Constipation

The Experience of One Who Knows and Places Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills First

It is not difficult to secure a medicine that will effect movement of the bowels. To cure Constipation and the conditions which arise from it is another matter.

Constipation of the bowels is usually preceded by torpid action of the liver. Hence it follows that if Constipation is to be cured the liver must be set right. And here lies the secret of the success of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They awaken the action of the liver and insure a good flow of bile, which is nature's cathartic. The liver, kidneys and bowels are invigorated and regulated, and the troubles with the digestive system disappear.

Mr. H. M. Bell, Innisfail, Alta., writes: "For some considerable time I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I have obtained through your firm. I suppose during my life I have used nearly all the best-known pills as I have been subject to Constipation and digestive trouble. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I can honestly say that of all the pills I have tried nothing has suited me better—so gripeless, action always assured, and fine for the kidneys. This is how I have found them after a thorough test, and you may use this statement if you like."

This letter should convince you of the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but there is nothing like personal experience. If you do not feel like risking 25 cents for a box, write to us for a free sample box, mentioning where you saw this advertisement. Put this medicine to the test when you have indigestion, constipation, biliousness, backache or kidney derangements. The results will soon prove to you the superiority of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

OUT ON BAIL.

Strange Things to Which Running Over a Cow May Lead.

By HELEN MARSDEN QUINN.

[Copyright, by Associated Literary Press.]

"I'm going to fall in love with that girl!"

It was at a New England summer resort, and "that young man from Boston" had been there less than an hour when he had his first view of Miss Minnie Haddon. Young men from New York and other places had arrived a week ahead of him and uttered the same words, but as Paul Dillon didn't know it he was not dismayed.

To fall in love properly with the handsomest girl at a summer resort there should be a formal introduction, and a formal introduction may be hard to achieve under certain circumstances. There must be a mutual acquaintance to bring it about. Miss Haddon's mother was a widow and an invalid and kept to herself most of the time. Paul Dillon looked the crowd over twice a day for sight of faces he knew, but looked in vain. Four days passed, and the hotel did not take fire, the mountain behind it did not slide down, and there was no strike of waiters to give him an opportunity to play the hero and present his card. Then he decided to take a spin in the auto which had been shipped up to him.

When undecided what to do in a case of love, trust to the auto. It has a hundred possibilities.

Mr. Dillon had driven fifteen miles and stopped at a hotel to refresh himself, when he was pleased and surprised to see Miss Haddon and another young woman drive up in another auto. They had followed him from the hotel. They alighted and disappeared. By indirect information he learned that Miss Haddon had brought back the other young lady to her hotel and was to make the return trip in care of the chauffeur.

In the course of an hour Miss Haddon reappeared and after thirty or forty goodbys to her girl friends took a seat in the tonneau and moved off. Three minutes later Mr. Dillon was traveling the same road. All went well for five miles. He was following so closely that he could see that the other machine was holding anything but a straight course. There were wabbles to right and left to signify that that tract on intemperance that he had seen the chauffeur reading hadn't quite cured him of his thirst for highballs.

By and by two things happened in the same minute. The chauffeur suddenly increased his speed, and a cow suddenly started to cross the highway in front of a farmhouse.

The best mechanical engineer could not have planned things better. There was a whoop, a scream and a smash, and then an auto brought up against a rail fence and sent the splinters flying.

Fate was with the young man from Boston. He stopped his machine and leaped out and over the dead cow and the unconscious chauffeur lying on his back, and his strong arms were extended to the half fainting girl in the tonneau. She fell into them just as the farmer came from the house with a milk pail in his hand and cried out:

"Now, by crickety, but this is a nice state of affairs, ain't it! What in Jericho have you folks been doing?"

"This auto struck your cow," briefly explained Mr. Dillon as he placed the girl on her feet on the ground.

"Struck my cow! Why, it's killed her as dead as a doornail! By gum, but you've got yourselves into a nice scrape. Yes, sir; gone and killed my cow and smashed my fence, and the two things together will send you to jail for at least thirty days!"

"We shall pay all damages, of course. Please let this young lady go to the house." She isn't hurt, I hope, but the accident has shaken her up."

"Oh, she can go to the house. Look at that cow lying there! Only seven years old and giving ten quarts of milk a day! Worth $30 of any man money. It's a serious job, my friend."

Miss Haddon was assisted to the house, where the farmer's wife received her, and then Mr Dillon returned to the chauffeur. He had been flung out, but those highballs had saved him from serious injury. He was more intoxicated than hurt, and, after being propped up against the fence, proceeded to indulge in a good, long cry. When finally at liberty Mr Dillon turned to the farmer and said:

"I am now ready to talk with you."

"Yes, there's got to be some tremendous talking over this thing. In the first place, I'm a constable, and it's my business to arrest somebody for speeding. If that machine hadn't been going thirty miles an hour the cow could have dodged it. I've been throwing stones and clubs at her ever since she was a calf, and she's dodged 'em all. It's speeding and killing a cow and smashing a fence all in one, to say nothing of the shock to my feelings."

"We are very sorry, of course," answered Mr. Dillon. "If you will figure up the damages I will pay."

"Wait, well call the cow $30 and the fence about $2. As for the speeding, you'll have to be taken before Squire Johnson. He lives six miles away, but is off on a visit to his brother in New Jersey just now, and I can't say when he'll be home."

"But we can't go 'round."

"Can't you? Well, I guess you'll have to. When you're talking to me you're talking to the law. I could handcuff the three of you and take you right to jail. Why, man, killing a cow is next door to killing a human being! Can't you realize it?"

"But, you see, we are stopping at the Elms hotel, and the young lady is anxious to get back to her mother. If I pay the damages you can take the ball on the speeding case, can't you?"

The constable thought the case over and decided to take bail. When Mr. Dillon pulled out his purse to pay the $32 he received a shock. Four dollars was all he had with him. The weeping and muttering chauffeur was searched, but he had less than a dollar. Blushing and stammering and perturbed, the young man called upon Miss Haddon for a cash loan. She had only $2.

"I hate to take you to jail," said the constable when informed of how things were. "I guess your watch and pin will be enough to secure everything. You've got to come back in a week, though, to face the squire."

The things were handed over, the fuddled chauffeur loaded in like a bag of sand and the smashed auto left "to be called for." Then the other auto headed for the hotel. In the excitement of the hour neither of the principals had thought of names. It was only as they were rolling smoothly along at not too fast a gait that the error was repaired. Then a silence lasting five long minutes ensued. Then two peals of laughter broke from two pairs of lips in chorus. The whole thing was grimly ludicrous.

"And how did you raise the $32 and the ball?" asked the girl.

"The constable has my watch and pin."

"And won't we have to go to jail?"

"I think not, but we are prisoners in a sense. If you fly the country you will leave me in a bad fix."

Of course the mother thanked Mr. Dillon, and of course Mr. Dillon thanked his stars and pushed his luck. Once always and sometimes twice a day that couple had to ride out to see about bail; they had to wander about the grounds evenings; they had to sit in grottoes and beside waterfalls. After a month had passed Mr. Dillon begged the mother to let him be a bondsman to the daughter for life.

"Dear me!" said the mother, "but what strange things running over a cow may lead to! Don't let Minnie do it again!"

Time Seemed Long.

"Ten years are supposed to elapse between Acts I and II."

"Is that so? Seems like a long time."

"Well, it's the last time I'll ever come to the theatre with a pair of tight shoes on."

TWO NERVOUS WOMEN

Made Well By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, constipation, headaches, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness.

"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I threw away the medicines the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to sit up and in a short time I was able to do all my work. Your medicine has proved itself able to do all you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited."—Mrs. MARY JOHNSTON, 210 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Bad Case.

Ephrata, Pa.—"About a year ago I was down with nervous prostration. I was pale and weak and would have hysteric spells, sick headaches and a bad pain under my shoulder-blade. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand long enough to do my dishes.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and happy and I have begun to gain in weight and my face looks healthy now."—Mrs. J. W. HORNBERGER, R. No. 3, Ephrata, Pa.

Ends Dry, Hoarse or Painful Coughs Quickly

A Simple, Home-Made Remedy, Inexpensive but Unequaled

The prompt and positive results given by this pleasant tasting home-made cough syrup have caused it to be used in more homes than any other recipe. It gives almost instant relief, and will usually overcome the average cough in 24 hours.

Get 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) from any drug store, pour it into a 16 ounce bottle and fill to the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Use maple or corn syrup if sugar syrup is not on hand. Or you can make a syrup by stirring two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. You couldn't mix as much good cough medicine for $2.50. Easily prepared and never spoils. Full directions with Pinex.

The prompt, positive and effective way in which Pinex Syrup overcomes a bad cough, chest or throat cold is truly remarkable. It quickly loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes a painful cough in a hurry. With a persistent, loose cough it checks the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the annoying hacking.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol and is famous the world over for its splendid effect in bronchitis, whooping cough, bronchial asthma and winter coughs.

To avoid disappointment in making this, ask your druggist for 2½ ounces of "Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

An Experienced Cook Writes

"There had never been any Crisco in our home until this Christmas. My mother was induced to eat a little Crisco pastry. She hasn't tasted pastry for years. It caused absolutely no trouble, and she ate it again. It is needless to say that Crisco has found a place in our kitchen."

It is results of this sort that have made for Crisco the place it holds in the esteem of capable housewives everywhere.

CRISCO
For Frying · For Shortening
For Cake Making

Crisco produces pastry that is more digestible than any that can be made with lard.

But this fact can become a fact for you only after you have made a thorough trial yourself.

Is not the securing of better pastry worth the slight effort of an attempt with Crisco?

MONACO

While his serene highness the prince of Monaco is nominally neutral as concerns the war, his little principality of eight square miles is really involved in the struggle and is numbered among Germany's foes. Many of the great villas and hotels have been converted into hospitals for wounded French soldiers, and this has naturally aroused the ire of the Kaiser. Prince Albert Honore Charles, the ruler of the tiny principality which holds the Monte Carlo casino, the world's greatest gambling establishment, has occupied the throne since 1889, when he succeeded his father, Prince Charles III. Practically all of his 15,000 subjects are in sympathy with France in the present struggle, and not a few of the men have enlisted in the French army. In his younger days Prince Albert gained much undesirable notoriety because of his domestic difficulties. His first wife, Lady Mary Douglas-Hamilton, an Englishwoman, divorced him, and his second spouse, Miss Alice Heine of New Orleans, found life with the Monaco prince unbearable. Of late years the prince has devoted himself to scientific pursuits. The real ruler of Monaco is Edmond Blanc, who controls the Monte Carlo gambling establishment, which pays all the expenses of the Monaco government.

The Czar of Russia pulls a good bar, swims well, is an expert horseman, and can play a fair game of lawn tennis. As a walker, also, he possesses surprising powers of endurance.

Beef made its first appearance on the market last Saturday and was quoted at 10 cents for the front quarters and 11 cents for the hind.

Pork was 15 cents and 16 cents while lard is about the same price.

Wholesale quotations for pork show a sharp advance having gone up 50 cents a hundred over last week.

Wools and Hides.

Wool, fine, unwashed
Sheepskins, ea.	$1.25 to $1.50
Calf skins, lb.	14c to 15c
Beef skins	14c to 16c

Honey, lb.	15
Shelled Walnuts	60c
Currants, lb.	13
Raisins, lb.	12c
Dripping	10

Sugar has taken another rise, and it is not likely that the advance will stop there. Raw sugars are scarce and as the supply from Cuba has not reached us yet the supply is not equal to the demand.

Almonds are arriving in Canada in small quantities, but walnuts will be very scarce for Christmas selling.

Currants are exceedingly scarce, prices are advancing and the supply of raisins is not equal to the demand.

B. Kelly, Commissioner, contends that the Allies must rule the Dardanelles in the event of Greece not coming in and currants and dried fruits will jump.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

OUT ON BAIL.

Strange Things to Which Running Over a Cow May Lead.

By HELEN MARSDEN QUINN.

(Copyright, by Associated Literary Press.)

"I'm going to fall in love with that girl!"

It was at a New England summer resort, and "that young man from Boston" had been there less than an hour when he had his first view of Miss Minnie Haddon. Young men from New York and other places had arrived a week ahead of him and uttered the same words, but as Paul Dillon didn't know it he was not dismayed.

To fall in love properly with the handsomest girl at a summer resort there should be a formal introduction, and a formal introduction may be hard to achieve under certain circumstances. There must be a mutual acquaintance to bring it about. Miss Haddon's mother was a widow and an invalid and kept to herself most of the time. Paul Dillon looked the crowd over twice a day for sight of faces he knew, but looked in vain. Four days passed, and the hotel did not take fire, the mountain behind it did not slide down, and there was no strike of waiters to give him an opportunity to play the hero and present his card. Then he decided to take a spin in the auto which had been shipped up to him.

When undecided what to do in a case of love, trust to the auto. It has a hundred possibilities.

Mr. Dillon had driven fifteen miles and stopped at a hotel to refresh himself, when he was pleased and surprised to see Miss Haddon and another young woman drive up in another auto. They had followed him from the hotel. They alighted and disappeared. By indirect information he learned that Miss Haddon had brought back the other young lady to her hotel and was to make the return trip in care of the chauffeur.

In the course of an hour Miss Haddon reappeared and after thirty or forty goodbys to her girl friends took a seat in the tonneau and moved off. Three minutes later Mr. Dillon was traveling the same road. All went well for five miles. He was following so closely that he could see that the other machine was holding anything but a straight course. There were wabbles to right and left to signify that that tract on intemperance that he had seen the chauffeur reading hadn't quite cured him of his thirst for highballs.

By and by two things happened in the same minute. The chauffeur suddenly increased his speed, and a cow suddenly started to cross the highway in front of a farmhouse.

The best mechanical engineer could not have planned things better. There was a whoop, a scream and a smash, and then an auto brought up against a rail fence and sent the splinters flying.

Fate was with the young man from Boston. He stopped his machine and leaped out and over the dead cow and the unconscious chauffeur lying on his back, and his strong arms were extended to the half fainting girl in the tonneau. She fell into them just as the farmer came from the house with a milk pail in his hand and cried out:

"Now, by crickety, but this is a nice state of affairs, ain't it! What in Jericho have you folks been doing?"

"This auto struck your cow," briefly explained Mr. Dillon as he placed the girl on her feet on the ground.

"Struck my cow! Why, it's killed her as dead as a doornail! By gum, but you've got yourselves into a nice scrape. Yes, sir; gone and killed my cow and smashed my fence, and the two things together will send you to jail for at least thirty days!"

"We shall pay all damages, of course. Please let this young lady go to the house. She isn't hurt, I hope, but the accident has shaken her up."

"Oh, she can go to the house. Look at that cow lying there! Only seven years old and giving ten quarts of milk a day! Worth $50 of any man money. It's a serious job, my friend

Miss Haddon was assisted to the house, where the farmer's wife received her, and then Mr Dillon returned to the chauffeur. He had been flung out, but those highballs had saved him from serious injury. He was more intoxicated than hurt, and, after being propped up against the fence, proceeded to indulge in a good, long cry. When finally at liberty Mr Dillon turned to the farmer and said.

"I am now ready to talk with you."

"Yes, there's got to be some tremendous talking over this thing. In the first place I'm a constable, and it's my business to arrest somebody for speeding. If that machine hadn't been going thirty miles an hour the cow could have dodged it. I've been throwing stones and clubs at her ever since she was a calf, and she's dodged 'em all. It's speeding and killing a cow and smashing a fence all in one, to say nothing of the shock to my feelings."

"We are very sorry, of course," answered Mr. Dillon. "If you will figure up the damages I will pay."

"Want, we'll call the cow $30 and the fence about $2. As for the speeding, you'll have to be taken before Squire Johnson. He lives six miles away, but is off on a visit to his brother in New Jersey just now and I can't say when he'll be home."

"But we can't be! around"

"Can't you? Waal, I guess you'll have to When you're talking to me you're talking to the law I could handcuff the three of you and take you right to jail. Why, man, killing a cow in next door to killing a human being! Can't you realize it?"

"But, you see, we are stopping at the Elms hotel, and the young lady is anxious to get back to her mother. If I pay the damages you can take the bail on the speeding case, can't you?"

The constable thought the case over and decided to take bail. When Mr. Dillon pulled out his purse to pay the $32 he received a shock. Four dollars was all he had with him. The weeping and muttering chauffeur was searched, but he had less than a dollar. Blushing and stammering and perturbed, the young man called upon Miss Haddon for a cash loan. She had only $2.

"I hate to take you to jail," said the constable when informed of how things were. "I guess your watch and pin will be enough to secure everything. You've got to come back in a week, though, to face the squire."

The things were handed over, the fuddled chauffeur loaded in like a bag of sand and the smashed auto left "to be called for." Then the other auto headed for the hotel. In the excitement of the hour neither of the principals had thought of names. It was only as they were rolling smoothly along at not too fast a gait that the error was repaired. Then a silence lasting five long minutes ensued. Then two peals of laughter broke from two pairs of lips in chorus. The whole thing was grimly ludicrous.

"And how did you raise the $32 and the bail?" asked the girl.

"The constable has my watch and pin."

"And won't we have to go to jail?"

"I think not, but we are prisoners in a sense. If you fly the country you will leave me in a bad fix."

Of course the mother thanked Mr. Dillon, and of course Mr. Dillon thanked his stars and pushed his luck. Once always and sometimes twice a day that couple had to ride out to see about bail; they had to wander about the grounds evenings; they had to sit in grottoes and beside waterfalls. After a month had passed Mr. Dillon begged the mother to let him be a bondsman to the daughter for life.

"Dear me," said the mother, "but what strange things running over a cow may lead to! Don't let Minnie do it again!"

Time Seemed Long.

"Ten years are supposed to elapse between Acts I. and II."

"It seems fully that long."

"Why so?"

"It's the last time I'll ever come to the theatre with a pair of tight shoes on."

TWO NERVOUS WOMEN

Made Well By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, constipation, headaches, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness.

"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I threw away the medicines the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to sit up and in a short time I was able to do all my work. Your medicine has proved itself able to do all you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited."—Mrs. MARY JOHNSTON, 210 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Bad Case.

Ephrata, Pa.—"About a year ago I was down with nervous prostration. I was pale and weak and would have hysteric spells, sick headaches and a bad pain under my shoulder-blade. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand long enough to do my dishes.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and happy and I have begun to gain in weight and my face looks healthy now."—Mrs. J. W. HORNBERGER, R. No. 3, Ephrata, Pa.

Ends Dry, Hoarse or Painful Coughs Quickly

A Simple, Home-Made Remedy, Inexpensive but Unequaled

The prompt and positive results given by this pleasant tasting home-made cough syrup has caused it to be used in more homes than any other recipe. It gives almost instant relief and will usually overcome the average cough in 24 hours.

Get 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) from any druggist, pour it into a 16-ounce bottle and fill to the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This makes 16 ounces—a family supply—of the finest cough remedy, at a cost of only 54 cents. You couldn't buy as much ready-made cough medicine for $2.50. Easily measured and never spoils. Full directions with Pinex.

The promptness, certainty and ease with which Pinex Syrup overcomes a bad cough, chest or throat cold is truly remarkable. It quickly loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals and soothes a painful cough in a hurry. With a persistent, loose cough it aids the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the annoying hacking.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its splendid effect in bronchitis, whooping cough, bronchial asthma and winter coughs.

To avoid disappointment in making this, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

An Experienced Cook Writes

"There had never been any Crisco in our home until this Christmas. My mother was induced to eat a little Crisco pastry. She hasn't tasted pastry for years. It caused absolutely no trouble, and she ate it again. It is needless to say that Crisco has found a place in our kitchen."

It is results of this sort that have made for Crisco the place it holds in the esteem of capable housewives everywhere.

CRISCO

For Cake Making

Crisco produces pastry that is more digestible than any that can be made with lard.

But this fact can become a fact for you only after you have made a thorough trial yourself.

Is not the securing of better pastry worth the slight effort of an attempt with Crisco?

MONACO

While his serene highness the prince of Monaco is nominally neutral as concerns the war, his little principality of eight square miles is really involved in the struggle and is numbered among Germany's foes. Many of the great villas and hotels have been converted into hospitals for wounded French soldiers, and this has naturally aroused the ire of the Kaiser. Prince Albert Honore Charles, the ruler of the tiny principality which holds the Monte Carlo casino, the world's greatest gambling establishment, has occupied the throne since 1889, when he succeeded his father, Prince Charles III. Practically all of his 15,000 subjects are in sympathy with France in the present struggle, and not a few of the men have enlisted in the French army. In his younger days Prince Albert gained much undesirable notoriety because of his domestic difficulties. His first wife, Lady Mary Douglas-Hamilton, an Englishwoman, divorced him, and his second spouse, Miss Alice Heine of New Orleans, found life with the Monaco prince unbearable. Of late years the prince has devoted himself to scientific pursuits. The real ruler of Monaco is Edmond Blanc, who controls the Monte Carlo gambling establishment, which pays all the expenses of the Monaco government.

The Czar of Russia pulls a good oar, swims well, is an expert horseman, and can play a fair game of lawn tennis. As a walker, also, he possesses surprising powers of endurance.

Chickens	15c

Butter, butter everywhere was an appropriate description of last Saturday's market. The price was 30 cents a pound though one or two asked as low as 28 cents, but showed a weakening as the noon hour approached.

Eggs were very scarce, and had no trouble in realizing 40 cents a dozen.

Fowl quotations were a little stiffer and will have a tendency to go a little higher as the holiday season approaches. Chickens ranged from 50 to 60 cents each or 90 cents to $1.20 a pair. A 10-pound goose brought $1.25, while a 13-pound turkey sold for $2.00.

Live hens brought $1.00 each.

Eggs on Toronto market are 45c at New York 65 cents.

Grains, Hay.

Wheat, bush	$1.00
Oats	37c

Sugar has taken another rise, and it is not likely that the advance will stop there. Raw sugars are scarce and as the supply from Cuba has not reached us yet the supply is not equal to the demand.

Almonds are arriving in Canada in small quantities, but walnuts will be very scarce for Christmas selling.

Currants are exceedingly scarce; prices are advancing and the supply of raisins is not equal to the demand.

If Kitchener continues to take the Allies more rich they may prevent the export trade of fires in that case farmers will remain at home with pumps.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

How They Cure

PRESSEVILLE, Ont.

"I suffered from Kidney Trouble for several years, and tried numerous remedies and doctors' prescriptions without permanent relief, my case being chronic. After seeing about Gin Pills, and as it is a well known fact that Juniper, without alcohol, is excellent for the Kidneys, I decided to try Gin Pills. One single pill gave me great relief. I have now taken four boxes of Gin Pills and find myself completely cured. No more bad humor, increase in weight, clear eyes, fresh color, more strength and vigor. This is what Gin Pills have done for me."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S APRON.

By Anabel Worthington.

There are as one might say, aprons and aprons. Some of us understand by this term an all-covering garment which is donned regretfully when there is hard labor at hand, but all of us have moments when our occupation is neither laborious nor objectionable and yet demands some slight protection for the frock. For these occasions the apron shown in the illustration is sufficient.

This garment has a shaped belt in front. It is cut out in a deep round at the top and well cut away at the sides. It passes over the shoulders to the back, and here it forms a small piecing which may be called either a little yoke or a large collar.

Below the belt the front of the apron is plain. It extends only a little way around the sides and has no fulness at the top. In the centre of the front it dips downward in a blunt point and two little patch pockets give it a businesslike air.

When dusting, preparing fruit for preserving, getting up a Sunday night tea, sewing on a delicate work and for many other occasions this apron will be found just the thing needed. It can be made of black wash silk, brilliantine or of dainty ginghams, or even of lawn with ribbons to brighten it and make it ornamental.

The apron pattern, No. 7283, is cut in one size. To make it will require 2⅝ yards of 27 inch material, with 7⅛ yards of binding for edge.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

IF SUBJECT TO COLDS HERE IS GOOD ADVICE

Don't load your stomach with cough syrups. Send healing medication through the nostrils—send it into the passages that are subject to colds and Catarrh. Easy to do this with Catarrhozone, which cures a cold in ten minutes. Even to the lungs goes the healing vapor of Catarrhozone—all through the bronchial tubes, nostrils and air passages—everywhere a trace of disease remains will Catarrhozone follow. You'll not have colds, nor will you suffer from sniffles, bronchitis or throat trouble if Catarrhozone is used. Get it to-day but beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone. All dealers sell Catarrhozone, large size, two months treatment, costs $1.00, small size 50c; sample size 25c.

A young man was sitting in the Union Depot the other day holding a baby in his arms when the child began to cry so lustily as to attract the attention of every one around him. By and by a waiting passenger walked over to him with a smile of pity on his face and said:

"A woman gave you that baby to hold while she went to see about her baggage didn't she?"

"Yes."

"Ha! Ha! Ha! This is rich. Looking for her every minute, aren't you?"

"Yes, and I think she'll come back."

"Well, this makes me laugh Ha! Ha! I had a woman play this same trick on me in a Chicago depot once, but no one ever will again. Young man, you have been played on for a hayseed. I would advise you to turn that baby over to a policeman and get out of here before some newspaper reporter gets hold of you."

"Oh, she'll come back, she'll come back!"

"She will, eh? The joke grows richer and richer. Now, what makes you think she'll come back?"

"Because, she's my wife, and this is my baby."

MOTHER! DON'T TAKE CHANCES IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Clean Little Liver and Bowels

A laxative to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste. Liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue. Mother! If coated or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all the constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. To assure the little one's proper action given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a fifty cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs" which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Company.

Sour, gassy, upset stomach, indigestion, heartburn, dyspepsia; when the food you eat ferments into gasses and stubborn lumps; your head aches and you feel sick and miserable, that's when you realize the magic in Pape's Diapepsin. It makes all stomach misery vanish in five minutes.

If your stomach is in a continuous revolt—if you can't get it regulated, please, for your sake, try Pape's Diapepsin. It's so needless to have a bad stomach—make your next meal a favorite food meal, then take a little Diapepsin. There will not be any distress—eat without fear. It's because Pape's Diapepsin "really does" regulate weak, out-of-order stomachs that gives it its millions of sales annually.

Get a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. It is the quickest, surest stomach relief and cure known. It acts almost like magic—it is a scientific, harmless and pleasant stomach preparation which truly belongs in every home.

THE MEDICINE SHOW.

By C. L. Edson.

Now I remember the medicine show
That came to our town in the long ago.
The carriage stopped in the village square,
Gasoline torches raised a glare,
Song, with a banjo rode the air,
And all of the natives soon were there.
The Doc wore long black Indian hair
Of pistols he carried a thumping pair,
And he gave the people a medicine show
In the hundrum village of long ago.

I mean how the people smiled
And joked and gathered on hurrying feet,
For entertainment our hearts were wild.
We hungered much for the showmen's treat.

Motion pictures were not untold,
Or the phonograph with its singing horn,
Or daily paper at night and morn,
Life was a to-do of wheat and corn,
And a sweet calf in the clover bloom wheat.

Was a medicine show in the village.

The Indian doctor he chewed his coat
And said, I am here to entertain.
He rolled up the sleeves of his calico black coat,
And the tricks I do I will first explain.
You [illegible] and he [illegible]
Three.
A peculiar Bowie knife he drew
I will lop off the head of a [illegible] and he.
And pass it around for you all to view.
Then slap it back [illegible]
And the boy will be able to get [illegible] go.
Healed by the [illegible]

The boys then fled to the fair ground
The grown-ups stayed and went [illegible] near.
And we stood a [illegible] wide.
Each of us spreading a fan-like [illegible]
Of [illegible] to show you wonders beyond belief.
With a plain lead pencil I'll pull [illegible] teeth.
And never hurt you a bit in brief.
This salve I sell is a pain relief
And he sold us salve and magnetic [illegible]
And electric belts and corn cure [illegible]
Till it grew so late that he couldn't [illegible]
To catch a boy to decapitate.

OBJECTED TO FLATTERY.

And Therefore Was an Object of Wonder to the Other Woman.

It is rare enough that the modern woman objects to a flattering photograph, but it happens once in a while.

The other afternoon a strong faced woman of thirty-five or so very plainly dressed, guiltless of stays apparently and wearing flat heeled shoes and other external evidences of female regeneration, strode into the reception room of an avenue photographic studio.

"I have come for my photographs," she said to the reception room young woman in a hard, matter of fact tone, handing over her ticket. The girl dug the photographs out of a big pile and pulled one of them out of the envelope to show to the customer. The strong faced woman looked at the picture with immediate dissatisfaction.

"Do I in any way resemble such a doll as this?" she inquired of the reception room girl haughtily. "This looks about as much like the proof."

"Oh, but the finished pictures always look different—much better than the proofs, you know," said the reception room young woman, with rather a surprised expression.

"Do you suppose for a single instant, young woman, that I came here to get pictures that flatter?" asked the woman with the lined face. "Do I look like such a perfect fool as that? Where is there any character in it? Am I such a putty face? It makes me look ten years younger than I am. Where are the lines in it and the"—

"But," interposed the girl behind the desk, "the retoucher has erased the lines. Most ladies prefer their pictures to make them look a wee bit younger, and I am sure that none of them cares to have the crow's feet."

"I am not ashamed of my wrinkles, young woman," was the frigid reply. "I acquired them in a good cause. I shall not take these photographs, and that's all there is about it. I shall have another sitting, and I shall have a distinct understanding with the operator that he is not to flatten and puff out and beautify my countenance in this idiotic fashion. The camera stamps me as I am, and I'm not going to have any lying portraits. I shall return for another sitting tomorrow afternoon." And the regenerated woman stalked out.

The reception room young woman took her gum from the place on the underside of the counter where she had stuck it, put it into her mouth and thought steadily for fully two minutes.

"Well, she's just what my brothers call the limit!" was the conclusion she reached. Washington Post.

KITCHENER IN THE EAST.

Seven Years in India Accomplished Far-Reaching Reforms.

Lord Kitchener went to Egypt in 1892, when he volunteered for the army then being organized by Sir Evelyn Wood. He soon became a valued Chief of the Intelligence Department, as a result of his deep insight into the native character. During this time he took part in the Gordon relief expedition, which failed for lack of proper transportation. In 1892 he was appointed Governor of the Red Sea territories, and began a series of raids on Osman Digna, the Dervish leader. On one of these his force was flanked and forced to retreat, and he was wounded, his jaw being broken by a bullet.

England had heard of Kitchener by this time, and when he returned to recuperate he was received with honours and made Aide-de-Camp to Queen Victoria. His health returned, Kitchener went back to Egypt, where he was appointed commander of the Egyptian Army on the resignation of Sir Francis Grenfell. He immediately took charge of the army with an iron hand, and built it up from a fellaheen rabble, "without stomach, heart, or backbone," to a splendid fighting force, with which he crushed Osman Digna at Omdurman in 1898. The capture of Khartum followed, and Kitchener return to England as a hero. His campaign was criticised for ruthlessness, it being charged that he trampled on his foes in a barbarous manner, but he was made Baron Kitchener of Khartum, and received the thanks of Parliament and a grant of $150,000.

When Lord Roberts went to South Africa to take command against the Boers, Kitchener went as his chief of staff and is credited with having organized the forces which brought the war to a successful conclusion. On his return to England he was created a Viscount and promoted to the rank of General, also receiving the thanks of Parliament and a grant of $250,000.

In 1902, after peace was concluded in South Africa, Lord Kitchener went to India as Commander-in-Chief of the British army there. During his seven years' way he carried out many far-reaching administrative reforms, besides a complete reorganization and strategic redistribution of the British and native forces. When he left India in 1902, it was conceded, even by his critics, that Lord Kitchener had increased many-fold the military strength of England in India.

From India he went to Egypt as British Agent and Consul General in Cairo, virtually Governor General of Egypt. Lord Kitchener devoted his time to the development of the country, building new roads and irrigation projects on a large scale.

THE DAIRY REPORT

The report of the proceedings of the annual meetings of the Eastern and Western Ontario Dairy Associations, and of the Ontario Cheese and Butter Makers for 1914, has just been issued under one cover by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto, and a copy may be had upon application. The reports make most helpful reading for dairymen. They furnish the very latest information by the best equipped men in the Province regarding the testing and selection of dairy herds, milk and testing, milking machines, butter and cheese making, etc. In fact everything the modern dairyman is interested in is here treated as its necessity or its importance may demand. The discussions are particularly free and informing.

Could Not Stand

The Least Excitement.

Was So Weak and Run Down.

Many women become run down and worn out by their household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with shattered nerves and weak hearts.

When the heart becomes weak, and the nerves unstrung, it is impossible for a woman to look after her household or social duties. The least little exertion or excitement leaves her in an exhausted condition, and not fit to do anything.

On the first sign of any weakness of the heart or nerves, you will be wise if you start to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

This remedy will act directly on the disordered heart making it beat strong and regular, and will also invigorate and strengthen the nerves so as to make them steady and firm.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Tillsonburg, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly with my nerves. I was so weak and run down, I could not stand the least excitement of any kind. I believe your Heart and Nerve Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from nervous trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the original remedy for all heart and nerve troubles. Price 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

PETERBOROUGH THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1915

THE RUSSIANS ARE MAKING PROGRESS

THE GREEKS WILL NOT INTERFERE WITH ALLIES

SIR EDWARD GREY IS RETICENT BUT GRECIAN CRISIS IS THOUGHT OVER

Foreign Secretary States That He is Not in a Position to Give Any Information Concerning the Latest Negotiations --French Artillery Destroy German Machine Gun Posts on the Western Front.

RUSSIANS DOING WELL IN RIGA DISTRICT

PARIS, Nov. 25.—(French Official).—The German machine gun positions in the vicinities of Passe, Roye and Beauvraignes, in the Somme region, have been destroyed by the French artillery, to-day's War Office communique announced. Grenade combats raged during the night in the Artois district and Lorraine, it was stated.

GENEVA, Nov. 25.—From dominating positions captured by the Italians in the past few days about Goritz, an increasingly furious bombardment is being directed against the Austrian stronghold to-day, according to advices from the Italian front. Both belligerents have so greatly weakened their forces on other fronts to increase their strength on the Isonzo that there is a lull in the fighting except in the latter district.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The general opinion here is expressed today that Greece has satisfied the demands of the Allies, and that the Greek crisis is ended. There will be no interference by the Greeks with the Allies' Balkan campaign under any circumstances.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Despite desperate counter attacks by which some temporary recovery of ground were accomplished, the Germans are steadily losing scattered positions to the Russians in the Riga district, official Petrograd advices say to-day. In Galicia continued hard fighting is reported but without recent important changes in the lines. Between the Northern and Southern extremities of the Eastern front there has been comparative quiet lately.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—A deluge of peace telegrams continued at the White House to-day. "Work for peace, the mothers of America pray for it," is their keynote. But whether or not President Wilson is giving ground, under the wave, cannot be learned. The appeals ask him to initiate negotiations for peace in a congress of representatives of neutral powers, and say if he will take the first step, every neutral nation will follow, and that the warring nations will listen. In the meantime the President to-day sent out an urgent appeal to Americans to contribute more funds to the Red Cross that the work of that order in the war fields may go on.

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—The announcement is made of the safe arrival at a British port of the transport Missanbie with over 1,700 Canadian fighting men on board.

They include the 47th Battalion (B.C.), with the following Ontario units, drafts (horse artillery), 2 officers and 100 men, Engineers, 9 officers and 104 men, Infantry from Ontario (reinforcements), 5 officers and 244 men, Medical Corps, 2 officers and 78 men. Civilian doctors for the regular army 11. Details, 7 officers.

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—Over seventeen thousand more Serbs were captured by the Germans, Austrians and Bulgarians when they took Metrovitza and Pristina, the War Office announced to-day.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Non-plussed by trades unions' formidable opposition to the new war order, reducing open hours for saloons to five and a half hours daily, Government leaders are in conference today concerning the situation. The new order is effective on Monday.

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—For general information, the Post Office Department has issued notice that all parcels sent to Canadian soldiers in England, France or Mediterranean points must bear postage according to the rates which prevailed before the war, and which are obtainable from any postmaster. The Department has been unable to secure any reduction or any concession for soldiers. In all cases parcels should be addressed as usual, care of the Army Post Office, London, England, but bear postage according to the present known location of the addressee.

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—The second large contingent of Canadian wounded will reach St. John on the Corsican next Saturday night. This contingent numbers 213 men. All except the Maritime Province men will be entrained for Quebec, where they will go through the discharge depot in the usual way.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—It was announced at the White House that over three thousand telegrams had been received in connection with peace movements. Officials close to the President were non-committal when asked if the Executive would ask someone to represent him officially on the peace expedition to Europe, for which Henry Ford has chartered a special ship. It could not be learned whether Ford asked the President explicitly on his recent visit here to send such a delegate. It is known, however, that the President is much interested in the peace venture.

Ford himself told the President, it was learned to-day, that he would probably accompany a delegation to formal peace conferences in Berne Switzerland, in December.

There is considerable interest attached to the conference to be held to-morrow between President Wilson and the delegates, headed by Jane Adams, representing the Women's Peace Party.

HAVRE, France, Nov. 25 — Word was received here to-day that Mme Juliette Renkin, sister of the Belgian Minister of the Colonies, has been arrested by German authorities at Brussels. The charge is not specified.

Official advices report the arrest, also, at Brussels, of several retired Belgian officers and priests.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The announcement was made in the House of Commons to-day by Sir Edward Grey, Foreign Secretary, that he was not yet in a position to give information concerning the results of the latest negotistions at Athens.

PTE. E. LINDSEY,
One of the Peterborough boys who left with the 39th Battalion, and who is to-day officially reported wounded.

93RD BATTALION WILL ENTER TEAM IN O.H.A. RANKS

Arrangements Are Being Made by the Officers For Many Amusements While the Battalion is in Training in Peterborough

WILL BE A BUSY WINTER

That it will not be all work with the 93rd Battalion this winter is evident from the programme that the officers of the battalion are outlining. In the first place the 93rd will enter a hockey team in the O.H.A., probably in the intermediate series, although this is not definitely known. There is considerable hockey material in the khaki ranks now and before the season opens it is expected that other hockey players will enlist. A team in the O.H.A. will get the united support of the battalion, and the fans can look forward to some tall rooting from the soldier lads, while the 93rd band may be depended upon to make things lively when the soldiers' team is playing.

The bowling alleys in the armouries will be put into shape for the use of the battalion and a bowling league will be inaugurated, while rifle matches will also be a feature of the winter's amusements. Altogether the officers of the 93rd are looking forward to an enjoyable winter.

In connection with the 93rd's hockey team, the following despatch from Barrie will be read with interest:

Barrie, Nov. 24. — Simcoe County Council showed its interest in the new Simcoe Battalion to-day by granting $500 towards the initial expenses of organization.

It having been pointed out to the Council that civilian hockey is detrimental to recruiting and that hockey teams are composed of the very best recruiting material, a resolution was passed by the County Council requesting the Ontario Hockey Association to prohibit as far as possible all organized civilian hockey, and to encourage enlistment by insisting on applicants for hockey certificates being enlisted with some overseas battalion. The resolution further suggested that the [illegible] every assistance to military hockey.

HOME ONLY TEN DAYS CORP. PLAYFORD HAS JOINED THE 93rd

Fourteen Months at the Front Not Enough for Former Colour-Sergeant of 57th Regiment and He is Going Back With the Peterboro' Battalion--Battalion Orders Issued--To-day's Military News.

Setting a striking example for those who have not yet heard the call of duty, Corp. John Playford, late of the British Army Service Corps, and formerly colour-sergeant in the 57th Regiment, enlisted with the 93rd Peterborough Battalion yesterday. Home only ten days after serving fourteen months with the British forces in France and Belgium, during which time he was shot through the leg. Corp. Playford, or rather Sergt. Playford, for he starts in with the 93rd Battalion at that rank, is again wearing the khaki, and will go back to the Front with the boys from his home city of Peterborough.

Sergt. Playford took up his residence in Peterborough nine years ago and for seven years before the war broke out was a member of the 57th Regiment, among all ranks of which he was most popular. When the trouble started he was in Lindsay working on a contract for Messrs. Alexander & Miller, by which firm he had been employed for some time, and at once notified Lt.-Col. Clegg that he wished to enlist with the 57th detachment in the first contingent. He was taken on the strength of Peterborough's first contingent, but after one day's drill received orders to report at once for duty with his old unit, the British Army Service Corps, of which he was a reservist, and accordingly left Peterborough on August 11th for England. He was at the Front with the Indian troops a few weeks after and for fourteen months was on duty on the western battle front. On one occasion he was wounded by a bullet, which passed through his thigh, but quickly recovered from the effects of the injury. When the time of his reserve was up he declined to sign on again preferring to return home and join with the forces from Peterborough. "Although not born here," remarked Sergt. Payford yesterday, "Canada is my home, and I am a Canadian citizen, and I told them that over there when they asked me why I wanted to come out here again to enlist."

Sergt Playford has seen plenty of active service. He served for two years and seven months in the South African War and was also called out for the Matabele Expedition. He has served four years in the Royal Sussex Regiment, 13 years (with the Colours and on the Reserve) with the British Army Service Corps, and seven years with the 57th Regiment, and is now ready for more action.

"I can't say I like it over there," remarked Sergt. Playford when asked about conditions at the Front. "I don't believe any man can honestly say he likes it, but I feel it's my duty to go, and that's different."

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

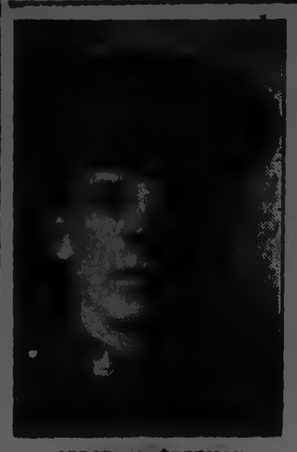
FIRST CASUALTY AMONG 39th BOYS



SERGT. H. FREEMAN,
Of the 93rd Battalion. At his own request, he is reverting to the ranks in order to take the position of Regimental Barber.

Pte. E. Lindsay, of the 57th Regiment Detachment to the 39th is Officially Reported Wounded on Nov. 18—Is in Boulogne Hospital.

TWO BROTHERS AT FRONT

The first casualty so far as known, among the Peterborough boys who left with the 39th Battalion, was recorded to-day when Mrs. Lindsey Crowter, 497 Cross street, received a wire from the Adjutant General's Department, notifying her that her son, Pte. Ephriam Lindsey, had been wounded. The wire was as follows:

Sincerely regret to inform you that No. 412693 Pte. Ephriam Lindsey, 25th Battalion, is officially reported admitted to No. 13 General Hospital, Boulogne, 18th November, gun shot wounds in thigh. Will send further particulars when received.

Adjutant General.

Pte. Lindsey enlisted with the 57th Regiment detachment to the 39th Battalion last winter and drilled here until March, when the battalion was mobilized at Belleville. The 39th went to England early last spring and has been sending reinforcing drafts to the front. Pte. Lindsey left with one of these drafts about three weeks ago and was attached to the 25th Battalion. It is evident that was only a short time there before being wounded.

Pte. Lindsey has two brothers at the front in the Canadian contingents. One brother, Gunner Dan. Lindsey, left with the 26th Field Battery, and has been at the front since early in the year with the 4th Battery, while the other, Pte. Richard Lindsey, enlisted here with the 8th C.M.R., and is now on the firing line. All three boys were born in Peterborough county and had been residents of Peterborough for some time.

PUNISHMENT IS SEVERE IF THEY REFUSE TO WORK

Exchanged Canadian Prisoner Tells What Prisoners Have to Do and the Penalty For Refusing--Letter to Mr. R. B. Rogers

BREAD ONLY EATABLE FOOD

Pte. Sherman Young of the Second Battalion, First Canadian Contingent, who was a prisoner in Giessen, Germany, and who a short time ago was exchanged and sent to England, writing to Mr. R. B. Rogers, Hunter street E., tells of some of the conditions of the prison camp, where Pte. Heber Rogers is. Pte. Young was with Heber until he was exchanged.

Mt. Martin's Plain, Eng., Nov. 12

Mr. R. B. Rogers,
Peterborough, Ont.

Dear Sir,—Having received a letter from Col. Rogers this morning, in which was your address, I am writing to tell you the general conditions of your son's life as a prisoner of war in Giessen Camp in Germany. As I arrived in England the seventeenth of last month from the same camp where Hober is.

Captured the Same Day.

I was captured the same day he was and was with him up until I came away. Heber's right eye is affected some, but I was speaking to a doctor and he told me the damage to the eye ball might have caused a growth over the sight which could be removed by an operation and the sight to the eye completely restored.

As to his treatment there is no brutal treatment in camp, but the rules are very strict. If any of the boys overstep the rules they are punished by three to fourteen days in prison on bread and water. But Heber had no trouble up till I came away. He was in good health when I left him, but it wasn't on the German food. The bread is about the only eatable food the fellows get.

Depend on Parcels.

All the English and Canadian prisoners depend entirely on the parcels received from their friends, which arrive in very good condition. All the men who are able are sent out to work. Some have to work in stone quarries, some at farm work and at just whatever they want them to do. If any of the men refuse to work they are put in a punishment camp for a period of 21 days. While there they are not permitted to smoke or send any letters or post cards and are not allowed to receive parcels or letters. They are made to work so many hours each day.

The Work They Do.

The work they have to do will be in the camp is burying the refuse of the camp and when that is finished they have to dig trenches and fill them in again. If they refuse a second time they get 60 days and a third time of refusing they are put in the punishment camp for the duration of the war. If one was picked out for work once or twice, but got off. But shortly before I came away he had a medical examination and he was pronounced fit for work, and he may be sent out some time. Money is handy in camp for obtaining sugar and milk. But that is about all they sell where is eatable. Heber was getting plenty to keep him going.

I may say that I got away owing to my left hand being so badly mashed by a bullet from a German machine gun.

Yours truly,
Pte Sherman Young,

This Morning's Police Court

Bruce Roddy Was Allowed to Go on Suspended Sentence—Week's Board for Thomas Clary

Bruce Roddy's value as a target for a German sniper was commented upon by Magistrate Dumble in this morning's police court. Roddy was charged with being a vagrant. The accused informed the court that he had just returned from the woods, where he was engaged in making roads. Since then he had resided with his mother. His return to the parental roof was short lived. Last evening he was garnered in by the police.

"We are not going to keep him forever," remarked the court. "Better take him down and shoot him. He might stop a bullet."

After some further discussion the Magistrate decided to suspend sentence.

A Week's Board.

Thomas Clary was less fortunate than Bruce Roddy. He was remanded for a week on a similar charge. He said he had been working in Lindsay more for some time past.

"You might work in a worse place," observed the Magistrate. "I'll remand you for a week."

"Do as you like," remarked the accused.

It is all very well for Henry Ford, the automobile magnate, to pose as an apostle of peace and assume to work for what at this stage of the war is unthinkable — peace without promise of permanence, which cannot come so long as the arch peace-breaker is unbroken and his power uncrushed. But we might save Mr. Ford a good deal of trouble—might tell him that we admit that the Ford auto is a good one for the price—and that it is not necessary to further advertise it at a very cheap rate, through a farcial peace propaganda.

AN INCENTIVE TO ENLISTING

In this war we are standing by and helping the under dog. Britain went to war to protect the outraged neutrality, territory and population of Belgium—by conscienceless force and unfaith, whose spirit and action if not restrained, would be applied in turn, in case of the success of German arms, to other countries, including Canada. Herein consisted a strong appeal to Canadian patriotism, to join the fight. It met the call to the tune of thousands of our best and bravest. The call continued and was again well met; it continues to-day, and while it is being fairly well responded to, there might be more recruits to the day.

We are confronted with the appeal to take our stand and help our soldiers wro are in the ranks; an appeal to our spirit of comradeship. But there is a still stronger appeal. in the course of the war many Canadian lads have been taken prisoners, and are in German prison camps. They are not like our lads in the trenches who have arms in their hands and can look out for themselves and give the Germans as good as they get. But our prisoner lads have no arms, and have to submit to all the indignities and ill-treatment that a barbarbus enemy, with power to outrage, wills to commit. We have heard more or less well authenticated stories of the barbarous treatment of Canadian and Allied prisoners. Now we have official, independent and impartial proof of its atrocity. United States Ambassador Gerard has investigated and reported upon the treatmeet of prisoners in German camps, and his report of the most outstanding instances of barbarism, and outrage, and ill-treatment, stirs the blood like a Cavell murder. Insufficient and loathsome food; insufficient clothing; enforced and designed exposure of prisoners to spotted typhus, with isolation refused and proper medical treatment denied; prisoners guarded by dogs — other than those in uniforms of soldiers, are the chief items of German refinements of cruelty in the maltreatment of prisoners.

Some of these victims are men and boys we perhaps know and were school chums and comrades of in anti-bellum days. To free them, to avenge them, should be an appeal to every young Canadian. This can only be accomplished by destroying the monstrous system of militarism, founded on the doctrine of force and violence, and all evil inspirations; and this can only be done by united effort to win the victory over the powers of evil, by every available man joining the colours. With all the appeals to our eligible citizenship to do its duty in this regard, the crowning appeal [illegible] in Peterborough treatment of Canadian, and British, and Allied prisoners of war, helpless under the cruel domination of their barbarous oppressors.

GOOD FOR UNCLE SAM.

Uncle Sam is an odd old boy, full of contradictions and inconsistencies, but with some splendidly good points. He has developed an infinite capacity for turning "the other cheek." He will lie down meekly under outrages that scout the protection of his flag and mean the death of his citizens, but he will see the eagle screeching over the loss of a little money-making trade — the detention of a cargo of hog meat. Though Uncle Sam sets so much store by money that he seems to worship it, it can be said to his everlasting credit, that there are some things that he won't sell for money — things that money can't buy — immunity for wealth from punishment for wrong doing. Time after time we have seen criminals of high degree, as for as possession of money can exalt, as sternly and impartially punished as the criminal of low degree. Recently one Charles Munday, vice-president of a Chicago trust and savings bank, was charged with conspiring with a United States senator and others to defraud the bank of eight million dollars. In spite of all their wealth and the law's delays that money can command; in spite of all the political and social influence that money too frequently represents — they were convicted and must "do time" in a penal institution.

We applaud the United States for meting out even handed justice, and might well profit by its example. We have a noted alleged grafter, a millionaire contractor, one Thomas Kelly, charged with colossal frauds in connection with the construction of the Manitoba Parliament Buildings. He left Winnipeg and took refuge in Chicago, and yesterday his extradition and return to Canada to stand trial was ordered. His attorney says he will appeal against this judgment to the Supreme Court of the United States. If money can prevent it he will not come back. We shall see if money will be able to interfere with the processes of justice. If the case cited to the credit of United State, administration of justice, is regarded as a precedent, the extradition order will stand, and Mr. Kelly will be brought back to Canada to stand his trial. In this event it is hoped that no money, no political influence, will interfere with a fair trial, nor in case of proof of guilt, with a decree of as adequate punishment, in the case of the millionaire culprit, as would be pronounced against a pauper criminal.

THE CAMPAIGN FOR ECONOMY

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The campaign for economy in living as a vital necessity for financing a war which is costing Great Britain nearly $25,000,000 a day continues to be pressed. Imports are exceeding exports by nearly $5,000,000 a day, and consequently depreciating foreign exchange; so that England really pays about 5 per cent. more than the nominal prices for commodities bought in America. Restriction of imports is urged as one of the most obvious practical methods of economy.

That Government expenses must be decreased and the gap between exports and imports narrowed is agreed upon by all. Various and often conflicting remedies are proposed. A revival of the party of Protection is a noticeable symptom. Some Protectionist papers, notably The Morning Post, demand a high tariff on imports and one so framed that the colonies will have preference, diverting business from the United States to them. Thus the British Empire might live on its own resources so far as foodstuffs are concerned. The Post contends, and spent its money among its own people, as Germany is doing.

Lord Davenport, who has had long experience as a successful business man, told the House of Lords that the import of nonessential things through the Post of London alone reached $125,000,000 a year. He proposed total prohibition of the import of luxuries. But Lord Crewe replied that such a step would be impracticable, as many of the commodities came from allied nations already suffering commercial depression, while increases of the goods taxed by tariff would involve an addition to the customs establishment more expensive than the value of the taxes collected.

Several statesmen have proclaimed the necessity of keeping up Great Britain's general manufacturing as the best method of trying to balance the foreign trade account. The military expert of The London Times opposes this theory strongly. The German principle is to rope in every man who can fight," he says, and to subordinate the requirements of trade to those of victory. certain that if victory can be achieved everything else will come with it." He considers that thirty new divisions should be added to the army by next August, and inquires that it would profit to say that export trade was flourishing, but that the armies were defeated.

The Daily News replies that the military situation cannot be treated as though it were a kind of vacuum. What is the use of victory in the field if the army which wins it cannot be kept in being for lack of money to maintain it?" the paper inquires. "Of what avail is our naval supremacy if we have no longer the funds or the credit to buy the food of which the navy assures the safe passage?"

E. T. Good, a writer on economics, claims that the actual earnings in many factoris are 100 per cent. more than usual, and dclares that a large proportion of the abnormal earnings are being spent in a way that increases the adverse trade balance.

The Economist discusses Premier Asquith's statement of the financial position with a word of warning on the same line. It says:

"It is possible for the country to carry on the war on this scale and to assist its allies on this scale, and perhaps even to recruit on this scale It is not possible for it to go on warring and recruiting and spending £5,000,000 a day, and at the same time to go on increasing its drink bill at the rate of £16,000,000 a year and indulging its fancy in grand pianos, cheap jewellry, and more or less cheap motor cars."

The Statist discusses the matter in the same vein. It says:

"Hitherto the British people have financed this great war in the same way as they would have financed a new Government building, a new county jail, or a new Post Office. They have assumed that expenditures for such a purpost would be met after they had supplied themselves with their necessaries, comforts, and luxuries. The greatest reserve which the country possesses is still untouched—the power to reduce its expenditure upon comforts and luxuries, and by so doing to set free the additional money needed by the nation for war purposes."

That there is widespread and enormous extravagance caused by the necessity of giving great contracts without time for careful investigation and through the reckless habits of living made possible by inflated wages to workmen and high separation allowances to soldiers' families, is very many one recognizes. The growth of the movement against extravagance is visible daily, but no crystallized plan has yet been proposed by the Government — only hints of increased taxation.

After a lengthy investigation the United States bureau of standards has decided that the lightning rod, when properly installed, is a trustworthy means of protecting property.

A NEW WAY TO MEET THE DEMAND FOR MORE PRODUCTION

While the Germans are struggling to find substitutes, and are even reported to be serving out flour made from wood pulp, Professor Bottomley has announced in Great Britain an extraordinary means of increasing the production of ordinary agricultural products. According to the London Chronicle, he delighted members of the Royal Bontanic Society recently with a demonstration of his discovery. The process consists in the treatment of ordinary raw peat by means of bacteria, which, within four or six days, turns the peat into a black substance containing fifty times as much valuable plant food material as ordinary manure. On ordinary agricultural land peat has given an increase in potatoes of 123 per cent. compared with those grown with no manure, and of 75 per cent. and 41 per cent. compared with those grown in artificial manure and farmyard manure respectively. In one experiment with onions treatment with the peat was followed by an increase of 41 per cent. Equally successful results have been achieved with turnips, radishes, parsnips, peas, and other vegetables, and the effect of humogen on flowers, both with regard to the foliage and blossom, is very remarkable. In another instance, a box was filled with moss, planted with four potatoes, and placed on the roof of the college in the Strand. Once every week the moss was watered with extract from the bacterised peat. After eight weeks the box was as full as it could be of fine new potatoes.

If humogen, as Professor Bottomley calls this plant food, turns out as successfully on a large scale as it has in the experiments, the growing of farm and garden produce will be revolutionised. It foreshadows an era of plenty, and an era of cheap living, such as the world never knew. Considering the standing of Professor Bottomley—he had been professor of botany in King's College, London, since 1893, and is a recognized authority on biology as well — it seems strange that the British Board of Agriculture should decline to take the study up on the ground that "no result had yet been obtained which demonstrated its utility for agricultural purposes on a field scale." We give the hint to our own Department of Agriculture, which would doubtless be only too delighted to have the opportunity of being the first to test it on a large scale. Only one month before the war, a German professor tried to inveigle Professor Bottomley into giving him a sample of the bacteria for the German Board of Agriculture. He didn't get it.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

THE EFFECTS OF THIS GREAT WAR UPON THE WEALTH OF THE WORLD

It is rather staggering, yet stimulating (there seems to be a subtle connection between stimulants and staggering) to learn on the high authority of such a sound financial critic as the London Statist that "the war does not mean any appreciable destruction of the world's capital as it existed prior to the war." The Statist admits that the total war expenditure of the nations from July 31, 1914, to September 30, 1915, approximate $17,000 mill ons, and that the belligerents are now spending at the rate of about $22,500 millions a year, and that where property (houses, ships, machinery, etc.) is injured by gunfire, by bombs, or in any other way, or houses, buildings, machinery, and other property are allowed to deteriorate, or stocks of goods allowed to accumulate before the war are consumed and are not replaced, there is destruction of pre-war capital. But our esteemed contemporary contends that the wastage of old wealth through the war is made good, by the creation of new wealth of a permanent character. It argues that even should the war continue, unless it be a very long one, it may be doubted if there will be any appreciable reduction of the pre-war wealth of the belligerent countries, while the wealth of the neutral countries as a whole should show appreciable increases.

If this view is correct, and we believe it is, the enormous war expenditures will not involve a diminution in the aggregate pre-war wealth of the world. There will, however, be redistribution of national wealth, with a vengeance. The Statist holds, with excellent reason, that the destruction by Zeppelins is negligible, and the destruction of shipping by submarines quite unimportant. Then the substitution of trench warfare, for the defence of populous towns means that the destruction of buildings and other fixed property will be minimized. The war expenditures will prevent the normal growth of wealth, but will not materially decrease the pre-war wealth of the world. Normally the wealth of nations increases every year about as follows: Great Britain, $2,000 millions; Germany, $1,500 millions; France, $1,000 millions, the other belligerents in the aggregate $3,000 millions. This means a loss altogether of $22,500 millions, a by no means negligible figure. The war has forced the nations into unusual economies, and has greatly stimulated new enterprises and increased production. These will go far to offset the war expenditure.

The interesting question is what will be the effect of all these influences after the war? Obviously the different nations will be variously affected. Germany stands to lose most, through the utter demoralization of her commerce and shipping, and perhaps even more by her loss of prestige and moral character. She will also lose by having forced the nations into finding new sources of supply, which will surely be protected for many years from German competition by legislative enactment. The greatest and most characteristically German monopolies are things of the past. The nations will never again place themselves at the mercy of Germany.

The world's greatest loss of pre-war wealth will be in the loss of human life. The loss of millions of human lives, the crippling of many millions of the world's best men, the ravages of disease, and the impoverishing of widows and orphans, mean an unprecedented sacrifice of actual and potential wealth. It is part of the price the world has to pay for the inordinate ambition of a rotten dynasty and the egotism of a nation smitten by the curse of a gross materialism. — Montreal Herald.

GEN. KUROPATKIN TO LEAD RUSSIANS AGAINST BULGARS

LONDON, Nov. 25.—According to despatches from Berlin General Kuropatkin has been chosen to lead the Russian invasion of Bulgaria.

The Bucharest correspondent of the Geneva Tribune sends a despatch in which Take Jonescu, a former member of the Roumania cabinet and a leader of the Liberal party in Roumania, is quoted as expressing the belief that the Roumania government "is desirous of following the national policy and soon will intervene in the war on the side of the Entente powers.

Mr. Jonescu, according to this despatch, also said that he had learned from Petrograd that a strong Russian force was ready near the Roumanian frontier to aid Roumania against Austria and Bulgaria.

The Roumanian Premier, M. Bratiano, in a conversation regarding the relations between Roumania and Russia, is also quoted as saying: "They are better than ever before."

New Russian formations have appeared on the Riga front and have proved themselves the masters of the troops that remain under command of General Hindenburg.

The official statement from Petrograd last night mentions the regiments from Lithuania as displaying "the greatest possible courage."

Hindenburg's war worn troops were again forced to retire in the fighting before Riga. They temporarily assumed the offensive, but reinforcements rushed up by the Russians compelled them to evacuate all the ground occupied.

On the left bank of the Dvina there has been sharp fighting in which the Russians were the aggressors. They occupied a position there of some importance On the rest of the front there were some encounters all of which left the combatants pretty much where they were

10 SHOES WORN OUT IN WAR TO ONE IN PEACE

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Lyndon Oak Ramsdell, a representative of the Turner Tanning Machinery Company, of Peabody, Mass., returned yesterday on the White Star liner Lapland. He has been selling machinery to be used in the manufacture of shoes for soldiers in France.

He said he had traversed the entire "country behind the exception of the battlefields and had found shoes being turned out for the soldiers as fast as the men and women workers could make them.

"A soldier wears out ten times as many shoes in war as he does in times of peace," he said. "All the leather used bears the export stamp of the United States.

"The situation at present is that the soldiers must have shoes whether the civilian population go barefoot or not."

HYPNOTISM AS A CURE FOR SOLDIERS' WOUNDS

Many Wonderful Results Obtained From Hypnotic Power—Sight and Hearing Recovered

Hypnotism is the medicine for the "wounded" human mind. The science is not, of course, still imagine a fevery person [illegible] or a gifted and [illegible] that is duly prescribed by [illegible] with [illegible] In the hands of a [illegible] method [illegible] the law [illegible] it [illegible] used by [illegible] is of [illegible] value in [illegible]. There are soldier [illegible] who are actually blind, deaf and dumb, and others partially paralysed, simply through the tremendous shock from the explosion of a shell near them. In other cases, men have lost their memories, or their vision has become contracted, so that they can see only straight in front of them, like a horse with blinkers.

Broken in Mind Only

Others can scarcely walk, only being able to shuffle along sideways—not, many of these brave fellows are without a single scratch of a wound on their bodies; they are broken in mind. An awful shock, or series of shocks, has distorted their nervous system and so made them blind or deaf or paralysed. The power of suggestion, exerted after the patient has been partially hypnotised by a doctor, is the only cure, cure for such cases. The surgeon's knife is useless; there is no medicine that will help them.

The soldier patients, if able to leave their beds, are seated in comfortable chairs in a perfectly quiet and darkened room. They are told to make themselves quite easy, to relax all their muscles, and not to worry about anything at all. Then, the doctor places his hands gently on their heads, and strokes them quietly. He will bring his palms slowly and gently down over their foreheads and eyes, and whisper soothingly to them: "You are feeling sleepy, you are tired, very tired; now you are going to sleep, you are nearly asleep—sleep—sleep." And, sooner or later, the nerve-racked soldier, who has probably suffered the tortures of sleeplessness for many nights, will answer the suggestion and fall into a light, peaceful slumber. He is hypnotised.

When the soldier is in this light sleep, the doctor will then continue to speak to him, very calmly and quietly, making his healthy suggestions on the mind that has become diseased. "You are feeling a little better, your head has stopped aching, you are much better now, and you are happier"—and so on.

Not So Easy As it Looks

This treatment sounds very easy, but, needless to say, it requires a qualified hypnotist, a clever mind doctor, to effect a cure. After the treatment, the man is told that he is awake—and he is, immediately! Standing up, he will feel just a trifle dazed, but he will also be much better, and obviously more cheerful. A typical case, in which a soldier suffering from shell shock was cured by hypnotic treatment, has been described by Dr. A. Feiling. A young bandsman was buried by a shell explosion near Ypres, and then lost his memory entirely for every single detail of his life that had happened before the incident. He did not even recognise his own father and mother; he said that he had never before seen his home when he was taken there, and that he had never seen a bullet. But, after a course of hypnotic treatment this soldier completely regained his memory.

Carrying Hand Grenades

Grenade fighting has become of the utmost importance in modern trench warfare, and there are a dozen varieties of these weapons. Whenever there is an attack by either side a number of men are specially told off as grenade throwers. In a charge the grenade throwers usually are well in the rear, and carry their grenades in special bags or panniers. Each man has two panniers strapped round him. The panniers are made of strong canvas, and hold ten or a dozen grenades. These grenades, by the way, have each a long piece of webbing attached to them, which unrolls when the missile is thrown, and causes the grenade to fall head downward and so insure explosion.

A YEAR INDOORS.

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart had and smothering feelings came on till I thought that I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me so I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework, and have a family of ten."

GERMANS PURPOSE TO BLAST TRENCHES IN WINTER WARFARE

PETROGRAD, Nov. 25.—The correspondent of the Russky Slove gives a detailed account of the preparations the Germans are making for a Winter campaign in Russia. After attending first to the question of warmth, the Germans have devoted their ingenuity to inventions for concealing their Winter trenches and the movements of troops and supply trains and to means of dealing with snowdrifts.

Apart from warm clothing several new ideas have been evolved. Light metal buildings, ready to be put together, and provided with steam heaters, are destined to afford temporary warmth even in the trenches. Supplies of sleeping sacks are being procured. Provision is also being made for the delivery of enormous quantities of spirits, and strict orders are being issued that the soldiers must rub themselves all over with them daily. Field Marshal von Hindenburg is said to have issued an order signifying that any commander who loses a single man from frost deserves to be shot.

Among the most curious preparations is the gathering together of quantities of calico, linen, and holland—indeed, any light materials which are white. Apart from collections of domestic linen throughout Germany, the whole region held by the Germans in Russia has been systematically pillaged of such materials. The object is to cover uniforms, trenches, and supply carts, in the hope that they will be invisible amid the snow. The Germans have invented special tripod arrangements carrying a vast expanse of white material, under which they hope to bivouac unseen by aeroplanes; and another device is intended to allow a line advancing to an attack to creep up invisibly.

As the ground during the Russian Winter freezes for a depth of from three to six feet, trench digging becomes practically impossible under the ordinary circumstances of war. The Germans have therefore organised special so-called "boring commands" whose duty is to creep forward in the night and make a succession of borings with special instruments and insert explosives. These are to be fired when all is ready, so that the soldiers will be easily able to shovel the debris away and make places which will afford them adequate protection. Similarly borings containing explosives are to take the place in Winter of wire entanglements.

THE ROLL CALL.

(By an Australian Soldier in the Dardanelles.)

We have tendered the toll, we have paid the price, we have heaved and hauled and bled,
And set in the shrine of our brave brothers-in-arms are the names of Australia's dead.
We have given our share of the grist that goes to grind in the War Lord's mill—
But every pick a that another has left in a place that you can fill.

Oh, some were killed in the open boats before they had time to land,
And some were killed in the rally and rush across the sloping sand;
But whether they died in the breaking surf, or whether they died on the hill,
Yet every gap in the ranks this day is a gap that you can fill.

You scan the scroll of our sacrifice, and you hope that the list will end.
Are you fool the throb that tears your throat as you say, "He was a friend."
And its "Poor old Bob—I knew him well—or "Bill, my God! not Bill!"—
But every place that a pal has left in a place that you can fill.

Do you thankfully still that they left, that they alone passed through the [illegible] while the [illegible] a spray of steel on a river of rolling hooves?
And now? . . . In the same old town there are shadows who've shocking still.
All blind to the fact that the place that's left is the place they've got to fill.

The far off note of the bugle call and the pulse of a distant drum
Tell not the tale of the men who've gone, but the men who've got to come;
Oh, Duty is calling [illegible] calling—their only [illegible] to stilled
Till the last of the [illegible] in Australia's ranks by Australian [illegible] are filled.

Desolate Valley Tells Grim Tale of Vilna Battle

Mejsagola, near Vilna, Russia, Oct 8 (by Courier to Berlin, mail to New York).—To-day is Sunday and we have motored out to the valley of Mejszagola where the battle for Vilna was fought. Our way lay through abondoned trenches and barbed wire entanglements, stretched through cemeteries, cabbage patches and potato fields.

Entering the ruins of Mejszagola, we obtained the first real view of the battlefield; and in its centre, the dilapidated skeleton of what in peace time was a church. It was all so quiet! One could hardly realize that from the second to the eleventh of September, 45,000 of the Russian guard and the German landstrum were locked, in this 8-mile valley, in a seething death-struggle. It was but one of the terrible decisive engagements of this war, about which the public has scarcely heard.

This battle was the beginning of the fall of Vilna, the first city the Czar tried to save when he took personal command of his army. Vilna was a beatuiful modern city about the size of Indianapolis; a terminal on the main rail line to Petrograd.

The czar entrenched 500,000 troops about the city, including 8 divisions of his personal guard. Kovno had fallen and Hindenburg was coming. September 2nd the armies met at Mejszagola and for nine days the crash and roar of bedlam reigned in the Russians' hopeless task of checking the Teutons' advance. The night of the eleventh the Germans stormed an entanglement and the trench back of it, delivered heavy flank attacks and were commanders of the whole position, had 20,000 prisoners and sealed Vilna's fate.

Skeletons Plowed Up.

We stopped before the church. Ten paces brought us to an old graveyard in which the storm of shells had plowed up the skeletons of those long dead and scattered them about, stark and white, like an army of fallen ghosts lying in the wake of battle, grinning at the daylight, The green sod of the surrounding fields was strewn with the remnants of shells which had exploded in mid-air and rained their devilish iron and fire on the struggling men. The white church walls were splashed with red.

We returned to the church. Peasants were silently passing in and out. We lifted our hats and tip-toed inside. The floor save for narrow passages to the altar, was buried in straw. The roof was torn to pieces and more than one shell had exploded inside, for pictures, statues of Christ, altar cloths, candle sticks, and benches were smashed and torn. Before the unrecognizable altar knelt a woman and a girl heads bowed, sobbing. A big, six-foot, fur-clad peasant came in and knelt in the straw half-way down the aisle. An old woman who had been motionless beside the splintered pulpit, began crawling around and around it. Save for the staccto flapping of a loose sheet of tin on the steeple roof as the gusty wind swept over it, the house of God and the battlefield about, were silent.

We sauntered through the town, past the black piles of burned homes and out into the Russian trenches. These, dug slightly below the crest of the hill, were architecturally so perfect that they blended into the landscape 200 feet away. These trenches command the valley, across which, on the forest's fringe, were the German trenches. The green fields between were peppered with the black spots that artillery fire makes. We walked the tops of the Russian trenches, which are built of heavy logs and cement blocks covered with five and six layers of green sod. Once I looked down. A dead Russian stared up at me.

Single Graves Elsewhere.

Scattered everywhere were caps, coats, shoes, food, bottles and personal effects. Unused rifle ammunition lay like seed sown on a new field. Here and there were 15 and 21 centimeter shells, unexploded, still hugging their death-dealing power. Bits of white paper bearing firing line reports that had been telephoned to the artillery positions, scuttered crazily about the desolate field in the breeze. Everywhere were single graves; some marked with cross and helmet, others barren.

We walked to the edge of the thick woods, then back to the first line German position. Torn Russian and German uniforms, blood-stained knives, bayonets, guns, belts, helmets, caps, overcoats and graves were strange bowers in this weird garden that death grew in the green-sapped valley 'twixt here and the Russian emergency trenches on the far slope.

From among the Russians and Germans lying there side by side in death, I picked up a German belt buckle bearing the inscription: "God With Us." The Russian bibles scattered about were so numerous as to be uncountable. Where the fields postmaster had arrived during the heavy fighting, letters and packages from home whitened the ground. On a little mound I found a letter, addressed in a feminine hand, from Dresden—a letter from home, unopened, for the soldier beneath the mound. I stared at the mound and the letter for a long time. Then I looked up. The sun was shining across the valley. And the valley was silent.

Too Many Tenants.

"I dreamed last night that I owned the earth."

"That was a pleasant dream."

"Quite the contrary. When the first of the month came around, 3,000,000 people threatened to move!"

BIG IRRIGATION CONGRESS OPENS AT BASSANO

Special to The Examiner:

BASSANO, Nov. 24.— As a vindication of an irrigation policy adapted years ago, involving millions of dollars and much labour, against which has been hurled caustic criticism, Western Canada opened the biggest irrigation congress in its history yesterday at Bassano, Alberta, the town which sprung into existence with the gigantic dam and irrigation project favoured by J. S. Dennis, assistant to Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, backed by the millions of the Canadian Pacific dignataries of the Provincial and Dominion government, including the Lieutenant Governor and Premier of Alberta, railway officials, farmers and engineers, joined to make this really the first year a memorable one. Western Canada has its largest crop this year, her farmers are accordingly prosperous, while war prices of land products maintain a condition reached as a result of irrigation which means better conditions in the farmers' home, more widely spread mixed farming, larger immigration, diversified crops to make level markets and greater yields all over the Canadian west.

The convention will last three days. An inspection will be made of the Canadian Pacific's huge Bassano dam, Brooks' aquaduct and seventeen million dollar irrigation project.

CAPT. ACKERMAN THE GUEST OF HONOUR AT ENJOYABLE DINNER

Was Dined Last Evening by His Fellow Members of the Peterborough Club and Incidentally Announced That He Expected to Return to the Front with the 93rd Peterboro' Battalion.

BANQUET A SUCCESS

It was a happy gathering of the members of the Peterborough Club that sat down to a dinner in honour of one of their members, Capt. Chas. H. Ackerman at the Club last evening. About 100 members were present and enjoyed a sumptuous meal prepared by Mr. T. H. Hooper.

At the right of the President, Mr. E. G. Patterson, sat the guest of the evening, Capt. Ackerman, and together with them at the guests' table were Lieut. Col. Walker, Messrs. T. A. S. Hay, R. R. Hall, ex-M.P., Jas. Kendry, ex-M.P., T. E. Bradburn, ex-M.P.P., R. B. Rogers, C.E., and Major Canon Davidson.

Mr. Patterson was chairman of the evening, and the following toast list was on the programmme:

"The King."

"The Army and Navy," proposed by Mr. Hall, responded to by Lieut.-Col. Walker.

"Our Guest," proposed by Mr. Denham, responded to by Capt. Ackerman.

"Members of the Club Serving the Empire," proposed by Mr. Rogers, responded to by Major Canon Davidson, Capt. Lech, Lieut. Widdifield and Lieut. Rackham, who were present of the thirteen members of the Club who are serving the Empire in the present war, the names of which are as follows: Lieut. C. H. Rogers, Lieut. A. B. Colville, Major A. L. Fefevre, Capt. A. W. McPherson, M.D., Major S. T. Medd, Lieut. W. H. Munro, Capt. H. Ritchie, Capt. Burnham, Major N. H. Sutton, M.D., Major Canon Davidson, Lieut. C. R. Widdifield, Capt. C. H. Ackerman, Lieut. G. K. Rackham.

Sir Sam Hughes was expected, but a letter of regret at his inability to be on hand was read, as well as from a number of other members of the Club who were absent from the city.

All the speeches were cheering and inspiring and advantage was taken of the occasion by the speakers to show what the army and navy had accomplished since the war had started, what Canada had done and has still to do and what Peterborough had done and is prepared to do. The 57th Regiment of Peterborough, has sent 23 officers as well as hundreds of men to the front or are in preparation.

Capt. Ackermen in his remarks had high praises for the British regiment that relieved the Canadians in the battle where so many Peterborough men fell, which, while the stand of the Canadians had received due attention, the bravery of the British regiment had passed unnoticed. He expected to return to the firing line with the 93rd.

After the singing of God Save the King, Messrs. J. Crane, Asa Huckye, H. W. Morphet and others furnished a vocal and musical programme.

A. McG. Cumming—Who was lost on the tug F. C. Barnes, which foundered in Lake Ontario near Oswego, N. Y., three weeks ago.

A SLOW DEATH

Prejudice dies hard, and very often at a great deal of cost to the eyes. It may be you have a prejudice against wearing Glasses, while your eyes are far from comfortable and your sight disturbed. The kernel of the whole matter is: That if Glasses are to be worn, be very sure that the man you choose to examine your eyes is competent and worthy of your confidence, so that if he knows you are better without Glasses he will have the honesty to tell you so. We do not say that Dr. Lacey's (formerly Tait's) is the one place; there are honest oculists in every community; but we solicit your confidence with the promise that the best care and judgment will be given you.—410 George Street (opposite Examiner Office) d44

CIVIC RECEPTION ONCE A MONTH

Arrangements Completed to Welcome Returning Soldiers - First One Will Be on December 4th

The first civic reception to returning soldiers, sponsored by the Reception Committee of the City Council, will be held on Saturday evening, 4th December.

This was decided upon at a meeting of the Reception Committee held last evening. Ald. Dobbin, chairman of the committee, pointed out that a number of soldiers have returned lately, and so far have not been officially welcomed. The committee decided to hold a reception once every month.

Aldermen Dobbin and Edgar were appointed a committee to make all arrangements for lighting and heating the Market Hall for the occasion They were also authorized to make such arrangements as they might deem necessary.

Speakers will be selected for each meeting.

THEIR WORK APPRECIATED

St. Andrew's Patriotic League Receive Grateful Acknowledgment

That the St. Andrews' Church Patriotic League is doing a splendid work is indicated by the letter printed below which has been received by Mrs. J. John, 312 Rubidge street, from Mr. Noel Marshall, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

The letter reads:

Dear Madam, I have much pleasure in acknowledging receipt of shipment of supplies which have arrived here safely and are now in transit to our London commissioner for distribution.

You will be glad to know that all supplies are being shipped out as fast as we receive them, as we must keep our warehouses in England and France well stocked. With many thanks for your continued co operation, Yours truly,

NOEL MARSHALL,
Chairman Executive Committee

UNITED STATES PARTY FACES DEATH IN THE FROZEN NORTH

DAYTON, Ohio, Nov. 25.—That the Donald MacMillan exploring party may be lost in the North Sea beyond hope of rescue for this winter, at least, is indicated in a cablegram just received by Judge Carroll Sprigg from the Danish explorer, Knud Rasmussen.

The cable reads as follows:

"Kjoebenhave, Denmark, Nov. 15. —Mail from Crockerland explorers arrived and delivered to your embassy. Cluett arrived North Star Bay Sept. 12, after thirty-five days ice hindrance and motor damage. Dared not go to Etah account autumn ice. Missionary motor boat sent to Etah to bring explorers to Cluett.

"RASMUSSEN."

As the relief ship Cluett would have to be out of North Star Bay by the second week in October it is feared she is icebound. It is said there is not sufficient food aboard to last through the winter

ALL SINGLE MEN FIRST

Summoning to the Colours in Britain After 30th November.

Lord Derby is authorised by the Prime Minister to express his surprise that his statement in the House of Commons on 2nd November should be considered in any way ambiguous, says the London Times of recent date.

The Prime Minister on that occasion pledged not only himself but his Government when he stated that if young men did not under the stress of national duty come forward voluntarily, other and compulsory means would be taken before the married men were called upon to fulfil their engagement to serve.

Lord Derby is further authorized to state definitely that,

If young men medically fit and not indispensable to any business of national importance, or to any business conducted for the general good of the community do not come forward voluntarily before 30th November, the Government will after that date take the necessary steps to redeem the pledge made on 2nd November.

It must be clearly understood that no marriage contracted after registration day (15th August) will entitle any man to be relegated to the married groups.

Whether a man is indispensable or not to his business will be decided not by the man or his employer, but by competent authorities and tribunals which are being set up to consider such cases.

The instructions which will be issued to the local tribunals will make adequate provision for dealing with special or exceptional cases.

In other words, compulsion for single men is now in force. If they don't go they will be taken after this month.

The order in which groups of men will be called begins with single men at the age of 18 and ends with those 40 years old, each year from 18 to 40 comprising a group. Married men are similarly divided in the same number of groups, but will not be called until the groups of single men are all in khaki.

POTS WAR LOSSES AT 10,000,000 MEN

Survivor of Zouaves of Civil War, Compares Slaughter with That at Former Great Battles.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25. — General Jacob Eugene Duryee, son of General Abram Duryee, organiser of the Fifth Regiment, New York Volunteers, better known as Duryee's Zouaves, of Civil War renown, and the sole survivor of the forty officers of that regiment, is completing a history of the Zouaves and in the final chapter has drawn parallels between the civil war and the great struggle in Europe. He estimates the casualties of the present war as more than 10,000,000, or a number equal to the population of New York State.

General Duryee entered the civil war as a minor officer under his father in the Zouaves. Later he was given command of the Second Maryland, which he led at the Battle of Antietam. Since the war he has lived most of the time in California, coming East once a year. He is now in New York.

"The figures of this war," said General Duryee last night, "make the great encounters of the past look like skirmishes in comparison with the clashes upon the battlefields of Europe.

"The following is a summary of twelve great battles of the nineteenth century, where more than 125,000 men were engaged, with the killed and wounded and the time taken in each battle:

	Men Engaged	Killed and Wounded	Time Taken in Each Battle
Austerlitz	140,000	26,000	1 day
Aspern	170,000	45,000	2 days
Perodino	244,000	75,000	1 day
Leipsic	440,000	92,000	3 days
Waterloo	170,000	45,000	6 hours
Solferino	220,000	21,000	1 day
Antietam	126,000	21,910	10 hours
Gettysburg	164,000	27,000	3 days
Wilderness	179,000	25,000	3 days
Spotsylvania	150,000	25,000	5 days
Koeniggratz	417,000	25,000	1 day
Gravelotte	200,000	20,000	1 day
	2,545,000	407,304

"The statistics of the men engaged and the killed and wounded are taken from a book published in 1898 entitled 'Stonewall Jackson and the American Civil War,' by Lieut. Co. G. F. R. Henderson, who states that 'although this return has been compiled from the most trustworthy source, it can only be taken as approximately correct.' This can readily be understood, for after the battle of Waterloo the French casualties were never officially recorded, but they were doubtless enormous. The army practically ceased to exist as an organized force.

"Eight of these battles were fought in Europe and four in the United States. Five of the eight were in various campaigns under Napoleon. The remaining three were in the following wars: Franco-Austrian, 1859; Austro-Prussian, 1866, and the Franco-German, 1870. The men engaged in the above battles numbered 2,545,000, and the killed and wounded 407,304. Although these figures seem of great magnitude, it must be remembered they cover a century of time.

"How has it been with the twentieth century? For the first fourteen years the world appeared quiet and peaceful without any manifestations of serious trouble, and it was not until the 25th of July, 1914, when Austria declared war on Serbia after the latter had refused to comply with all but one of her demands following the assassination of the Crown Prince and Princess of Austria, that war broke out. Just one month had elapsed since this awful tragedy and the bleeding end of this horrible war.

"The conflict which has followed is more terrible than any recorded in ancient or modern history. A conflict where civilization, humanity, conventions, and laws of conduct on the high seas have been thrown to the winds has caused trouble throughout the entire world.

"Here are figures published on the 1st of August in this country. They are said to be computed from official and semi-official sources: France, killed 400,000, wounded 700,000, prisoners and missing 300,000, total 1,400,000; Russia, killed 733,000, wounded 1,092,000, prisoners and missing not including Warsaw campaign, 770,000, total 3,485,000. Since the publication of these figures Russia is said to have lost heavily. On Sept. 14 the following announcement was made in the House of Commons of British casualties: Total, 381,953; killed and died of wounds, officers, 4,965, men, 70,923; wounded, officers, 9,073; men, 241,068; missing, officers, 1,501; men, 53,446. These figures were for the army alone. On Aug. 6, the Canadian casualties were announced in Ottawa to total 10,650, of which 1,877 were killed, 6,738 wounded, and 2,035 missing. Canada was recently said to have sent 80,000 men to the front. Australian casualties have not been found.

"On Oct. 26 last the Ideuwe Rotterdamsche Courant, as quoted by Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent, gave German losses from Oct. 11 to Oct. 20 as 54,424 in dead, wounded and missing. The total Prussian losses are given at 2,021,008. The newspaper says there have also been issued 284 Bavarian, 200 Saxon, 286 Wurttemberg, and 52 naval casualty lists, as well as lists of officers and under-officers with the Turkish army. The Courant figures the total losses to the Central Powers at 5,000,000.

"On Oct. 26, The London Daily Mail said the last thirty Prussian casualty lists issued contained the names of 150,901 officers and men, killed, wounded, or missing. This brings the total Prussian losses published to 2,026,200. The lists do not include 228 Bavarian, 211 Saxon, 258 Wurttemberg, and 54 navy lists. The last lists included the names of 77 airmen killed, 75 wounded, 9 missing, and 2 prisoners, and 4 Generals killed and 2 wounded.

"The total German losses up to date are estimated at about 4,500,000. Among the latest casualties are many killed by poison gas. The losses of telephone and telegraph battalions in the trenches are very heavy.

"Since these figures were printed some of the biggest losses of the European war have occurred on both sides. It is evident that the casualties in all the armies at war in Europe amount to more than 10,000,000 of men, equal to the entire population of the State of New York. How insignificant seem the losses of our great war compared with these figures from Europe, and the end is not in sight."

FISKE O'HARA'S NEW PLAY

Is Entitled "Kilkenny"

Augustus Pitou, Jr., will present the favourite Irish tenor, Fiske O'Hara, in a new comedy, "Kilkenny," by Augustus Pitou, Sr. The story is filled throughout with delightful Irish witticisms and humorous situations, and will be played by an exceptionally clever company. Mr O'Hara will sing several new songs written especially for this new play among which may be mentioned "That's What an Irishman Means," "Century Mary Clary," "Ireland is Ireland to Me," "Dear Mother Mine," and "When It's Moonlight in Mayo." Superb scenic effects and a wealth of beautiful costumes promise to make "Kilkenny" the most successful play Mr. O'Hara has appeared in. The local engagement is for Tuesday, November 30.

KELLY IS TO COME BACK

Winnipeg Contractor Ordered To Be Extradited from Chicago.

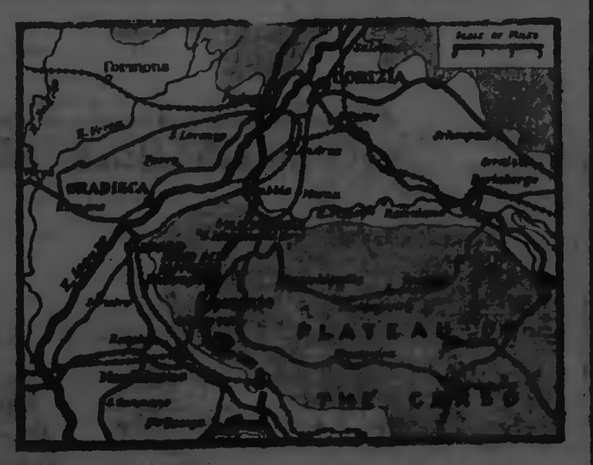
CHICAGO, Nov. 25—Thomas Kelly millionaire contractor, accused of defrauding the Provincial Government in connection with the erection of new Parliament buildings at Winnipeg, Man., was ordered extradited to Canada by Judge Landis in the United States District Court, affirming the decision of extradition given by United States Commissioner Mason and denying Mr. Kelly's petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

Kelly's attorney announced that he would appeal the decision to the Supreme Court of the United States. He was given ten days in which to file the appeal.

Kelly was then taken back to the county jail at Waukegan, Ill.

For nearly two months the wealthy contractor, who was one of the central figures in the inquiry into the contracts for the Manitoba Parliament Buildings, fought against extradition. In his ruling Judge Landis found that the contentions of three charges against Kelly were in favour of the Canadian Government in spite of the argument of counsel for the defendant that the offences were not extraditable.

Since the hearing before the Federal Commissioner, Mr. Kelly has been held in the county jail at Waukegan, Illinois.



The Italian Campaign Against Goritz.— Announcement that the Italians have taken Podgora Heights lends new interest to the desperate but hitherto indecisive fighting on the Isonzo. If Goritz were taken the Italians could direct their attention towards a campaign against Trieste.

INFLATED PRICES PAID FOR SHIPS

Any Old Tub That Can Keep Afloat Is Being Pressed into Service

Any old kind of a "tub" that will keep afloat and carry cargo can command a record price these days. The scarcity of available tonnage has set new high records for freights and every day these are changing hands at figures double what they would have bought two years ago. A few examples have recently come to light:

The Japanese steamer Asama Maru has been sold for about $270,000. In 1913 she was sold for $125,000.

The Norwegian steamer Hercules, 2,439 tons register, and built at Sunderland in 1905, has been sold to neutrals for about $425,000. Her home port was Bergen. She was formerly a regular trader between Victoria and the Far East.

The British steamer Ivertay, an old trader out of North Pacific ports, has been sold for about $440,000, and renamed the Lexington. She still remains under the British flag.

The Danish bark Denmark, which loaded grain on the Pacific coast last season for the United Kingdom, has been sold for $45,750. She was built in 1892, and in 1904 she was sold for $15,750, or about half the price now paid for her. She is but 1,374 tons register.

PROF. HASLAM KILLED HIMSELF BY SHOOTING

Well-known Teacher of Music Met Tragic Death Yesterday.

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—Professor Elliott Haslam, Mus.Bach., Mus.Doc. acknowledged to be Canada's greatest authority on singing, committed suicide by shooting himself at his studio in the Carty Building, 220 Yonge Street, yesterday.

Prof. Haslam was about 60 years of age, reputed to be worth approximately $150,000, and enjoyed excellent health. No reason is known for his act. Professor Haslam, who lived at 68 Gloucester Street, returned to Canada from Europe at the outbreak of the war. He was a brother of Lady Walter Mitchell, of Yorkshire, England, and widely known as a thorough musician in the various musical centres of the world, London, Paris Vienna and New York were all places where he had conducted musical organizations or taught music.

Professor Haslam was born in London, England, and educated in France and Italy. He was a son of the great concert singer, John Haslam, a prominent figure of London's musical world for almost 30 years. After completing his education in Italy he returned to Paris, where he was appointed a violinist in the Paris Grand Opera Company. Later he was given the position of conductor of the opera company, and spent several seasons at Ostend. He was later brought to New York to the Metropolitan Opera House, where he organized and produced several French and German operas.

After spending several years in New York, Professor Haslam came to Toronto in 1887, when he started the Haslam Vocal Society. Later he returned to New York under Dvorak, and was appointed to the chair of Professor of Oratorial in the National Conservatory of Music. In 1895 he returned to Toronto and taught vocal music until 1900, when he went to Paris and opened a studio. During this period of his career he trained many of the world's most well-known singers. He returned to Toronto at the outbreak of the war, and opened his studio in Yonge Street. His only relative in Canada is Mr. Percy Mitchell, a nephew, who was at one time the Paris editor of the New York Herald.

During the past few days Professor Haslam suffered from a severe cold and a sign at the entrance to his studio informed his students that their classes would be postponed. Late last night, his landlady, Mrs. Arthur Bowen, noticed him in his room and asked him if he would like a cup of tea. He refused. John Budal, caretaker of the building, alarmed by the report of a shot this morning, visited the studio and found the professor prostrate on the floor, beside of his head horribly mangled and torn from the bullet which had entered the left side. The discharged revolver lay beside him. There was no note or nothing to show why such action had been committed. There will be no inquest.

PATRIOTIC WOMAN RETURNS ALLOWANCE

Mother of Sgt. H. V. Hamilton, of Bethany, Says She Can Get Along Without It

BOWMANVILLE, Nov. 25.—Mrs. Frances Hamilton of Bethany, whose son, Sergt. Harold Hector, Hamilton is serving in France under Lt.-Col. Ralston of Durham County, in the 4th Battery, 1st Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery, has, since her son enlisted, been in receipt, through the Canadian Patriotic Fund, of the patriotic allowance. The treasurer of the Counties Branch, enclosing the sum of $152.50, being the total sum which she has received from the fund, and writes as follows:

"I have not needed to use the money allowed to me by the Patriotic Fund. I can get along without it at present, so I am returning it so that it may be applied for the relief of those who are in greater need. I think that the grant might be cancelled in future, as I will try and get along without it."

LONDON PAPERS DID DAMAGE

WEAKENED ALLIES IN THE BALKANS

London Mail and Times Accused of Contributing to the Failure of British Diplomacy.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The British Government has begun an investigation to see how far the newspapers were responsible for the defeat of British diplomacy in the Balkans.

Announcement to this effect was made to-day by Sir John Simon, the Home Secretary. Sir John read an extract from the Russian newspaper Ruskoe Slowo, charging that responsibility for the failure of Anglo-French anad Russian diplomacy in the Balkans rested with the London Daily Mail and Times. Articles in these papers were re-published in Greek newspapers without comment as proof that the British acknowledged the shortcomings of their military organization.

"The Government is looking into this matter," declared the Home Secretary.

The extracts in the Russian papers stated that the Mail and Times systematically blackened the military and diplomatic measures of the British Government, and that the Germans naturally took advantage of this.

"Here's an item," said the telegraph editor, "about a New York man giving his wife a $50,000 tiara. That will make every wife in America want something of the kind."

"Kill the item," directed the proprietor. "What's the use of running a newspaper if you can't occasionally help your fellowman?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

MEN IN U. S. OFFER TO WED GERMAN GIRLS OR WIDOWS.

BERLIN.—An American who signs himself L. Merritt Smith writes to the Vossische Zeitung from Horatio burg, Calif.:

"We are twenty young men, all strong, healthy, and of good character. Recently we read in a San Francisco paper that the German government intends to induce foreigners to settle in Germany after the war, to marry German girls or widows, and to aid in the reconstruction of the empire.

"Nineteen of my friends and myself are willing to respond to this call and we desire to make the acquaintance of nice, respectable German widows under 30 years, who know some English and are not without means.

"We are all honest and sincere. Our desire is to marry good German women, as we are lonesome here and cannot find life partners because we are not wealthy.

"Photographs of ourselves and references will gladly be sent. In conclusion I want to state once more that with ladies who only want to flirt we do not wish to correspond."

More than 4,000,000 tons of ore a year are expected to be exported from iron mines in Algeria by French capitalists who have obtained concessions after more than ten years of effort.

THE GARY IDEA OF WORK IN SCHOOLS

Gary, Indiana, is not a large city. But it is likely one can see ideals of modern education realized more fully there than in any other place in the world.

There are gymnasiums and swimming pools in most of the buildings. There are a number of playgrounds about two acres each.

Moving pictures are exhibited in the school buildings free to the children and to the public.

All work is exceedingly practical. For instance, the boys in the turning department make their own baseball bats, Indian clubs, stools for the laboratories, and various articles for use in the home. In the paint shop pupils stain the teacher's desks and paint articles of furniture made in manual training classes. The laundry and sewing departments are run in conjunction and earn money which is utilized to paying instructors and helpers in these departments. To the cobbling departments children bring shoes that need to be repaired, and pupils get practical experience. In the blacksmith shop pupils repair articles used by themselves or at their homes. They make the iron work for the playground apparatus, and shoe horses belonging to the school department. At the same time they are taught the principles underlying each kind of work.

There are laboratories for botany, physics, chemistry, electricity, bacteriology and zoology. There are studios for music and art. All the regular subjects of instruction, such as arithmetic, German, Latin, history, and geography are taught in a practical way. For instance banking arithmetic is taught by an actual state bank operating in the schools. This bank is under the state bank inspector the same as any other state bank, but pupils of the schools are officers and customers. They deposit money and draw on their accounts to pay for their luncheons, their book rentals, etc.—M. V. O'Shea in December Mother's Magazine.

A WAR PROPHECY OF 1012.

Coincidence Between Father Zeebold's Prediction and Tolstoy's.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—Shortly before Count Tolstoy died he made, as most readers will recall, a strange prophecy, in which he predicted the present war and declared that it would be ended by a "Man from the North."

This mysterious figure from the North appears in a prediction made in the year 1012 by Father Zeebold, a monk in the Zurcken Monastery at Herfert, in Saxony. Arnold White (Vanoc) in The Referee refers to the prophecy, which, he remarks, is not tainted, as popular prophecies are usually tainted, with the invention of "evidence" after the event. Father Zeebold's prophecy, a copy of which by some strange chance, has survived in the Government archives of Ceylon, and the genuineness of which is vouched for by the Ceylon Government's Archivist, R. G. Anthonisz, is as follows:

"When I, Zeebold, had studied all the characteristics and movements of the heavenly signs I found from the position of these stars, following natural cause and effect, that the imperial power will not be permanently established till the year 1216, when a hero would, by chivalrous daring bring in the double eagle and wield the empire with renown, making also subject to him Austria, Hungary, and Bohemia, and holding sway over these kingdoms, while his house also continued to flourish up to the eighteenth century, when, in the year 1740, there will come confusion, rebellion, and great discord, and the empire be divided into three branches. Italy will suffer want and the City of Rome be laid waste.

"Thereafter will a victor, by great prowess, possess himself of the double eagle and rule the empire with renown, until, at last, the Lion of the North appear and assail the lands with much fierceness. Then will the red lion cast the eagle into the vale of darkness and once more rouse the white swan to anger; and he will maintain the empire for a long time, till the great God, in His infinite honour and power, break it up and make an end of it.

"Thus the prophecy of Daniel will go no further, and in the fulfillment of Nebuchadnezzar's dream will be seen that the end of the world is near."

Bulgar and Teuton Troops Now Occupy Pristina, Serbian Capital

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Mitrovica (the latest Serbian capital and Pristina have fallen to the Teutonic allies, and the Serbians have been forced off the railroad running from Mitrovica, south of the centre of new Serbia, through Uskub and Kiprili to the Gulf of Salonica.

Announcement of the fall of these two towns is contained in a German official statement issued to-day. The statement follows:

"Mitrovica has been taken by the Austro-Hungarian troops. Pristina has been taken by the German troops. The Serbians have been driven over the Sitnica River, west of Pristina."

The railway now lost to the Serbians in this sector is the one the southern part of which the Franco-British forces holds, and which would be used for the transportation of supplies and reinforcements to the Serbs in the central part of new Serbia, could it be freed of Austro-German-Bulgarian control at Kiprili and Uskub. Pristina is to the east of the railway and the river. It is to be presumed that here the Serbians have been driven back across the Kosovo plain to the hills west of the river. Mitrovica is to the north on the western bank of the same river. The continued holding of the two towns in spite of Austro-German attempts to capture them has been one of the encouraging features of the Serbian situation.

A despatch from the Havas Agency correspondent at Salonica says that after occupying Pristina by the Germans, the Bulgarians on that front attempted an enveloping movement against the Serbians in the Katchanik pass to the south. Serbian troops retreated to Albania, were rushed back and so far the attempts have not been successful. On the north-eastern front the correspondent says the Bulgarians were repulsed for the third time on November 22.

Many more transports heavily laden with troops arrived at Salonica on November 23, the correspondent says, adding that hundreds of Bulgarians taken prisoner by the French reached Salonica on Monday evening.

The Serbians at Monastir have been reinforced and Salonica despatch to the Temps predicts that the city will not be taken by the Bulgarians until Austro-German help arrives. Serbian troops from Ochrida, in south-western Serbia, Dibra, on the Albanian border to the north, the region of Krusevo, west of Prilep, and even as far north as Gostivar, south of Tetovo, have been sent to strengthen the army defending Monastir. Furthermore, quantities of provisions have been accumulated at Salonica, and are to be shipped to the Serbian forces in Southern Serbia by way of Monastir.

Tells of His Life in a German Prison Camp

Pte. Heber Rogers Writes Interesting Letter to His Father—Is Enjoying Good Health

Mr. R. B. Rogers, Hunter Street, received the following letter recently from his son, Pte. Heber Rogers, who is a prisoner in Germany:

Giessen, Germany,
Oct. 1, 1915.

Dear Father,

I received your letter of 26th September to-day, and was very glad to hear from you again. Mother's letter and card also reached me O.K. a few days ago. You wanted to know how my eye is. There is a small piece of steel just underneath the pupil. I can see out of that eye a little, but there seems to be a mist over it. However, it is getting better every day, and does not affect my other eye. The specialist in the hospital said I would be able to see out of it all right when I had an operation in England. (Last Tuesday I got the parcel that you had sent me on August 30. That is the third one I have received. Everything was fine. Thanks very much. Will you thank the people for me.) I had a letter from the secretary of the Kawartha Park Red Cross the other day. She said she had sent some money to Lady Drummond in England to send me some parcels. Yesterday I had a card from Miss Glassford, and last Wednesday I got another parcel. That is fifteen that I have got so far, and four pounds also. I also get bread from Switzerland every week.

We manage to put the time in here somehow, although it is very tiresome sometimes. We have three parades every day at 7 a.m., 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. After 8.30 parade we have drill and physical exercise for an hour or so; so that keeps us in pretty good condition. There are a few fatigues around camp, too; so that occupies some of our time. The other day we took the straw out of our mattresses and now we have seaweed. It makes a pretty good bed, and we have two blankets now, so we are fixed up all right. The only thing is, the French want all the windows closed at night.

I still have my album with a few snaps I had and a little Testament but that is about all I brought through. There are plenty of books in the camp, and one fellow has a bunch of classical books. I have just finished reading the "Judgment of Socrates." We have church service every Sunday afternoon, held by one of our Canadian sergeants, who is training for the ministry.

REPORTS WERE APPRECIATED

The following letter from Mr. Frank Yeigh, one of the prominent visitors in connection with the Boys' Conference, has been received by the Examiner:

Toronto, Nov. 23rd, 1915.

Dear Examiner,— I want to thank you for the splendid report you gave of the Boys' Conference, not only for the amount of space, but for the excellence of the reports. Whoever does this work for you knows how to select the salient points of the talks, as was done in the case of my Sunday morning address. I only wish the Toronto papers had more reporters of this calibre.

We who are close to this boys' work and are able to compare notes of the conferences of the last few years, feel that the Peterborough one represented high water mark in the quality of the delegates and the way in which the boys discussed the details of your service.

Yours very truly,
Frank Yeigh.

SLAUGHTER HOUSES ARE BEING INSPECTED

Must Conform to Regulations or be Closed up—Same Ultimation Applies to Dairies

Sanitary Inspector Spence is making an official visit to a number of slaughter-houses throughout the district. Any that fail to come up to the requirements of the Health Act will be closed up. The inspector referred to one in particular that will be closed up unless remedial measures are speedily applied. The place in question was in a bad state when visited. Heads and parts of carcases were strewn all over the yard. This will have to be cleaned up and other means adopted to improve the situation.

It is also the intention of Sanitary Inspector Spence to be more strict with the dairy farms. Any dairy barn that is not whitewashed by the 15th of December will debar the owner from selling milk for local consumption. This rule has been evaded to some extent in the past, but the inspector proposes to see that this rule is rigidly enforced in future.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

At a meeting of the Legal committee of the City Council held last evening a communication was read from Mr. J. T. O'Connell, claiming damages to his property, due, it was alleged, to the approach to the Smith street bridge. The matter was referred to City Solicitor Gordon.

Board of Works.

The Board of Works committee of the City Council will meet this evening, and among other things will arrange for a deputation to visit Toronto to-morrow in connection with the sewerage disposal scheme.

Site For Disposal Plant.

To-morrow a deputation representing the city will confer with the Provincial Board of Health respecting a site for the proposed sewerage disposal plant.

Court of Revision.

The Court of Revision will meet this evening to consider a number of appeals respecting the special assessment levied for payments.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

Whitby, Nov. 25.—To assist in the recruiting and equipping of the new 116th Ontario County Battalion of 1,100 men, now being raised, the Ontario County Council voted unanimously in favour of granting $5,000, of which $2,000 will be devoted to regimental purposes and the remainder used for the expenses of recruiting.

One Mill For Five Years.

Winnipeg, Nov. 25.—The Union of Manitoba Municipalities, representing by more than 250 Reeves and Councillors, in annual convention at Stonewall, resolved to petition the Manitoba Government to levy a tax of one mill for five years on all assessable property in the Province for the Manitoba Patriotic Fund in aid of the soldiers' dependents.

Yesterday's recruits who were successful in passing the medical examination for the 93rd Battalion were as follow:

James Darwin, 560 Sherbrooke St.
Leonard Mound, 92 Sophia St.
Elmer Johnston, 316 Dublin St.
John Playford, 371 Burnham St.

Lieut. S. J. Raymond was on duty at the Armouries this morning after a few days' leave of absence. Like Mark Twain's death, the report of his matrimonial adventure was "greatly exaggerated."

Pte. Geo. Buchanan, who was one of the first to enlist in Havelock, and who has been through all the horrors of the past year's campaign in France and Belgium, has been invalided home, and is now in the Elmhurst Convalescent Home in Kingston.

He came to Quebec with a big detachment of troops a week ago Sunday and his parents have been anxiously awaiting his arrival home.

He has not been given his discharge but has ben sent to Kingston for treatment for a wounded knee and gas effects.

Word was received from him yesterday, stating that he would be home this week to spend a few days with his family.—Havelock Standard.

Harry King, Downie Street, one of the Peterborough boys with the 4th Battery, 1st Brigade, C.F.A., returned home last night from Kingston. He arrived in Canada recently, having crossed on the Metagama. Other Peterborough boys are expected to arrive home at any time in the near future.

The Examiner has received the following letter:

St. Catharines, Nov. 22, 1915.

Dear Sir,—It has been officially reported that Pte. Leslie H. Jewell, 39th Battalion, is seriously ill in hospital at Shorncliffe. I cabled over and got the answer that he is improving, and for the benefit of his friends in Peterborough, you might please mention it in The Examiner and oblige,

Yours respectfully,
GEO. JEWELL,
2 Page Street.

The 93rd Battalion had an interesting afternoon's skirmishing work at the Exhibition grounds yesterday and the officers and men greatly enjoyed the afternoon. An attack with scouts, firing line, supports and reserves working was engineered, and the cheer when the final charge was sounded woke up the neighbourhood.

Although the trip to Port Hope and Cobourg has been cancelled, the 93rd Battalion Band will visit Millbrook on Saturday, going down on the 11.40 train and returning at 5.10 p.m.

SIGNALLER DOWNEY WRITES

Signaller Downey Writes.

Belgium, Nov. 1, 1915.

To the Editor Peterborough Examiner, Peterborough, Ontario, Canada:

Dear Sir,—I wish through your paper to thank the boys and girls of the Public Schools of Peterborough, for their most generous gift of chocolate gum, etc., that was sent to me to distribute to the Peterborough boys in our battery.

All the boys were well pleased to think that they were not forgotten by those at home. And we all look forward to any news from home. I wish you would see the boys when the Canadian mail arrives. The poor mail man has some some job to distribute it. When he comes we hardly give him time to get off his horse. And if he has not got a letter for each one he gets some calling down.

Well, everything is going along fine. And take it from me, we don't give the Huns very much time to rest. Just send along the ammunition and men, and we will give them all the kultur they want.

We are all glad to hear that Lieut. Ackerman is getting along fine, and hope he will soon be well again.

Every man in his company has the highest praise for him, and were all sorry to lose him.

Well, I have to go on duty so I will close, thanking the children once again. And hope that we will see more boys from Peterborough out here soon, as we need them now.

Thanking you for this space, I am,

Yours sincerely,
SIG. E. J. DOWNEY,
4th Battery, 1st Brigade, C.F.A.
France.

Two Owen Sound young men, friends of Lieut. Widdifield, joined the 93rd Battalion this morning. The two, Privates R. D. Wood and W. C. McFaul, are undergoing minor operations in the hospital to fit them for active service.

A letter has been received from Bombadier Archie McBride, of the 4th Field Battery, recording the appreciation of the boys of that particular battery for the parcel forwarded by the ladies of Peterborough. Bombadier McBride refers to the wet weather that is prevalent throughout France and Belgium.

GUNNER MILLER KICKED BY A CRAZED CHEF

The wife of Gunner Tommy Miller, 108 Reid street, received a letter from him to-day in which he stated that his recently reported injury had been caused by a kick from the officers' chef when he became more or less crazed on the night their billet caught fire and was destroyed. It required five men to handle him, and in the mix-up Gunner Miller received a boot on the knee which was followed shortly afterwards by blood-poisoning. Gunner Miller is now in an hospital forty miles back of the lines, and expects to be around again in a short time. This information will be of interest to his friends because of the official report that he had been wounded in the knee by a bullet. He is orderly to Lieut. Harold Matthews with the 2nd Battery, 1st Brigade, who in a recent letter told of the loss of their billet.

1,400 APPLES WERE SERVED WITH SERMON

Dr. Reisner Uses Practical Example To Illustrate Spiritual Truth.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Fourteen hundred sound red apples were distributed yesterday to the congregation by the Rev. Christain F. Reisner, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal Church West 104th street, between Columbus and Amsterdam avenues. Dr. Reisner's sermon was about "God and Apples." He used the fruit as an illustration of the contention that man cannot be sound and healthy spiritually unless he gives the same attention to his soul that man has given to the cultivation of the apple.

"It takes faith to grow apples," said the preacher. "Once they were gnarled and repugnant. But men worked at them until to-day they are a joy to the taste, to the stomach and to health. Some folks see only rascals in the street urchins. Others demand a long geneology depicting noted ancestors. That doubts God. He is not a respecter of persons. If we were born thieves and drunkards then we would not have a chance. In every boy there is buried the image of God. Mrs. Finley J. Shepard believed that when she adopted a boy and gave him her own name, even though she could find out nothing about him. He is human, and as such can be built into a fine son. God bless Mrs. Shepard for her confidence in God's fairness."

Dr. Reisner asserted that although there are 800,000 children in the city, only 200,000 of them attend Sunday school.

The Reason Why.

"One reason," said Uncle Eben, "why more advice doesn't git took, is dat de man givin' it don't seem so anxious to help as he is to put his own self on de back an' show off how much he know."

THE WORLD OF SPORT

CHIEF BENDER SHOULD WORRY

Indian Has Earned $80,000 in Baseball Since Joining Macks in 1903

Quite a number of folks are spending their days feeling sorry for Chief Bender, but after perusing the financial record of this same Mr. Bender we feel that he's entitled to just about as much sympathy as is John D. Rockefeller.

Bender joined the Athletics in 1903. At that time his salary was only about $2,000, but during the year that followed he was continuallly boosted. At the time he was let out by Connie Mack he was drawing something like $7,500 a year. Bender was with the Athletics twelve years, and during that time his average salary was around $4,500.

By process of mathematics one arrives at the conclusion that Bender, over a twelve year stretch, drew down $54,000 in salary. In addition to that he shared in five world series splits. That netted him a total of $11,734. During part of the 1915 season Bender was with the Baltimore Feds and got from them $6,000 of his $7,500 salary.

In other words, Bender has gathered unto himself since 1903 the sum total of $71,734 for baseballing, and probably $6,000 more in side issues, such as newspaper writings. That makes Bender's average income for seventeen years about $6,000.

Also you must bear in mind that he only had to baseball during six months of each year. He was free during the rest of the time to do work. And, furthermore, during four months of each year his club was on the road or in the training camp, which meant that Mr. Bender didn't have to buy his own eats or suffer exposure to the other terrors of the high cost of living.

CONTRIBUTED HIS REFEREE FEES TO PATRIOTIC FUND

HAMILTON, Nov. 25.—P. J. Jones, secretary of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association, yesterday morning received a letter from Lou Marsh, who refereed the final O.R.F.U. game here, enclosing the check which he received for his work and requesting that it be turnd over to the association's funds. Mr. Marsh's letter follows:

"Toronto, Nov. 23, 1915.

"P. J. Jones, Esq., Secretary-Treasurer Hamilton Sportsmen's Association, Hamilton, Ont.

"Dear Paddy,—I am enclosing check received from the Hamilton Rowing club for referee's fees for the final T.R. and A.A.-Hamilton R. C. game. I thought it would be at least $15, and requested that much for 'risking my life,' but doubtless, in view of the fact that I had the honour of establishing a new record from the Hamilton Jockey club to the Royal hotel, the Hamilton Rowing club docked me $2.50. Therefore, all I am able to donate to the Hamilton Sportsmen's association as the result of a very pleasant afternoon's outing and an hour's exercise is $12.50.

"Please accept this for your soldier boys. I am sorry that I cannot add another naught to the last end of the figures and make it a real donation. Yours, LOU E. MARSH."

An Orgy of Extravagance

Reckless Habits Caused by Inflated Wages and High Separation Allowance to Soldiers' Families.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—For the purpose of attracting a larger part of the savings of the working classes the Government proposes to issue war loan bonds of the value of £1 $5 or multiples thereof, bearing 3 per cent. interest.

In making this announcement today in the House of Commons, Reginald McKenna, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, said subscriptions to war loan vouchers—the plan previously adopted to attract small subscriptions—had proved disappointing. These subscriptions aggregated only £5,000,000. The working classes, he said, evidently preferred 2½ per cent. from the savings bank to investment in a loan which was liable to fluctuate.

The Chancellor emphasized strongly the urgent necessity, in the interest both of themselves and of the State, that persons now enjoying exceptional wages should save.

"Extravagant expenditure in any class cannot be tolerated," he continued. "At this moment economy in expenditure is vitally necessary, and the nation must be made to understand that a suitable instrument must be devised by means whereof we may avail ourselves of the nation's earnings."

Mr. McKenna said it was on this account that the Government intended to issue bonds on small denomination which would be convertible into cash at face value on demand. He said a strong committee would be appointed to popularize these bonds among the workers.

Wooden spills in the place of matches, penny wooden penholders instead of the quills so dear to British officialdom, and a few envelopes and odd sheets of notepaper instead of unlimited supplies gave a surprise to-day to members of Parliament who are accustomed to utilize the Houses of Parliament as a club.

In reply to angry protests the attendants explained that this year was a first step in the direction of national economy demanded so urgently in recent speeches in the House of Commons.

ENGLAND BEGINS THE MAKING OF GLOBES

A decided fillip to a little-known industry has been given by the war. Hitherto globe maps, to be seen in every schoolroom, were made in Germany, there being very few firms in Britain who manufactured them. The consequence was that English retailers had to sell thousands of German globes every year not only in England, but in the dominions over the seas. Now that the German trade has been killed a determined attempt is to be made to capture the whole of the trade. Few people could say of what substance globes are made, and would be astonished to hear that brown paper is the chief material used. A matrix of wood is covered with strips of brown paper which have been well smeared with paste. The paper is laid on the matrix until it is about a sixteenth of an inch thick and the globe looks like a football of the Association type. When this paper covering is dry, it is cut midway between what will be the two poles, removed from the matrix, and after an axis has been fixed in it, the two hemispheres are glued together. Then this sphere of brown paper is coated with a composition plaster, and ingredients of which are a trade secret and again left to dry.

After being tested to see that it is an exact sphere, the meridians are marked on the globe to guide the girls who finish the work. The globe is then fixed in a clamp which holds its axis and a girl takes the engraved gores, cut ready for use, and pastes them on without overlapping. If the globe is exact the gores should fit so exactly that you cannot see where they are in the complete globe.

When the gores have tried on, the globe is colored by a hand process, which is also done by girls, and then polished. In the old days so many coats of varnish were laid on that very soon the globe assumed that yellow hue that we see in all old globes. The modern method of surface production obviates this, and the globe keeps its whiteness.

The globe is now ready to be mounted on its stand and to have its meridian fitted. Formerly, says the World's Work, when the industry was most flourishing the metal and wood work connected with the fittings formed separate industries, but to-day the globe maker does the whole work on his own premises.

It might be mentioned that globes thus made are so strong that a 16 stone man could stand on one, and not break it. Indeed, you cannot break one without using great violence.—Tid-Bits.

JIMMY BRITT ENLISTS IN THE BRITISH ARMY

NEW YORK, Nov. 23. — Jimmy Britt, one-time dandy of the prize ring and lightweight champion of America, is on a troopship somewhere in the Indian Ocean, a private in Great Britain's colonial army bound for the trenches on Gallipoli Peninsula. Within a fortnight he will probably be on the firing line battling for the allies.

No one in this country knew that Britt had enlisted until a letter was received from him by Al Lippe today. It had been mailed in Australia, where Britt enlisted.

There were 763,185 men employed in the coal mines of the United States last year, the greatest number in the history of the industry.

CHURCH UNION VOTE IS STILL A MYSTERY

ANTIS USE PAPERS?

Unionist Charge That Every Adverse Majority is Rushed Into Print.

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—No official returns have been received by the Clerks of Assembly as to the vote of the Presbyterian congregations upon church union. The figures from individual churches and Presbyteries give no basis for assuming that union has been either sustained or defeated.

"No figures yet published are reliable indication of the final vote," said Rev. Dr. J. Somerville, one of the two Clerks of Assembly, and treasurer of the Dominion Presbytery. "No official figures have been received by us, and the final vote of the Presbyteries will not be complete until December 15."

Halifax Favours Union.

It is understood that 23 congregations in the three maritime provinces give a vote of 2,378 for union and 1,036 against. The city of Halifax will report more than two to one in favour of union, according to a letter received in Toronto to-day. St. Andrew's, of Montreal, gives 503 for, and 156 against, adherents voting 74 and 38 against, and the elders dividing 20 for and 6 against. Glen Morris Presbytery, near Galt, gives 4 elders for and none against, 71 communicants for and 13 against, 16 adherents for and none against. Kindersley, Saskatchewan, will vote 98 per cent. for the union.

These figures are straws only to show how the wind is blowing, but Presbytery officials refuse to admit that they, or the anti-union figures, may be looked upon as a guide. Two churches in Medicine Hat, St. John's, and Westminster, give a majority of 171 against, and twenty-five in New Brunswick give 500 against.

How Toronto Votes.

Four Toronto Presbyterian Churches have recently returned a majority of 412 against Church Union. The churches are Royce Avenue, Victoria, College street and Cooke's. The votes were as follows: Cooke's, for 84, against 297; Royce Avenue, for 40, against 220; College Street, for 255, against 170; Victoria (West Toronto), for 142, against 303.

Has a "Picked" List.

"There is a great deal of dissatisfaction arising over the methods of the anti-Union party," said one Presbyterian minister this afternoon. "It seems like deliberate attempts to throw dust in the public's eyes. In one of the morning papers was a list, it showed a majority against Union. The complete list from which those few figures were taken shows a complete reversal of that trend. This list appeared in "The Witness" for November 20th, and is as follows:

Anti-Unionists Use Press.

Church Union enthusiasts say that the anti-unionists are very active in their publicity campaign, rubbing the figures of majorities adverse to Union into print with the idea of influencing the vote of doubtful Presbyteries.

It is admitted, however, that the opposition will be strong enough to make it difficult to put union into effect.

The vote in 1912 on the basis for church union as submitted to the Presbyteries, resulted in a vote of 370 of the members for and 17 against, the balance not voting. Of the elders 71 1-2 per cent. were in favour and 28 1-2 were against, adherents 72 1-2 for and 27 1-2 against. A larger vote of the members is hoped for this time, upon the question of union itself.

Vote Will Be Stronger.

"It looks very clear to me that there will be a much stronger vote against Church Union this time than four years ago," said Rev. A. B. Winchester. "I believe that the total vote all over the country will be overwhelmingly against us. I hear recently from a friend in New Brunswick, and he tells me that 25 congregations who had voted on the question give an aggregate vote of 400 opposed."

Rev. R. B. Cochrane was disinclined to give his opinion, but he admitted that the majority of votes will be in favour of church union.

"The returns are too vague at present to be able to judge, but I think the total result will be a majority in favour of church union," he said. "Just how large the majority will be I can't say, but I hope it will, at any rate, be in favour of church union."

Strong for Church Union.

Rev. Dr. John Neil, Westminster Presbyterian Church, expressed himself as firmly convinced that Church Union would be of great service, not only to Canada, but to the world. The vote is being taken in Westminster church this week

"There is not sufficient difference to keep the Methodist, Presbyterian and Congregationalist Churches apart," said he. "We have so much in common, apart from deeper reasons, that I cannot be other than strongly in favour of union. It is a remarkable thing that with a few exceptions all our foreign missionaries are in favour of it."

Nova Scotia Wants Union.

According to the latest returns, Nova Scotia Presbyterians seem to be going almost solidly for Church Union in the vote being taken this week. Of 20 churches voting, 21 have gone for union, with eight against, and the total majority in votes polled is 1,643. In five instances, Harlington Labrador, North Mountain, Oldham and Waverley Church Union was carried unanimously, while huge majorities were reported from other centres, such as St. Matthew's Church, Halifax, 149 for and 18 against; Middle Musquodoboit, 149 for and 64 against; Baddeck, 365 for and 39 against; Waterville, 150 for and 9 against; Windsor, 133 for, and 84 against; St. Croix, 26 for and 9 against; North River, 115 for and 6 against, and Bridgewater, 258 for union and 13 against.

HAS "SNIPED" 91 TURKS.

Australian Sharpshooter's Record Includes at Least 50 Killed.

SYDNEY, Australia, Nov. 4.—Letters from the Gallipoli Peninsula says that a Queensland Cavalryman named Sing holds the record among the Australasian troops as a sniper. Up to the first of September Sing has shot 91 Turks, of whom at least 50 were killed outright. Sing was a crack marksman before the war and had won many prizes for his shooting at Brisbane and at Sydney. Since engaging in systematic sniping in the Dardanelles operations he has rarely missed one of his human targets.

Day after day and night after night he settles down comfortably in some favorite position and waits with inexhaustible patience for his chance. He sits for hours with a telescope as an aid watching the Turkish tracts over the hills or the lengths of the Turkish trenches until, sooner or later, a Turk shows himself. If the Turk is wary and quickly bobs up and then down again Sing does not fire. He proceeds on the principle that, emboldened by fancied security, the Turk will gradually risk first his head, then his shoulders and, finally, the upper half of his body. At this stage Sing's rifle cracks and the Turk is seen to fall.

A notch is made by Sing in a stick which he keeps by way of a record. Sing's sniping performances are said to be beyond question, for every telling shot by him has been checked by some officer.

NEWFOUNDLAND HARD HIT.

Loss of Codfish Trade to Greece a Serious Matter.

ST JOHN'S, Nfld., Nov. 24.—The loss of the Greek market for codfish as a result of war conditions, has seriously affected the fisheries in this colony. On 10th November, on instructions from the Imperial authorities, a proclamation was issued prohibiting the export of foodstuffs from Newfoundland to Greece.

The annual export of cod to Greece amounts to about 7,000,000 pounds. This specially cured fish finds a market only in Greece, Italy and Spain. Because of the embargo the market price for this class of fish has dropped here a dollar a quintal (112 pounds). The Colonial Government and leading exporters are trying to obtain a suspension of the prohibition.

THE CALL FOR TOBACCO

The Thing Most Needed by Soldiers is Often Lacking---What Some of the Boys at the Front Say of the Need of Tobacco on the Firing Line.

DO YOUR BIT TO-DAY.

This is what one of the men in the Royal Field Artillery, who himself has fought with the guns ever since the retreat from Mons, wrote to a friend:

"What we want almost more than anything else, are cigarettes and tobacco for our pipes. It isn't simply a fancy—but a real need. They are a big comfort. It's something fine when you are with the guns to have some whiffs of tobacco smoke. It eases your mind. You forget about things. It stops you thinking hard. At home you don't—you can't—enjoy a smoke like you do out here. It keeps you going every day if you get a regular supply. But when you only get a small packet of cigarettes a week and no tobacco, it's like offering a sardine to a starving man. I've often smoked rolled leaves because there was nothing else."

Another soldier writes that it is at night in the trenches that a smoke is most precious. "So long as you can get a light without letting the Germans know it, a pipe in the dark is delicious and consoling. The night gets on your nerves, the least noise makes you start. It's because you've got nothing to do. You must smoke, chew—do something."

There is no doubt at all that smoking is of the greatest comfort to these brave men who are risking their lives for us every hour of the day.

The Overseas Club established their Tobacco Fund in the early stages of the war, and in eleven months have been able to send, through the generosity of the Canadian public, $50,000 worth of smokes to the Front. This seems a large amount, but the tragic note is that it is only sufficient to supply about five packages to each of the 40,000 Canadian soldiers at the Front. Just fancy that, five packages for a healthy man in eleven long weary months.

Now that the Second Canadian Contingent is at the Front, the shortage has become greater. Let it not be said that when the facts were known our citizens did not rise to the occasion and carry out the duty we owe to these boys of ours. Do not leave this to your neighbour. It is up to each and all of us to do our "bit" and keep on doing it for as long as the war lasts.

Our readers can send their money to the Canadian Branch, Overseas Club Tobacco Fund, c o The Examiner, with the full assurance that they are laying their money out to the best possible advantage. The name and address of the giver is written on a postcard enclosed in each parcel, so that Tommy can express his appreciation. Subscribers can select a specified unit to receive the fruit of their generosity, or allow the Overseas Club to send the parcels where they are most needed.

CUTS OFF ORE TRAFFIC.

British Submarine Campaign in Baltic Effective.

Stockholm, Sweden, Nov. 24.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Swedish iron mine owners state that the British submarine blockade will result in a complete stoppage of Germany's large iron ore importation from this country. Iron ore is not contraband and could ordinarily be shipped on neutral vessels, but at present all Swedish and neutral shipping is otherwise engaged and no vessels are available.

The present stoppage of the iron ore trade is a heavy blow to Sweden, but the Swedish press, realizing England's necessity has indulged in neither bitterness nor complaint.

German ships are now playing a difficult game. Navigation close to the shore in order to be in neutral waters is not easy during the best season, and with the rough seas of winter it will be particularly hazardous.

WAR STIRS INVENTIVENESS.

Germans Make Substitutes For Many Household Articles.

BERLIN, Nov. 24.—The exigencies of the war have led to the creation of almost countless substitutes for articles which Germany no longer has even to the production of substitutions for substitutes no longer available.

The "Central Committee of the Housewives' Associations of Greater Berlin" has undertaken to show the public how great is the number of substitutes invented and already on the market, and how practical they are. This is to be done by means of one of the most notable expositions ever held in Berlin.

There are exhibited a few of the food substitutes now in use, but the exposition is mainly devoted to articles of household use that have come to replace all the copper and nickel ware that has had to be turned in for ammunition purposes. Thus there are common iron pipes, tastefully gilded to take the place of brass curtain poles. There are vessels and receptacles of all sizes made of a material called "Serpentine" which is found in great quantities near Dresden, available instead of the copper pans and pots that have gone.

There are oven doors made of iron and steel which look as well as the nickel ones generally used and which, of course, are quite as practical. Even pins now are being made of iron instead of nickel, as are also hooks and eyes and similar objects. Some apparently efficient substitute has been discovered for the rare and expensive rubber, and the exposition shows garden hose of the new material. Even nipples for babies' bottles are fashioned out of this "near rubber." The list of articles includes squeegees and window sponges.

Twine made of paper has been found to be practical, but for use in stores a little machine has been invented which seals up packages and makes the use of string unnecessary. There are paper collars, cuffs, and handkerchiefs, and napkins, and even paper underwear. Underwear and bed linen also have been fashioned out of cellulold, for the purpose of effecting an economy in wool, which is daily growing more expensive.

There are literally scores of models of gas, electric and spirit lamps and stoves to tempt people who find it difficult or impossible to procure petroleum, and so-called "cooking bowls" that can be placed on red hot stones.

CANADIAN SOLDIERS' PAY LARGE WHEN COMPARED.

GEN. HUGHES GIVES FIGURES TO REFUTE SOME COMPLAINTS.

OTTAWA, November 24.—Complaints that Canadian soldiers on active service upon returning disabled, are not well looked after, are denied by General Hughes. He gives the following comparison of the pay of soldiers on active service: Canadian privates, $1.10 a day; British soldiers, 25 cents a day; Italian, 20 cents; French, 6½ cents; Japanese, 2½ cents; Russians, 1 cent; Germans, 10½ cents; Austro-Hungarians, 7½ cents; Turkish, 6½ cents.

WEDDING BELLS

O'DONAGHUE—HEENAN.

A very pretty wedding took place at St. Peter's Cathedral, November 23, when Miss Lillian Cecelia Heenan, youngest daughter of Mr. Patrick Heenan, 797 Water Street, was united in marriage to Mr. Robt. Leo O'Donaghue of this city.

The ceremony was performed by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, cousin of the bride, who also celebrated the nuptial Mass. Mr. Frank Kearney, nephew of the bride, assisted in serving the Bishop.

The bride looked charming in a dress of white silk, with pearl trimmings and large picture hat, and was assisted by her sister, Pearl, who wore khaki silk, with pearl trimmings and a large picture hat.

Mr. Joachim Anglesey supported the groom.

The bride entered the church assisted by her father, to the strains of the Wedding march played by Miss M. Doherty. Miss Mabel Mahoney sang "How Pure and White," and Mr. George Daly sang "Ave Maria."

A dainty repast was served at the home of the bride, where the friends of the bride and groom assembled to wish them long years of happiness.

The bride travelled in a suit of navy blue. They will reside at 554 Parkbrooke street on their return from a trip to Toronto and points west.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents and cheques from friends

Entire Village Blown to Pieces

Nothing Left But a Few Walls and Holes—Letter From Pte. Percy Grey

Mr. George Evans of the C.P.R. Telegraph Office, has received an interesting letter from Signaller Percy Grey of the Second Canadian Contingent. It is as follows:

Somewhere in Belgium,
Nov. 6, 1915.

Mr. George Evans,
345 George St., Peterborough, Ont.

Dear George,—Just a few lines in answer to your most welcome letter which I received yesterday, hoping this will find you well, as I am the same. Was out to see Charley Hardwicke yesterday and he is O.K. They were out resting. He was telling me of his experiences in the trenches. He had three dugouts came in on top of him, and had to be dug out of one. None of the Peterboro boys have been hit yet. They go back in to-day. Was just talking to a fellow who is billeted in a village up the road a couple of miles. The Germans have just thrown in forty Jack Johnstons. There was nothing left of the village at all except a few walls and holes. Suppose the 39th battalion is getting up to strength. I guess the fellows in it will have some time training at home. Goodness only knows when we will see the old town again. The big guns are sure making some racket here to-day but you soon get so used to them that you don't worry at all. It is the same with the aeroplanes. When you hear one over your head you hardly glance at it unless someone is trying to bring it down. Have seen a couple of "air scraps."

Talk Again of General Election

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.—A general election is being talked of again. The Government is understood to have asked the Opposition to agree that the term of Parliament shall be extended for a year and a half after the signature of peace.

They also want all vacant constituencies to be filled without contest.

It is understood that the Opposition leader has agreed to an extension of the term of Parliament for a year, and that there shall be no contest in three of the constituencies now vacant.

As the term of Parliament would end a year from next month, a year's extension would give Parliament a two-year life from the present time. The difference over by-elections seems even more serious. There are seven ridings vacant, one Liberal and six Conservative. It is understood the Government wants no contest in any of them, and Opposition is willing to have no contests in Prince, P.E.I., Hamilton, and Restigouche. These seats were vacated by death. In other four vacant ridings, the Opposition is unwilling to agree to a no-contest proposal.

WOMEN MAKE BEST MUNITIONS.

Now Making Entire Shell of Heaviest French Guns.

PARIS, Nov. 24.—Albert Thomas the Lloyd-George of France, Secretary of State for Artillery and Munitions, asked if the experience of fifteen months had demonstrated the feminine dexterity at a task so unaccustomed as shell-making, just smiled. Then reaching into a drawer of his desk, he brought forth a fuse of a 75 shell—the most delicate part of a very finely adjusted mechanism.

"All this work," he said, pointing to the mysterious inside of the fuse "can be done better by a woman, once she is trained to it, than by a man. And there is no part of a 75 shell a woman cannot make as well as a man. Why, in certain establishments women are carrying out the particularly ticklish job of charging the shells with high explosive. And at Lyons they have gone even further—they are making complete shells like that one there; women are doing every bit of it, from moulding the molten steel to polishing up the finished product."

The projectile he indicated stood upon his mantelpiece. It was of 155 millimetre calibre—the heaviest shell fired from a French field gun.

"Would it be a good thing to organize women workers for the purpose of enlisting their aid regularly in the industrial mobilization?" was the next question.

"Yes, yes, certainly. M. Thomas replied enthusiastically. "It would be an excellent step, and I believe would please the women and be satisfactory to the men workers as well, for the demand for labor in the munitions industry is tremendous. Of course, we have already organized the workwomen to a certain extent. They are under military orders, just as their co-workers of the other sex are. There are between thirty and forty thousand women now engaged in France in the manufacture of munitions!"

EYE TALKS SERIES

IMPORTANCE OF THE EYE

A man or woman has no more precious possession than that of eyesight. Deprived of the use of the eyes we are helpless, and in proportion to the condition of the eyesight, so is the handicap for business or pleasure measured.

If eyesight were turned into dollars and cents, we would be extremely careful of it. Money means working capital, and eyesight is our greatest necessity as an earning power. Can we then be too careful of our most valuable asset? We ask perfect security for money, then also ask for proper qualifications from the specialist who treats your eyes.

FORTIFYING SUEZ CANAL.

Elaborate Works Being Constructed Across the Caravan Routes.

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 25.—Ten thousand British troops, mostly colonials, are erecting fortifications along the Suez canal all the way from Port Said to the northern end of the Gulf of Suez.

These works are not being built at the very edge of the waterway, but miles to the east. The most extensive are those across the caravan routes which strike the canal at Tousoum and at Kantara. The latter is the highway leading from Syria by way of Katieh, and is the more important of the two. From Kantara to Serapeum, the eastern side of the canal is flanked by a range of barren hills, and these have been fortified and supplied with artillery. North of Kantara is a flat sun-beaten desert, and the erection of block-houses and redoubts has been difficult.

When the British military authorities receive news that the projected invasion of Egypt has been commenced, they will not wait for the Turks, but will go out to meet them.

GERMAN MAKES THREAT.

No Munition Plants In U.S. Running in Six Months, He Says.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 24.—According to Detective Porter, who took Otto Buelow or Unger to Norfolk Buelow, forgetting for a moment that he was unable to speak English, declare that "in six months there will not be a war munition plant in operation in the United States." Buelow is believed to be an escaped officer from the German raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich.

On the way to Norfolk Buelow exclaimed to Porter:

"I know the location of every munition plant in the country, and they won't be working in six months." Buelow made this statement in the presence of Samuel Cohen, a Federal agent.

The first inkling he gave Porter and Cohen was when he seemed to be much interested in their conversation. A little later the detective asked him what he knew.

"I know a lot," he said, "but I would die before I would tell."

WOMAN'S STOMACH HELD KNIFE FOR FOR MONTHS.

SWALLOWED WHILE IN DELIRIUM—REMOVED BY SURGEONS.

CHICAGO, November 25.—The table knife which Mrs. Elizabeth Hochsberger finally persuaded the surgeons that she had swallowed while in a delirium, due to illness, eight months ago, was taken from her stomach by an operation at the West side Hospital. The knife was corroded and saw edged from the action of stomach acids and doctors said nature had made heroic efforts to digest the implement.

SUNDAY RAISED $7,437.

Billy Sunday's gifted tongue loosened $7,437.37 from the pockets of two Toronto audiences and placed it in the treasury of Citizens' Committee of One Hundred. In other words, the above was the amount of the afternoon and evening collections at the Arena on Monday the afternoon contribution being $3,591.04 and the evening $3,846.33.

In order to put Billy Sunday right in the minds of some who might impute pecuniary motives to Mr Sunday's appearance in Toronto, the Committee announced that the speaker of the day did not receive a single cent from collections. Further than that, he made a personal collection of $100 to their cause, so finds himself that much the loser by his visit to Toronto. The receipts will be put into the general fund of the Committee of One Hundred to help finance the organization of the temperance interests in the Province.

It is estimated that organization work will cost the Committee $50,000 —of which about half has already been raised.

Perfectly Satisfied.

Japan Ready to Send Big Army

to send a strong army to Europe if the need arises, the Petit Parisien says. A statement to this effect is credited to Baron Ishii, Japanese Foreign Minister, by Mr. G. Lechartier, Tokio correspondent of this newspaper. He quotes Baron Ishii as follows:

"Thus far we have not considered the eventuality of sending an army to Europe, but if there is occasion therefore Japan will immediately send in one expedition a very strong army. Japan does not intend to risk a check."

In regard to the supplying of arms for Russia by Japan, the Foreign Minister is said to have remarked:

"Russia does not need men, as only one-third of the men mobilized have been armed. By the end of the month Japan will have done much toward arming completely the other two-thirds.

GENEVA, Nov. 26.—It is reported that the Serbs gave the Bulgarians another bad defeat, and have regained much territory.

200 LIQUOR LICENSES MAY BE WIPED OUT.

PROBABLE ACTION OF BOARD AFFECTS WHOLE OF ONTARIO.

It is no secret that the Ontario License Commissioners, as the result of their itinerary throughout the province of Ontario and the pronounced temperance sentiment prevalent everywhere will apply the pruning knife to some purpose, and probably 200 to 300 licenses will go. The members of the board decline to give any definite information as to the impending reduction, but there is good ground for asserting that a cut to the extent mentioned is not out of the question

Food Scarcity In Germany Felt by Armies

Willing to Fight But Not Starve For Country, Say Soldiers

ADDRESS TO TROOPS

PETROGRAD, Nov. 24.— The military authorities have published an account of an address delivered by Field Marshal von Hindenburg, to troops which arrived at Libau from Germany a month ago. The Field Marshal is quoted as saying:

"I know none among you adopted a military career. I know each of you left a family. Therefore, I shall not demand reckless attacks from you, but I hope you willl beat off the attacks the Russians make."

According to this information, the Field Marshal reported to German General Headquarters that with such troops it would hardly be possible to think of active operations.

Letters given out here, said to have been taken from Germans, contain complaints of hunger. A passage from one of these letters says:

"We are ready to fight for our country but are not willing to stave, and the scarcity of food is becoming more and more painful."

Lettish volunteers are distinguishing themselves in the number of prisoners they are taking. They are availing themselves of their knowledge of local conditions to make daring excursions.

GERMANS ENGAGED IN A GENERAL RETIREMENT

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Nov. 26. — Convinced that the Germans are engaged in a general retirement all along the Dvina, military men are interested to-day concerning the Kaiser's probable choice of winter quarters for the winter in the northern section of his Russian front. That a retrograde movement marks a definite abandonment of all thought of capture of Riga before spring, is considered certain. Russians announced some time ago that they deem the city as safe for the present. Latest development is the first sign that the Germans have come to the same conclusion. The German offensives' breakdown is attributed to three things, the increase in Russian ammunition supply, a German shortage of munitions, and weakening of the German line for the Balkan campaign.

Germans Foment Revolt in Persia

Spread Report That Country Was at War and Capital Burned by Russians.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The Foreign Office, in a statement issued on the subject of the arrest of the British Consul at Shiraz, Persia, by revolting gendarmerie acting without the knowledge of the Persian government, as announced, says the prisoners have now been removed to the neighbourhood of Ahram, where "they are apparently in charge of Herr Wassmuss."

"The gendarmerie in Northern Persia are in open revolt under their Swedish officers," the statement adds. "They hold Koom in the interest of the Germans."

After declaring that further outrages had been committed by these gendarmerie and giving instances, the statement concludes:

"These acts of rapine and outrage were done in defiance of the Persian government and are instances of the way in which German agents instigate violence or criminal action in neutral countries."

CONFESSES TO SAVE HUSBAND

Woman Admits She Set Fire to Home in Order to Obtain $200 Insurance.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.— Mrs. Sarah Weintraub, of No. 325 East Houston street, carrying an infant in her arms and with four other small children tugging at her skirts, admitted in Judge Wadhams court that she had started a fire in her home on October 17 in the hope of obtaining $200 insurance on her furniture, thus clearing her husband, who had been accused of arson. In the tenement in which the Weintraubs lived at the time were twenty-four other families, all of whom were imperilled by the flames.

Judge Wadhams discharged Weintraub and paroled the woman in the custody of a probation officer pending investigation of her statement.

Roumania, Unable To Fight Germany Can't Help Serbia Now

Prominent Statesman Tells Serbians That Roumanians Do Not Doubt Ultimate Victory of Allies, But Meanwhile Do Not Wish to Meet the Fate of Belgium.

ATHENS, Nov. 26. One of the last issues of the Balkan Courier, published by the Serbians at their former capital, Nish, contained an explanation of Roumania's attitude, written by a prominent Roumanian statesman, and published in Serbia with the permission of the Serbian censor.

"When it comes to helping Germany," writes the Roumanian spokesman we are bound to tell you frankly that we are too weak to defend you. I can well understand that you in Serbia are surprised at Roumania's cautiousness in the face of Bulgaria's attack on you. But our attitude is dictated by the circumstances which we have to face. If it were a matter of conflict between Bulgaria and Serbia we should not hesitate to take up arms on your side, indeed, we did in 1913. Unhappily this is not a war with Bulgaria only, but it is a question of participating in the terrific struggle between the Germanic Powers and the Quadruple Entente. Serbia has not been attacked by Bulgaria, but by Germany, with Bulgaria as a subordinate ally.

"None but the great Powers of the Quadruple Entente can face Germany and her allies. But when can we count with certainty on the effective intervention in the Balkan Peninsula know what Germany wants, and what Germany will do. But does any one know what the Quadruple Entente will do? You know very well that the Quadruple Entente is not a harmonious whole. The agreement of 31 September, 1914, only binds its constituents not to conclude a separate peace, but no provision was made for a common and unified policy in conducting the war. In this respect each of the four Powers (Britain, France, Russia and Italy) has retained its own freedom of action. The result is that in every new situation the Quadruple Entente is obliged to confer as to what policy shall be adopted, and such negotiations, even though they produce perfect accord inevitably mean delay.

You will surely understand that in these circumstances every neutral country, and particularly Roumania (with her dangerous geographical position) must take care not to incur the hostility of Germany in return for the empty friendship of the Quadruple Entente.

This is the secret of Roumania's attitude and probably that of Greece. You and other Serbs think that the final victory of the Quadruple Entente is certain. We do not doubt it, but it must be admitted that the victory is likely to be long delayed. The British Navy, it must be admitted, can afford to mock the hostility of Germany and Austria while waiting for the end of the war, for in the interval it need not fight, it can suffer the fate of Belgium and share the destruction meted out to Saxon Yet Servians may say that this is a selfish policy. I cannot see it merely as a policy of self preservation. You cannot reasonably demand that we should expose our country to the terrible danger of an attack by powerful enemies without possessing adequate means of defence.

NO STICKERS ON FRONT OF ENVELOPES

The Canadian Courier is approached, and the public are cautioned by the Post-Office against the use of stickers placed on the face or address side of letters or other articles of mail, this being contrary to the regulations. The Post-Office Department, however, do not object to such stickers being placed on the back of letters or other articles sent by mail.

BRAVE NURSES WHO SURVIVE SINKING OF THE MARQUETTE

LONDON, Nov. 25. Nursing sisters from New Zealand who have arrived in London tell a thrilling story of their experiences as the result of the torpedoing of the steamship Marquette in the Mediterranean October 23. These sisters who are connected with the New Zealand hospital unit at Port Said, left Alexandria aboard the Marquette October 19, accompanied by several English soldiers.

"Scarcely had we eighteen persons," said one of the sisters, "when a terrific explosion occurred, and the Marquette began to list immediately. Some of the women jumped (undoubtedly spelling 'down' pants into the sea).

"Our boat was not properly lowered, being suspended from one davit and for some time we were dancing on for dear life. Finally the rope was cut and we all plunged into the sea, but fortunately were soon had on lifeboats.

"We were capsized again and again and were exhausted. It was pitiful to see infants and children crying in their frantic struggles finally only four were left on the gunwale of the lifeboat and these slowly sank."

THE VALUE OF TRUTH

Truth in business is just as important as truth in every day life; truth creates confidence, establishes good-will and builds a reliability that will not be wrecked by the storms of competition.

Through three generations people have learned to place reliance on the advertised word of Scott's Emulsion because they are untarnished by exaggerated claims about a honest remedy of real and actual worth.

The popularity of Scott's Emulsion is increasing as intelligence advances because in these days of adulteration it guarantees pure cod liver oil, hypophosphites to build strength, to improve the blood and strengthen the nerves. It is free from harmful drugs for whom for one time, truthfully advertised.

Soldier of Fortune —— by Randall Parrish

Copyright, 1912, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

The facts were clear. Philip Henley was dead, killed while intoxicated, either accidentally, or for purposes of robbery. And he had been robbed when picked up by the police, nothing to identify him being found. Beyond doubt this half breed brother had dispatched a man north to look him up—possibly to assassinate him if necessary. The fellow had either done the job, or been anticipated in his purpose. In either case he was present to identify the body and had written at once, inclosing the signet ring as proof. That was the same ring we had found in the safe, and which Viola had instantly recognized. And those men who had made a tool of me were the robbers. They had found papers and letters which opened before them this scheme of fraud, then with his residence address, using his keys, they had learned everything necessary for the completion of their plans. A copy of the judge's will must have been in Henley's possession, and no doubt, some lawyer's letter disclosing the situation, received since the departure of his wife. Apparently everything two clever crooks needed to know was in their possession. All they needed to do was pull the strings, using a figurehead to represent Philip Henley. That was the part for which I was chosen. They had to construct a tale in order to interest me, yet that was comparatively easy, and there was a strong probability of success but for peculiar conditions of which they could know nothing. The half breed had never been mentioned. He was the monkey wrench thrown unexpectedly into their well oiled machine. Yet even without him, the reappearance of Philip Henley's wife was sufficient to cause disaster.

Philip Henley's wife! The magic of the words halted me. Then now, if all [illegible]

Suffered Constantly FROM HEADACHE.

To suffer from headache makes life miserable, and it takes a person who has been or is subject to headache to describe the suffering and agony that goes along with it. The dull throbbing, the intense pain, sometimes in one part of the head, sometimes in another, is caused by some disturbed condition of the system. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but whatever the cause, the presence of headache clearly shows that there is something wrong somewhere, and until the cause of the headache is removed, oftentimes trouble is very liable to assert itself.

The fact that Burdock Blood Bitters reaches the seat of the trouble, and banishes the headache is evidenced from scores of first relevins, and then permanently cures the cause of the trouble.

Mr. Wallace J. Boyd, Milltown, N.B. writes: "Several years ago I was all run down, suffered from headache. I was getting no good. I read about Burdock Blood Bitters, and decided to give it a trial and the result was marvellous. The headache stopped at once, and I feel better in every way since. I recommend it to all sufferers."

B.B.B. is the oldest and best known blood medicine on the market to-day having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Co. Limited, Toronto, Ont.

reproach of twilight. In those waters night came quickly. Locking the captain's door, I entered my own stateroom and sat down on the lower berth to wait, leaving my door slightly ajar. The cabin grew constantly darker, although outside, through the open port, I could still distinguish gleams of light along the water surface and the heights of the island. Herman came down and entered his stateroom, but without closing the door. He remained but a moment or two and then hurried back on deck. Suddenly a gust of wind blew in through the port, and it began to rain gently, but in huge drops. Far away was the rumble of thunder, echoing across the open sea. The storm was evidently coming up slowly from the east, as all the western sky was clear and streaked with golden red.

Then a sailor came down the companion stairs, his oilskins rustling, and pounded on the second mate's door.

"All hands, Mr. Broussard!"

There was a muffled response, and the creole, buttoning his jacket as he passed, followed the other on deck. A moment later I heard the slow throb of the engines and glanced out to note the shore line slipping past into the gloom. The Sea Gull was under way.

It would be some time yet—fifteen or twenty minutes at the best—before I dared attempt to carry out my plan of escape. In spite of the overspreading cloud and steady rainfall daylight lingered in the west, and a spectral glow hung above the ocean. There were preliminaries to be attended to, and I was eager to be busy.

The steward had aroused from his nap, and I watched him lower the table, and spread it with a white cloth. Now the distant clatter of dishes proved him to be in the pantry. He could be dealt with there even to better advantage than in the cabin, and, noncombatant as he undoubtedly was, I felt it safer to place him beyond power to create any alarm. The task confronting me was far too serious to leave our rear unguarded. I slipped silently along the short passageway, and, watching his back closely, investigated the lock of the pantry door. It was of the spring variety, easily set to fasten, and could not be operated from the inside. As I pressed in the catch there was a clicking sound, which caused the negro to turn around, the whites of his eyes gleaming oddly.

"Oh, my lordy! I nebber heard you, Masse Craig. By golly, sah, dis yere niggah sure thought he was shot."

"Not yet, Louis," I replied quietly, standing in the opening, one hand still on the latch. "But it is just as well for you to be serious about it—I've got the weapon all right—see," and I pushed the revolver butt forward into his range of vision. "I don't mean to hurt you so long as you keep still."

"What—what you a-goin' fer to do, sah?"

"Get away from this ship if I can, and you are going to help by remaining right where you are, boy. First, what's in the small boat, hung to davits astern—provisions, I mean?"

"That's a breaker of fresh water, an'—an' a package o' sea biscuit, sah. Ah—Ah reckon that's all."

"Good! Do you happen to know how far we are away from the main coast?"

"A-about thirty-five mile, sah."

"Florida?"

"Yes, sah."

"Can you tell me the compass point?"

He scratched his head, his confidence that he was not going to be hurt returning as I questioned him.

"Waal, sah, I sin't no sailorman myself—no, sah—but de second mate he done point it out dis mohnin' when Ah was on deck, an' he say it lay nor'east by east, sah. Ah members dat distinctly."

"That will be all, Louis. Now listen to me. I am going to shut this door and lock you in. I'll be on board here for an hour yet, and if you utter so much as a whimper I'll come down here and fill you full of lead."

I closed the door, testing it before turning away, smiling grimly to myself at recollection of those white eyeballs glaring at me through the gloom. Louis was evidently not the stuff of which martyrs are made.

There was a small telltale compass fastened to a beam over the table. I unscrewed this without difficulty and dropped it into my pocket. It would be a dark night with that cloud shutting out the sky, with probably not a shore light visible. Then I climbed the companion stairs to take a survey of the deck. We were slipping through the water at fair rate of speed, leaving a very perceptible wake astern. The open decks glistened with water, although the rainfall was light and intermittent; thunder rumbled to the northward, with occasional flashes of lightning. Even as I stood there, staring forward, endeavoring to make out certain objects in the gloom, the overhanging cloud seemed to close in across the western sky, instantly plunging us into night. I heard no movement of men, no voice shouting orders, yet before that last gleam faded I had seen outlined several figures on the bridge. To better assure myself that no watch was upon the after deck I circled the cabin. Supper had not been served, and one of the watches might be piped down at any moment. This would bring one of the mates aft to the cabin.

Driven by the thought, I rapped softly on her door and she came forth instantly, full dressed.

"You are ready?"

"Yes."

The captain of the volunteer fire brigade was enjoying himself, for the little party he was giving was going off well; but just in the middle of the festivities a fire had the bad taste to break out.

"Can't 'elp it," said the captain to the panting individual who had brought the news. "I can't go to no fire to-night! I'm giving a party!"

"But you surely ain't going to shirk your duty because of that!" said the informant.

"No; it ain't so much that, but I can't show the missus up in front of half the neighbourhood. Everyone in the house 'as been admirin' 'er new coal-vase in the drawin'-room, and it's my 'elmet."

LONDON DEFIANT TO ZEPPELIN VULTURES

Thrilling Description of World's Metropolis During Raid—Britons Know no Fear of Kultur's Pirates

The City of London lay enshrouded in dense darkness though the night was young. Burghers and their families moved about the darkened streets jesting of death and danger, a brave, big-hearted people facing the calamities of war as their forbears had faced them in the days when the nations was young. Theatres and cafes were thronged with men and maids eager to snatch a joyous hour from the lap of time. London, quivering on the edge of murder and disaster, gave itself up to harmless, healthful ease and pleasure after its day of strenuous toil. Above the city hung a cloudless sky, blue-black and star spangled; a moonless night, wherein the immeasurable spaces between the glittering stars were heavy with darkness, so soon to become pregnant with hidden death.

The beat of millions of feet throbbed on the sentient air in a strangely rhythmic chorus, like an army moving through the shades of night from bivouac to battle. A little group of colonial warriors wounded in the war slouched negligently from place to place, like farmers on a holiday rather than men who had borne the bitter brunt of battle, and written imperishable pages in the book of history. To them the sights and sounds of the world's greatest city were new and strange, and they smiled the slow, quizzical smile that all men know them by.

Where the Vultures Flew

Over the turbulent waters of the Channel high up between sea and sky, the Zeppelins flew heavily, like vultures, gorged with carrion. They came on wings of silence, cleaving their way unerringly towards our shores, flying as vultures fly in search of prey. They came to war on women, to shamble babes to strike and flee, and glory in their infamy; to leave red ruin in their wake, and call it war. They were not manned by warriors, but pirates of the air. They came to win from that foul thing that calls itself a king, the iron cross for valor—the wondrous valor made in Germany, that seeks to slay, unseen, and run.

Swift as a bolt from a banked up cloud, sudden and sure and unheralded, came the messenger of death from the blue-black canopy above the city where the Zeppelin flew—a dazzling flash of amber flame, a splitting roar of rending iron, a white cloud of poisoned smoke, a woman's piercing scream that cut through the night, pregnant with agony; a huddled up heap of blood-stained clothes, a rent and riven body, a tangle of tortured limbs, a mass of dishevelled hair glotted with blood, a wailing cry from the lips of infancy as soul and body parted—two little shattered hands for a moment thrown outward and upward as if mutely calling upon the great city for vengeance, and the vultures of the Kaiser passed on, and another feat of arms had been achieved, another petal in the wreath of German glory had been won in the great and gallant German way.

Defiant of Hidden Death

The city stood stunned for a moment, the death herald had come so suddenly—leaping like a wolf on the fold out of the womb of the night. They who manned the Zeppelin knew their devil's work incomparably well, they wrapped the great misshapen ship in vapor, and soared upwards, a searchlight flickered across the skies like a silver feeler from some giant octopus—another and another gleam of silver radiance swept the heavens, now high, now low. They met and mingled in a broad blaze, separated again and broke through the curtain of the night, near and far.

The vulture dived earthwards again—again came the splitting sound of bursting bombs—flame leaped out of a building, and flashed redly like angry eyes. firemen hurled themselves through the teeming streets like hurricanes unloosed, and fought the flames, the crowds swayed hither and thither—low and deep came the growling of a nation stirred to the quick, but there was no semblance of panic, no whisper of fear; even the women scorned to take shelter, but held their heads high, and raised clenched hands towards the skies. It was madness to stand there in the open, but it was splendid madness. The searchlights found the vulture, and guns began to speak, the shells burst above and below her; they fell short and turned in the blue like beacon fires at sea, blood-red against the canopy of the night. The vulture knew the danger, and soaring upward out of range, lit all her lights in cowardly mockery, and passed as she had come—leaving mangled bodies in her trail, bodies of babes and gentle women—old men and boys, but only here and there a soldier's. Some day by the Grace of God we'll hang William the Kaiser on the spot where those murdered victims fell.—John Bull.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lovell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter, and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly entirely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

NUMEROUS WAR SEERS STILL SLIGHTLY AT SEA

The Many Seers That Have Arisen With Spiritual Power are at Present in Wrong—Kaiser With the Rest

The war prophet is a wise man in his generation; for his predictions are for the most part as vague and obscure as his own identity. Even Brother Johannes, the mysterious monk who has been dust for nearly three centuries, and whose prophecies regarding the present war have set the whole world marvelling, only commits himself to one really definite statement. The great world war which he so graphically foretells, with its "eagles," its "leopard" and its "cock" as fighters, was to begin "towards the year 2,000." Even all his foresight was unable to fix the date within the greater part of a century. There is, perhaps, some excuse for these old-time prophets, who had to look so far ahead through the centuries, going astray, but one would naturally expect more accuracy from living seers who could almost hear the rumblings of war when they penned their predictions.

Kaiser's Fall Predicted

"In the month of July, 1914, a wise Indian foretold in January of that year, "all Europe will be overwhelmed by a war between the great powers. But in November a great Emperor will lose his crown, and hostilities will cease." A year earlier the Kaiser's horoscope was given in L'Echo du Merveilleux, and the fall of the German Emperor was foretold for 1913 or 1914, a prediction which unhappily was not realized. Nor was Dr Frank Allen, president of the American Astrological Society, nearer the mark when he declared that "although there will be some initial German successes, the last of these occurs early in November (1914)." Equally unhappy in some of his predictions is the astrologer who in the early months of the war published a book under the title "When Will the War End?" "From April 14th (1915), onward," he declares, "the Allies will score victory after victory and will succeed in driving the Germans farther and farther back to their own land. During the month of May great trouble comes to the Kaiser, who will be betrayed by his own people. From April to the end of May, Britain and France will put forth their greatest efforts, which will be of such a decisive character that the beginning of the end of the war should be seen during the month of June; and in July extraordinary efforts will be made to bring about peace."

Head Hun Also Wrong

Even the inspired Kaiser himself is no more successful in his adventures into the future than his more humble fellow prophets. On October 3rd, 1914, the Burgomaster of Weimar wrote: "The Emperor was with us yesterday. What he said had such a cheerful ring, and made us so happy that I should like the impression to reach Weimar, too. He ended with the words, 'Well, boys, before the leaves fall from the trees here, we shall all be back in the dear Fatherland!' " It is still possible, however, that his words of an earlier date may prove the Kaiser, after all, to be the Prince of Prophets. When he first saw Verestchagin's picture of Napoleon leading his sullen, starving, ragged hordes on its tragic retreat from Moscow, he turned to the artist and said: "In spite of that, there will be men who will want to subdue the world, but they will all perish like that." So may it be!

ONTARIO CATHOLICS AID WAR SUFFERERS.

Toronto News: The Roman Catholics of Ontario are this week making a collection in aid of the war sufferers in Poland. In every branch of the church throughout the province an active campaign is being conducted in search of funds, and it is anticipated that upwards of $100,000 will be subscribed.

"Reports that are reaching me point to a most generous giving," said Archbishop McNeil, to-day. "The situation in Poland is one that deserves the most hearty support of all peoples and I believe that the Catholics of Ontario will respond splendidly."

The results of the appeal in behalf of the Belgium relief were of a most gratifying nature, according to His Grace. A cheque for $7,000 has been sent forward, and it represents largely the givings of the Knights of Columbus and the Diocese of Peterboro.

Many Women Suffer FROM EXCRUCIATING PAINS IN THE BACK.

Do you ever feel that you must have some rest for that lame and aching back?

Do you ever feel that those shooting, stabbing, darting pains must be gotten rid of before you can get into condition, whereby you can attend to your household duties without a pain or an ache?

When the back begins to ache it is a sure sign that there is something radically wrong with the kidneys.

What you want is a kidney medicine, and a medicine for the kidneys only.

Doan's Kidney Pills know nothing but kidney disorders, because they are manufactured solely for the purpose of relieving and curing the kidneys.

Mrs. L. McLanson, Plympton, N.S., writes: "I am sending you this testimonial, telling you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills made for me. For years I had suffered so with my kidneys I could hardly do my housework. I used several kinds of pills, but none of them seemed to be doing me any good. At last I was advised to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. When I had taken the first box I found relief. I have used five boxes, and to-day I feel like a new woman. I cannot recommend them too highly."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

WHEN BRUTES MEET

When Kaiser Meets Sultan the Chief Talk Will be "Kultur" as it is Now

How impatiently the Kaiser must view each hour of delay incident to the resistance of a despicable little people, doomed to destruction because they dared to oppose German kultur! The Kaiser is eagerly looking forward to the time when he can embrace his royal brother, the Sultan. Afterward in hours of friendly converse, what charming little rivalries will crop up! How William will vaunt the exploits of his Prussians in Belgium! With what patriotic devotion Mahomet will urge the claims of his Kurds in Armenia! The eternal fitness of things demands that this planet should see Teuton and Turk in this splendid combination, and that two sovereigns who will be remembered forever for their common ideals, purposes and achievements should for a single instant be transfigured in the ancient home of civilization.—New York Tribune.

Every skilful farmer knows that the only practical system of farming is the rotation plan, and to a greater or less degree every farmer practices this system.

INTERESTING PARENTS TO SCHOOL

At least a part of Philadelphians have come to realize that the efficiency of their public school system depends in no small measure on the amount of personal interest taken in it by the parents of the children who attend the schools. Three wise persons have formed a Home and School League through which to manifest this highly commendable feeling, and they are appealing for the co-operation of all who consider of importance that the best possible effects from public instruction should be obtained.

The members of the league held their annual conference last week in the William Penn High School for Girls, and they listened to several carefully prepared addresses dealing especially with the needs of feminine pupils. One of these addresses was by Dr. Ann Tomkins Gibbon, the newly appointed Medical Adviser to the Public schools, and her plea was that parents should do what they could to aid the teachers in guarding the health of their daughters as a priceless possession.

Another address that was heard with notable interest was by Jacob Gimbel, whose topic was the relation of the public schools to business. Mr. Gimbel emphasized the desirability that parents should have clear understandings as to the object of the education received by their daughters and that the teacher should endeavor to discover the particular bent of each girl, and do what she could to fit her work to her capacity and inclination. "Home," said, "stands as a link between school and business, and in their attitude toward both institutions parents should discourage paltry criticisms of superiors, which ultimately degenerates into a destructively critical attitude toward work that precludes the possibility of satisfactory service and progress."—New York Times.

Praising Officer's Child.

Through the busy downtown streets a stalwart policeman led a little child by the hand.

A motherly looking woman paused before them for a moment. Then, in a sudden burst of sympathy, she bent over the child and kissed her.

"Poor lamb! she breathed sadly; "She looks so sold and starved like; and she hasn't been washed for a week. Some folks cannot be trusted with children, wicked, cruel things they are. Where did you find the child, policeman?"

"Find the child, woman?" snorted the policeman angrily. "I didn't find her at all. She's my own kid."

Applications, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. The bank will issue a provisional receipt.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch of any chartered bank in Canada, and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the January instalment.

Scrip certificates payable to bearer will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds without coupons.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons will be payable free of exchange at any branch of any chartered bank in Canada.

Holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds with coupons payable to bearer or registered without payment of any fee, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert, without fee, into fully registered bonds without coupons at any time on application in writing to the Minister of Finance.

The issue will be exempt from taxes including any income tax imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

The loan will be repaid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Recognized bond and stock brokers will be allowed a commission of one-quarter of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications which bear their stamp.

Subscription Lists will close on or before 30th November, 1915.

Dickens, Foxes, and the Gospel.

"Some years ago [illegible] a Louisville man, at a [illegible] the Legislature of Kentucky an effort to repeal the law offering a bounty on foxes' scalps was made, but was defeated by the appeal of a member from a mountainous and sparsely settled region. 'Do the gentlemen want to deprive my constituents and me of the benefits of hearing the Gospel preached?' he demanded (with indignation in his tone and overspreading his rugged countenance). 'We are all Methodists up my way, and our preachers won't come without we can give 'em chickens. We can't raise chickens unless the foxes are killed by somebody, that's sure; and there ain't anybody that can afford to spend their time hunting foxes and get nothing to pay for it. So, gentlemen, if you repeal this law you'll be depriving my constituents of the benefit of hearing the Gospel preached; that's the way it looks to me.' This reasoning was too much for the legislature, and for the time being the law was not repealed."

SEVERE BRONCHIAL COUGH

Yields Quickly to Vinol

Here is another letter we are permitted to publish for the benefit of Peterborough people who suffer from chronic cough, colds or bronchitis.

Mr. Ole Nelson, a stenographer, of Council N. D., says: "I suffered from severe bronchial cough. I had frequent coughing spells and became so weak it was hard for me to go to business. I tried cough remedies and doctor's prescriptions [illegible]. Through a friend I bought Vinol and after taking one bottle in no trifling trouble was better. By continued use, stopped the cough, built me up and I gained in weight."

It is the combined action of the medicinal elements of cod livers aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron and beef peptone, which makes Vinol a constitutional remedy for chronic coughs, colds and bronchitis, and at the same time it will build up the weakened, run-down system and re-establish strength.

Don't forget we return your money if it fails to give you satisfaction.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington

Of the many pretty designs for children's frocks none is more novel than the one shown in the accompanying picture. The waist is quite plain, except for the opening in the centre of the front. This is faced in with a flat, surplice vest to which the flat collar is attached. The sleeves are plain, with or without a cuff of shape corresponding with that of collar.

The skirt is box pleated all around, with a plain panel in the front. The closing of both waist and skirt is arranged at the side of the front.

For a school frock nothing could be better than a plain color serge with the vest of white pique or of a plaid silk. For more dressy frock velveteen could be used with plaid or striped silk for the vest, while a very attractive frock could be made of a single color in poplin.

The dress pattern, No. 7,434, is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. Medium size requires 2¾ yards of 44 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 36 inch contrasting goods.

This pattern can be obtained by sending [illegible] to the office of this paper.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25c.

A War Heroine

Miss Mary Davies is a war heroine. She won this distinction by exposing herself, with calm deliberation, to a death more frightful than that of the bullet - to a death by the horrible and loathsome disease known as gas gangrene. Dr. Kenneth Taylor, attached to the American hospital at Paris, worked out a treatment for gas gangrene by injections of quinine hydrochloride, which he felt sure would prove efficacious. He experimented with guinea-pigs, but the results were so doubtful that he did not dare to try it on a human being. Miss Davies, his assistant, had faith in the treatment, therefore, without Dr. Taylor's knowledge, she deliberately infected herself with gas gangrene bacilli, and then reported to him for treatment, which proved successful.

There are some things in this world for which not even the most profound rural philosopher can account to his own satisfaction.

"I never saw an animal move so slowly before in all my life!" cried an exasperated traveler in an Essex carrier's cart, behind which the clouds of a rapidly rising storm were growing blacker every moment. "Can't the horse go any faster? You had an excellent one fifteen years ago when I used to spend the summer here."

"That's the curious thing about it," said the driver, gazing first at his steed and then at the uneasy passenger in a mildly speculative way. "This boss is the very same identical hoss that I drove that summer. I don't know what on earth's the matter with him! He seems to have lost his animation."—London Telegraph.

His Distinction.

In one minute your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh will be gone.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh—Relief comes so quickly.

SECRET SKIN DISEASES

A famous physician states that scores of patients come to him suffering from skin diseases of most terrible form, which would have never passed [illegible] early stages had some suitable ointment been applied. Zam-Buk, which as a most powerful antiseptic and herbal germicide, applied to skin diseases at their first outbreak would save hours of pain and prevent disfigurement and scarring.

Every city contains hundreds of people who have some secret skin disease—some eruption, some blemish, some open sore, ulcer, or varicose vein. There is naturally a reluctance to reveal such blemishes and often they are neglected entirely or some internal and even outward containing mineral coloring matter is applied which only aggravates the sore places, and makes matters worse from day to day, week to week, the sufferer continues the suffer in the meantime enduring great pain.

Now all this can be avoided by timely use of Zam-Buk. Why other wise has Zam-Buk come to be the world's most widely used balm for that secret sore, those ulcers, that eczema patch, that open wound—there is nothing in the whole world of medicine better adapted than the herbal essences and juices that go to make up Zam-Buk. Not only is Zam-Buk a great healer, but it is a certain germ-killer and prevents infection, congestion and inflammation. If you have some skin disease, which has hitherto defied everything you have tried, don't daily longer—apply Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is so popular that it is widely imitated, so be sure to see the name Zam-Buk (protected by law) on the box before buying. If you are in doubt, buy from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, who will send a box post free upon receipt of fifty cents.

The Weeping Shells

In several of the French bulletins it was mentioned that the Germans used lachrymatory shells. This long word only means "weeping," and that is precisely the effect of the shells when they burst, causing soldiers' eyes to "water" and so preventing them seeing properly, and firing their rifles. These shells contain ammonia and mustard oil. The weeping shells, which give off a bluish vapor when they burst, also attack the nostrils and throat and cause violent fits of sneezing during which, of course, it is impossible for a soldier to use his rifle.

A Question of Safety

The humorous side of Zeppelin raids is illustrated by a letter from a soldier to his wife, living in London. He himself is in the trenches, but writing to her he says: "It makes me very sad to think what a danger you and the children are in London. Here we are pretty safe, but you never know when a Zeppelin may drop a bomb on you." The idea of a soldier on active service in the midst of shells and other unpleasant happenings, condoling with his wife in her unsafe position, is quite

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You can Bring Back Colour and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur

Women can darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell because it is done so naturally and evenly. Preparing this mixture at home is messy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can get the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw it through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and after another application or two it is restored to its natural color and appearance. You will also discover that dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though it is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

Golden Text—He that hath my word let him speak my word faithfully.—Jer. 23. 28.

1. Verse 1-4. What are some of the methods with which God has spoken His word in times past to His church and to the people of the earth?

2. What is the nature of the "word" which God is speaking to His church today, "lamentation" or congratulation? Why?

3. To what extent, if any, is the Christian Church responsible for the fact that the masses of the people are Godless?

4. Which is, probably, the greater hindrance in the way of the success of the church in her zeal and spirituality? Why?

5. Verses 4, 5. What is actually the chief thing the Christian Church is seeking today, to know God intimately, or secondary things? Why?

6. What proportion of Christians bank on God with the same absolute confidence as they do on a dollar bill?

7. What is the fate of men, according to the lesson story, members of the church or not, who put more confidence in "Bethel," "Gilgal," or "Beer-sheba" or in health, wealth or worldly wisdom, than they do in the living God?

8. Verse 6. What would you say is the chief defect or sin of the church today, and what her chief virtue?

9. Verse 7. What should be done by the church more than she is doing to prevent civic and national unrest?

10. In many of our large church congregations are found men guilty of political, social or business unrighteousness—who is it, or not, the duty of the pastor to preach so as to bring conviction to the conscience of these men?

11. In most communities are found men and women living disreputable lives, such as gamblers, prostitutes, liquor-sellers and lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. What would you say is the duty of the church and of all Christians towards such persons?

12. Verses 8, 9. What relation to the Almighty power of God will be exhibited in the lockstep of sinners to seek and depend wholly upon Him?

13. Which, as a matter of hard commonsense, is the richer, more safe investment, more right to feel comfortable, the man without God buying into a bank account of one hundred thousand dollars, or the man wholly trusts God, without any visible capital? Give your reasons.

14. Verse 10. Why did the rulers of the Jews hate Jesus and why does every preacher who reproves sin arouse and hatred by the same class of people today?

15. If pastors today of the churches quarrel had the fearless, faithful spirit of Amos and of Jesus in reproving sin, how much would the good they do?

16. Verses 11, 12. What is meant by afflicting the poor in any way with effects [illegible] that have upon character and upon his true enjoyment of life?

17. What are the [illegible] say to each other which we should repeat and often keep secret?

18. Verses 14, 15. What [illegible] God always [illegible] no amendment of life?

CHOICE RECIPES

POTATOES AU GRATIN.

Make a cream sauce of one rounding tablespoon each, butter and flour, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon white pepper, and one pint milk. Have prepared one cup buttered bread crumbs, and three-fourths cup chopped cheese. Have ready one quart sliced or diced cold-boiled potatoes. Butter casserole. Dispose of layer of potatoes in bottom of dish, add cream sauce, sprinkle with cheese; continue layers until potatoes are used, having cream sauce mixed through them. Bake in moderate oven until sauce begins to bubble through the crumbs and crumbs are delicately browned.

BEEF a la MODE.

Pieces of beef from rump or round, trim off fat or skin, rub meat on both sides with salt and pepper, same as you would a roast. Put meat in china bowl with three tips of garlic, six cloves, four bay leaves, two large onions diced, pour large glass vinegar over all and cover with plate smaller than bowl, so meat will be pressed down. Let stand three days and turn meat twice a day. To cook same: Heat very hot a good sized piece of lard, put in meat well drained, brown meat on both sides, take out meat, put large tablespoon of flour in kettle, brown slightly and dissolve with cold water to avoid lumps. Put meat back in gravy, put in the prune, cook on slow fire two hours; watch closely, add water when necessary; excellent sliced cold.

Fig Whip.

One-half box gelatin, soaked in 1 cup cold water. Chop fine 1-2 pound figs (can use prunes or dates), cook in 2 1-2 cups water. Add to gelatin and 1 cup sugar. Cook 2 minutes. When cool add 1-2 sherry, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Beat until it stiffens. Mold, serve with plain or whipped cream.

Pickled Peppers.

Twelve red peppers, 12 green peppers, 1 quart vinegar, 2 cups sugar. Cut peppers in quarters, remove seed and place in brine made of salt and water, over night. In the morning drain, place on stove and boil until tender with vinegar and sugar. Fill cans with same and seal while hot.

Baked Macaroni and Cheese.

One-half pound of macaroni broken and cooked in plenty of boiling salted water 20 minutes. Turn into a colander and pour cold water over it. Make a sauce of two cups of hot milk, 1 heaping tablespoon of butter, 1 tablespoon of flour and salt to taste. Put a layer of grated or prepared cheese in bottom of baking dish, then a layer of macaroni, then sauce, and repeat until the dish is almost full. Cover with bread crumbs and dot with butter. Bake till brown.

Fruit Chocolate Pudding.

Mix thoroughly 3-4 cup of sugar, 5 level tablespoons of cornstarch and 1-4 teaspoon of salt, add 1-2 cup of cold milk, then pour the mixture into 2 cups of hot milk, and cook 15 minutes in a double boiler, stirring constantly. Add 1 cup of seeded raisins cut in halves, 1-2 cup of blanched and shredded almonds and 2 ounces of chocolate melted and diluted with 4 tablespoons of hot water and cook five minutes longer. Flavour with 1 1-2 teaspoons of vanilla, turn into a wet mould, chill and serve with cream, either plain or whipped.

Mexican Chili Concarni.

Take a piece of suet the size of a teacup, chop fine and fry out, strain out cracklings and while hot put in one pound of Hamburg steak. Fry brown, breaking meat into bits the size of a pea. Strain one can of tomatoes into a kettle and put meat into it. Add one pod of garlic or three bird peppers, if pod is used remove seeds, one tablespoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of paprika and one tablespoonful of vinegar. Cook about one and one-half hours, until quite tender, season to well done. Add one pint of water and a can of kidney beans. Heat thoroughly and serve in cups of soup cracker.

"DEATH IN THE POT."

"Death in the pot." That sentence condenses the story of a tragedy. A little family gathering. A fine dinner cooked in the large copper kettle long disused, and the entire family poisoned by the accumulated verdigris. The story was told by the newspapers. The moral of it is, that the purest of food, put into a foul vessel, may become a minister of death.

If the stomach is diseased it is like the poisonous kettle, which taints everything that goes into it. The symptoms are irregular appetite, undue fullness after eating, distressed feeling in the stomach, of fluttering and sinking sensations, palpitation, dizziness, ringing in ears, sour or bitter risings and constipation. Not all these symptoms may be present at the same time, but any of them show disease in the digestive or alimentary tract.

The intimate relation of the stomach to the blood, heart, liver, and lungs makes it a medicinal maxim, "Start with the stomach." It is upon this principle that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery effects so many and such remarkable cures. It cleanses the stomach and the system is cleansed. It increases the action of the blood-making glands, and the body is enriched by the purified blood. It's a tonic and body builder that strengthens the digestive or nutritive organs and these strengthen the whole body by increasing the quantity and quality of its nourishment. It carries off the poisonous, effete matter. In this way it re-establishes health, banishing the bodily aches, which are but symptoms of the stomach's condition.

Get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery from any medicine dealer to-day, in either liquid or tablet form. Send Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., 50 cents for "Medical Adviser," cloth-bound and illustrated.

Constipation causes and seriously aggravates many diseases. It is thoroughly cured by Dr. Pierce's Pellets. One a laxative, two or three a cathartic.

Testing the Diviners.

Despite the fact that in numerous rural districts throughout the country there is still a simple, whole-souled faith in the divining rod and its mysterious virtues, scientific test has proved conclusively that the faith is wholly misplaced.

Recently, in a series of experiments conducted in France, the diviner's dowser and his rod were submitted to a simple but effective test that ought to prove convincing. Dowsers to the number of a score or more, professional and amateurs, were told to stand over a pipe buried a few feet underground. Intermittently, water was sent through this pipe and then turned off. The dowsers were asked to tell when the pipe was empty. The results were negative, the diviners proved to be poor guessers. The Society for Psychical Research brought in a verdict a few years ago against the ancient art of stab-bingness.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A VIRGINIA EPISODE

By HARRIET CAMBEY.

(Copyright, by American Press Association.)

During that period when the armies of the Confederacy and of the north were swaying back and forth in Virginia, while in command of the —th New York volunteer infantry, I was advanced one evening into territory that had been previously held by the enemy. Near me was a house, and from the inmates I received an invitation to supper. I accepted and found a lady and her daughter, the rest of the family, consisting of two sons, being in the Confederate army. I will call them Mrs. and Miss Bates. Considering that the blockade had deprived them of all table supplies except such as could be raised in the south, they gave me a very fair meal, made up of the only chicken left by the "Johnnies" and the delicious hot bread that southern women know so well how to make.

I was then twenty-eight years old and considered myself passably attractive to women. There can be no immodesty in my now saying so, since the wrinkled, white headed old man of today is not the same bodily person as the young soldier of 1863. I had seen those southern girls fall precipitately in love on sight with our Yankee boys and was not especially taken aback when Clara Bates showed a sudden admiration for me.

The young lady confined the expression of her attraction for me to her eyes and her speech. She would not permit me even to touch her hand. She seemed troubled at the proximity of two hostile armies, declaring that, though her sympathies were with the Confederates, she hoped they would retreat farther south. I set myself to work to draw from her any information she might possess of the enemy's intentions, and she told me that a southern general whom she spoke of familiarly as Bob and who had left her only that morning had expressed an opinion that it would be some time before he would see her again. Considering this to indicate a further retreat, I was about to take my leave for the purpose of reporting it at once to my general when I heard from the next room the words, spoken in Mrs. Bates' own voice:

"Kiss me again, Bob."

Darting a glance at my companion, I saw the blood rushing into her face. Then she started up to leave the room; but, grasping her wrist, I detained her. Immediately from the same room as before came a succession of smacks. Miss Bates made another effort to free herself, but I laughingly held her, saying:

"This is far too interesting to lose. Please sit still."

"Clara! Sweetheart!" came another voice, this time a man's, but sounding rather as if it issued from a phonograph than a human being, followed by a lot of unintelligible croaking.

Miss Bates writhed, but by this time I had both her wrists in my grasp, and she could not get away. I held her for perhaps five minutes, waiting for something more from the adjoining room. Presently it came in a masculine voice:

"All together! Surprise 'em! Two o'clock!"

At this the heightened color left my prisoner's face, and she turned pale. I would not now let her go on any account. It must have been five minutes before more came. Then it was:

"Goodby, sweetheart! Goodby! Goodby!"

There was a long wait after this, and I was beginning to fear there would be no more when I received another installment, still in the masculine:

Releasing my prisoner, I left her with a derisive "Goodby, Clara!" and, directing that a guard be immediately thrown around the house that there might be no communication from it with the enemy, I rode at once to the corps commander.

"General," I said, "I have just passed through an experience which I interpret as follows: I have been entertained by a southern girl who purposely gave me false information that the enemy in our front would again retreat. There I learned, doubtless from a parrot in an adjoining room, which had been used either for a council of war or from which orders were issued, that we will be attacked before daylight in the morning; though what morning I can't inform you. Tomorrow seems most likely."

"Thanks, colonel," replied the general. "We'll take the precaution to be under arms every morning."

It was half past 2 the very next morning that an attack was made on our right, re-enforced by artillery, followed by infantry, all along the line. But as soon as the enemy saw that we were under arms and ready for them they ceased firing and gradually withdrew. We followed and gained a substantial advantage.

What interested me after the fight was to learn the name of the Confederate general who attempted to turn our right. This I had no difficulty in doing from prisoners captured on the field. From them I learned that the general was one of the youngest and most attractive in the Confederate service, that he commanded a division in a corps commanded by his uncle and that his first name was Robert.

Ten years after the war ended, having occasion to visit Virginia, I sought out the house in which the episode had occurred. Miss Bates had married General "Bob." I wrote a note asking permission to call and was entertained hospitably by the couple.

This is new

The Peps way of treating coughs, colds, bronchitis and lung and throat troubles. How? Well, up to now people with these chest and throat troubles have swallowed cough mixtures, sickly syrups and the like, into their stomachs. Sore lungs and throat get no good by dosing the stomach. Peps work differently.

Peps are tablets made up of Pine extracts and medicinal essences, which when put into the mouth turn into healing vapors. These are breathed down direct to the lungs, throat and bronchial tubes—not swallowed down to the stomach, which is not ailing. Try a 50c. box of Peps for your cold, your cough, bronchitis or asthma. GUN'S SHORT LIFE

Big Guns Seen Demolished by Terrific Strain

Britain's modern naval guns, in spite of all the Germans have said against them, are unsurpassed for accuracy, power, and life. Naturally, it is not at present permissible to state expert opinion as to the number of shots that they can fire without injury, but we may rest assured that they are as good as anything that Kruppe can produce.

The best German naval gun is their eleven inch, which, in range and power, is almost the equal of Britain's fifty calibre twelve inch.

From this gun one hundred and eighty-four shots have been fired without any falling off in accuracy. General Bobue, in a report on these experiments, concluded that the gun was capable of firing two hundred and eighty shots without loss of accuracy.

The bigger the gun, and the heavier the charge, so much the shorter is its life. The famous seventeen-inch German howitzers, known as "Fat Bertha," are worn out before they have fired a hundred shells.

But as each separate shot costs $3,000, the howitzer discharges a considerable fortune in the course of its short life.

The chief reason why the modern gun lasts so short a time is that modern explosives are so enormously more powerful than the old black powder. Cordite, when fired, turns into gas instantly, gas at terrific pressure and of tremendous heat. Black powder burns more slowly and with far less heat.

The heat of exploding cordite eventually melts the steel and enlarges the bore of the chamber. Cracks appear at the junction of the chamber with the bore. There is a certain scoring of the whole of the bore caused by the enormous speed with which the shell—twisted as it goes by the rifling—rushes through the bore. Another thing that happens, though the cause is rather obscure, is the enlargement of the muzzle.

How different from the gun of earlier days. At Mafeking, during the Boer war, the defenders raked up an old sixteen-pounder naval gun which was bought from a native chief for twenty-two yoke of oxen.

"Skipping Sally," as they called her, was nearly a century old, a muzzle-loading smooth bore of the type that Nelson's ships used at the battle of Trafalgar.

In spite of her age she threw a ten-pound ball to a distance of rather more than two miles, with a charge of three pounds of powder.

The life of the old fashioned smooth bore had no particular term. Such a gun would fire thousands of rounds. All that happened was that the powder chamber became gradually enlarged.

8 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Consecon, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

Buying Army Commissions.

Four-and-forty years ago the old established custom of army purchase was abolished in the British army.

It had been instituted by James II.; his successor tried to stop the traffic, but the Law Courts declared it to be legal, and enforced the payment of £600 by a lieutenant to his predecessor. Later on a fixed sum of £400 for an ensigncy and £3,500 for a colonelcy was demanded.

But in 1871 the system fell with a crash, a Royal warrant declaring: "On and after the 1st day of November in this present year all regulations made by Us or any of Our Royal predecessors, or any officers acting under Our authority, regulating or fixing the prices at which any Commissions in Our Forces may be purchased, sold, or exchanged, or in any way authorizing the purchase or sale or exchange for money of any such commissions, shall be cancelled or determined."

Gunpowder as Medicine.

The use of gunpowder as a medicine was very widely advocated in the eighteenth century, and either taken inwardly or applied externally was held to be a specific against rheumatism and ague. In the Compleat Housewife or Accomplished Gentlewoman's Companion, a domestic pharmacopoeia published in 1742 appears the following remedy for rheumatism: "Let the party take of the finest glazed gunpowder as much as a large thimble may hold; wet it in a spoon with milk from the cow and drink a good half pint of warm milk after it; be covered warm in bed and sweat; give it fasting about 7 in the morning and take this nine or ten mornings together."

Fowl's 23 Days' Burial.

After thirty-two days' burial under a quantity of vetches in a barn, a hen has been found alive, says Mr. H. M. Olden, of Gambledown Farm, Romsey, Hants. The fowl was accidentally buried on August 16th and discovered when the vetches were threshed on September 17th.

KING ALBERT'S THANKS

Canadian Author Receives Letter of Thanks From Belgian King

Signal recognition has come to Dr. Thomas O'Hagan of Paisley, Ontario, in the form of a letter from the secretary of the King of Belgium, expressing appreciation of some verses written by him entitled, "I Take Off My Hat to Albert." The verses were originally read at a meeting of the Women's Press Club in Toronto, and a member suggested that an illuminated and engraved copy be sent to Belgium's heroic King. This was done through the medium of the Belgian Consul-General at Ottawa. The verses and the acknowledgment follow:

I Take Off My Hat to Albert

Albert, King of Belgium, is the hero of the hour;
He's the greatest King in Europe, he's a royal arch and tower,
He is bigger in the trenches than the Kaiser on his throne,
And the whole world loves him for the sorrows he has known,
So I take off my hat to Albert!

Defiance was his answer to the Teuton at his gate,
Then he buckled on his armor and pledged his soul to fate;
He stood between his people and the biggest Hesen gun,
For he feared not shot nor shrapnel as his little army won;
So I take off my hat to Albert!

King of Belgium, Duke of Brabant, Count of Flanders, all in one;
Little Kingdom of the Belgae stard with honor in the sun
You have won a place in history, of your deeds the world will sing,
But the glory of your nation is your dust-stained, fearless King.
So I take off my hat to Albert!

Here is the translation from King Albert's acknowledgment, which was in French:

"Office of the Secretary to the King and Queen of Belgium.

La Panne

"Sir: The touchingly delicate words you have found to express to the King your friendly feelings have very much moved his Majesty. The Sovereign whose attention has been drawn by the beautiful illumination adorning the verses composed in his honor, commands me to thank you sincerely and to say that he will be glad to keep this valuable souvenir.

"I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

"J. INGENBLEEK,
"The Secretary."

Measuring By Rifle's Bore.

One of the important things that every soldier has to learn, and particularly soldiers who intend to be scouts, is the correct judging of distances. An ingenious way by which distances can be told with a great deal of accuracy is this: If the bolt is taken out of the ordinary rifle the barrel can be used as a kind of telescope, without magnifying, of course, and the apparent size of objects in the field of view enables the soldier to say how far off they are. If, for example, a soldier on foot can just be seen through the barrel, then he is 300 yards away. At a range of 600 yards a soldier only covers about one-half of the diameter of the barrel, while at 900 yards he covers just a third.

A French Custom.

In France children place their shoes before the mantelpiece, in anticipation of a visit from Father Christmas.

What He Saw

"Ah, do tell me something about the play last night. They say that climax at the close of the third act was simply grand," she said.

"Yes, I am inclined to think it was very good," he replied, without any marked degree of enthusiasm.

"Can't you describe it to me?" she continued, beaming radiantly.

"Why, explained he, "the heroine came stealthily on the stage and knelt, dagger in hand, behind a clump of cane rubbers. The hero emerged from a large bunch of lilacs, and as soon as she perceived him she fell upon and stabbed him twice, and sank, half-conscious, into a very handsome aigrette. This may sound a trifle queer, but the lady in front of me came in late for the performance and became so intensely interested that she forgot to remove her hat, and that's how it looked to me."

Doctor Said Only Hope Was In An Operation

Was Skeptical When He Began the Use of Dr. Chase's Ointment—Relief Came Quickly

Here is a plain, honest statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Ointment. Between the lines of this letter you can read the gratitude which its writer feels. One does not suffer from annoying, distressing piles for ten years without appreciating a cure when it is obtained.

Almost every mail brings the report of someone who has been cured of piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Such statements are never used without the permission of the writer, and until we are satisfied that the cure is genuine and the writer a person of responsibility.

You may believe in operations for piles, and think there is no other cure. Write to Mr. Ingles, enclosing stamp, and he will gladly verify his statement. He will tell you that the pain, the expense, the risk of an operation are quite unnecessary. That relief and cure come with the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Ernest W. Ingles, Penticton, B.C., writes: "I suffered from piles for ten years, and though I tried all kinds of ointments and injections I really had no permanent relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. When I began this treatment I had absolutely no faith in it, for I had been examined by a well-known physician in Vancouver, and he said that an operation was the only thing that would benefit me. It was surprising the relief I obtained from the very first box, and now, after using four boxes, I am practically cured. My case was so exceptionally bad that I received no relief day or night, and for this reason the results are wonderful."

You can obtain Dr. Chase's Ointment from any dealer at 60 cents a box. If you do not want to risk this much send a two-cent stamp to pay postage, and mention this paper, and we shall send you a sample box free. We are so certain that any sufferer from piles will obtain relief by using this ointment that we do not hesitate to make you this offer. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Civic Supervision of Relief of Blocked Sewer Connections

Board of Works Outlines a Proposal by Which Future Work of This Nature Shall Be Done by Employees of That Department and Probably Financial Guarantee to Cover the Cost.

A NUMBER OF CASES

Several complaints were received by the Board of Works last night and it was decided to recommend a plan for the future similar business of this kind so as to protect the interests of the city.

Mr. W. H. Moore, representing Mr. Mark Snowdon, wrote that the latter had paid $9.55 for repairs to a sewer connection on his property at 575 Dawson street. The men were doing work on the premises, but the blockade was found on the street line. According to the city's present plan of dealing with these claims it is liable for the cost when the trouble is found to be under the street. Otherwise, the property holder pays.

Mayor Butler moved, seconded by Ald. Duffus, that City Engineer Parsons bring in a report as to the cause and its location on this particular blockade.

Mr. J. E. Emmerson, 297 Park Street, wrote that on three occasions he had to have his sewer connection flushed at a cost of $15.55. He believed that the trouble was partly due to roots blocking the sewer, and partly due to two angles in the connection. It was decided to obtain a report on the conditions referred to in this communication.

Mr. J. H. Reid, 261 Charlotte Street, wrote that following rainstorms water gathered for a time in the cellars of his four houses on St. Joseph Street. He believed that this was due to a change made in the drain crossing Charlotte Street.

Mr. Parsons stated that previous to the laying of the pavement in Charlotte Street the city had taken up the 6" cast-iron drain that crossed the street at St. Joseph Street. It was replaced by a 33 inch concrete pipe. When it was laid the old drain had a [illegible] street it was discovered that [illegible] Mr. Reid [illegible] Mr. Parsons explained that [illegible] requiring of a deposit to cover the cost, as is done when connections are put in.

The City Engineer was asked to outline a form to be used in all cases. The general idea is that the work of digging up connection trenches should be performed by city workmen and under the supervision of the engineer department, and that ratepayers will be required to give a guarantee of some kind to pay the whole or part of the cost when the difficulty is found to exist on the property of the complainant.

Mayor Butler remarked that sewers are being blocked by the careless throwing into them of old rags, bottles, etc., which will undoubtedly lead to trouble.

It was understood that this is only a tentative plan which remains to be worked out and which [illegible] in the number of petitions for compensation to cover work done by citizens without the full knowledge of the Council or the Board of Works department. In short it was by no means that amendments will not have to be made to the present system to meet the points which have arisen against it.

Hairs Quickly Vanish After This Treatment

(Helps to Beauty.)

Science has aided in simplifying the banishing of hairy growths from the face, and according to a beauty specialist the most effective treatment yet devised consists of applying a delatone paste to the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes. The paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. When this paste is removed and the skin washed every trace of hair has vanished. Be sure to get real delatone.

Havelock Hunters Were Successful

Each Party Secured Their Quota of Deer—New Open Air Skating Rink

HAVELOCK, Nov. 26.—Misses Olive Rose and Kathleen McNicholl were in Peterborough on Wednesday last.

Mrs. Alex. Innis of Toronto spent a few days in town last week.

Mr. Erman Hall of Misnitte spent his home here.

KEPT ALIVE BY PULMOTOR

Normal Breathing Not Yet Restored to Man Overcome by Gas Fumes a Week Ago.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Unconscious since last Friday from gas poisoning, Harry Rosenfeld, of No. 530 Boulevard, Rockaway Beach, a shoe merchant, has since been kept alive in the Rockaway Beach Hospital by artificial respiration. Physicians there say his case is the strangest that ever has come under their observation.

Mr. Rosenfeld, who was accustomed to sleep in a room in the rear of the store, is believed to have inhaled gas for several hours. A customer who found his store locked in mid-afternoon brought it to the attention of the police. The latter on breaking in the door found Mr. Rosenfeld unconscious, gas escaping from a heater, the flame of which apparently had blown out.

A pulmotor was used to restore [illegible]

INTERNED BOATS DAMAGED.

Essential Parts Removed and Hidden But Found Later.

Marconi, Nov. 29.—A despatch to the Syracuse, says the Italian government has learned that the machinery of several German and Austrian merchantmen which have sought refuge in Italian ports has been tampered with. Essential parts have been removed and hidden, but most of them were found and replaced. In one instance bombs were discovered. The machinery was concealed in a secret compartment constructed for the purpose.

It has been decided to take apart the machinery of these steamships before the vessels are used, to guard against the possibility that dynamite has been concealed in it. It is said that eleven tons of ammunition disappeared from the steamship Ezzelino when it was interned and that two tons of it were found after the vessel passed the dynamite search. In one instance bombs were discovered.

GERMAN DESERTER IN N. Y.

Stowaway On a Dutch Ship — Tired of the War.

New York, Nov. 29.—Herbert Schultz, late private in the German army, reached New York, a deserter and a stowaway aboard the Dutch steamship Noordendyk. He was a mutineer who had taken part in several scenes of the trenches and never wanted to see another battle. He said he was tired of war and would not return to Germany even if he could. He said he was glad to be in America and that he would not go back to Germany even if he could. He said he was glad to be in America and that he would not go back to Germany even if he could.

Schultz deserted, he said, after his father and brother had both been killed. He made his way undetected through Holland and Rotterdam, concealed himself aboard the vessel from Dutch inspectors and the British who held the steamer three days in the Downs. Forty-eight hours later Schultz crawled out from his hiding place and asked for food and water.

ANOTHER GERMAN CRUISER AT BOTTOM

THE ITALIANS MAKE FURTHER ADVANCE

ALLIES PREPARING NOW FOR AN INVASION OF BULGARIA

More French and British Troops Have Landed at Saloniki ---Will Try to Cut the German Communication With Constantinople By Striking Through Bulgaria--Will Relieve the Serbians by Compelling the Bulgars to Retire to the Defence of Their Own Country.

ITALIANS ARE MAKING FRESH PROGRESS

PARIS, Nov. 26.—The further landing of French and British troops is reported at Saloniki to-day as a sequel to the settlement of the controversy between the Allies and the Athens Government concerning the Entente Powers' campaign in the Balkans. Belief is general here that the Allies will not undertake an extensive sweep through Serbia.

German communications with Constantinople can be cut at Sofia as effectively as at any point in Serbia, and the campaign will have the additional advantage of striking at Bulgaria's vitals.

A Russian movement across Roumania can also be conducted as well against Sofia as into Serbia.

Army officers point out that an Allied invasion of Bulgaria will compel the immediate recall of the Bulgar forces in Serbia, compel an advance of the Germans into the same territory in defence of the line to Constantinople, and give the Serbs an opportunity to break the invaders of their own country in flank.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Heavy snow has fallen in the vicinities of La Fecht and La Thur, in the Vosges. The official war communique states to-day there has been no change in the position on the Franco-German front.

BERLIN, Nov. 26.—A sharp watch is being kept on the Russians and Roumanians. Newspapers openly discuss the chances that Roumania will give the Czar's troops right-of-way across her territory to the Serbian and Bulgarian frontier.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 26.—The German cruiser Frauenlob was sunk in the Baltic at the same time as the Undine, recently sent to the bottom by a British submarine, it was semi-officially stated to-day. The Frauenlob, like the Undine, was a protected cruiser of 2,072 tons, and carried ten 4.1-inch guns and had a full complement of 275 men.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—A French credit of one and a half billion dollars for the first quarter of 1916 was urged by Finance Minister Ribot in the Chamber of Deputies to-day. "The French financial situation," he told the Chamber, "is not at all disquieting. I regard the future with absolute confidence."

Subscriptions continue to pour in to-day to the "loan of victory," as Minister Ribot calls the new five per cent. bond issue. The rush is country-wide. The total has reached five billion dollars.

Nothing like it has been achieved in any of the other countries.

LONDON, Nov. 26. "Neutrals have failed, in my opinion, to seize a tremendous God-given opportunity to safeguard international law civilization and humanity," said Sir Edward Carson to-day in discussing the war before the American luncheon. Carson, who recently resigned as Attorney-General because he didn't consider the Government's war policy vigorous enough, did not specially name the United States. "All great luminous notes sent by neutral governments were perfectly sound in law and probably solved the consciousness of their own citizens," continued Carson. "I am afraid they have not been based on broad conception of the underlying issues of the present struggle. Neutrals ought to remember that if this war is allowed to end without triumph of the principles so dear to all free peoples, the very best that can be hoped will be an era of armed peace and of colossal armaments greater and more costly than ever." Though the ex-Attorney-General refrained from naming America in his criticism of the neutrals' attitude, in closing he did acknowledge a debt of gratitude owed by the Allies to the United States for such help as they have received from her, though he admitted that they had looked for more active support.
